Extract from a recent letter from Cork, Ireland: "I wish I could describe a young potato to you. The lowland rout is wavy and speckled and nowhereisome enough this year, but what worst one seeing as likes of the waterinuss and clamminess and utter worthlessness as food for man or beast of that genus is. High up in the foldings of the great mountains, on whose tops winter sits all the year long, are lovely little fields of potatoes, where goats and sheep feed by the side of plaster-fed streams, and the air is full of the little of the heather and of the sweet smells of the mountain flowers. The water of these streams has an odd color which no other waters have, a sort of milky blue-green, like an opal. Even on the hottest days a chilly air plays over their surface, and the mountains, were, of the great rock-fields above, from whose melting snows the streams are fed. And still the lower you climb, the greener grow the pastures and the more luxuriant the flowers, while the air is the clearer and more full of life, and it is so rich. Delicious milk it is, ice-cold and fragrant as if the animals which produce it had fed on dew-drops. Oh, Switzerland is a wonderful land indeed!

One day as I sat in a thicket of Adrossa, one of these lovely, lonely upper valleys, I happened to raise my eyes and noticed, high in the cliff above, a tall, narrow cave, quite as square, which looked exactly like a door set in the face of the gray precipice. Then one of the two loudly sings the word "chilla," which is returned by the other in a similar tone. The word is exchanged again and again, being commenced in a loud high pitched note and gradually run down the vocal scale till it reaches a low buss murmur. When it has become so low as scarcely to be heard, on a sudden it is shouted again in high key and the gamut is run through as before. This goes on for a very long while, the performers going through it as a strict matter of ceremony, and taking no interest in one another all the while, but looking round at the horizon or elsewhere during their vocal exercises. After a while various forms of the question "How are you?" and the answer "Well," are introduced; at last questions or other topics are brought forward, although now and again the "Illa" bursts out in the midst of them, but the series of notes in which it is shouted becomes shorter and shorter. At last the illla is gone of altogether, and ordinary conversation becomes possible. Strangers do not shake hands, but acquaintances do. The covering of the face when greeting or meeting strangers is considered as a most important matter of etiquette.—Nature.

THE SENTINEL.

WILLARD A. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, : : MICHIGAN.

AN OLD BOAT.

I passed a boat-body on the shore,
That will be launched on the sea no more.

Worn and battered—the straight keel bent,
The side, like a ruined rampart, rent;

For who would plaster such a useless thing?

It was cheerly one; when the shipwright's hand
Had laid each plank as the master planned;

And it danced for joy on the curling wave,
When first the new-born breath it drave;

And it felt the pulse of the well-tried stroke,
That rang on the ill-sought of the oak.

Oft it has carried home the spoil
Of fishers, tired with night-long toil;

And often, in summer days, it knew
The laugh of a pleasure-seeking crew;

Or launched by night on the blushing wave,
It has rescued a life from the sailor's dark grave.

It is useless now, and it lies on the beach,
Now no one remembers exactly when it happened Fritz's mother was a widow, and he was her only child. They were poor people, and had to work hard for a living. Fritz was a steady, faithful lad, and did his best. All day long he dug and toiled, fed; in the winter he carved wooden bowls for sale in the lower village, but work as he would, he was not always easy to keep the meal-bin full.

What made it harder, were the strange stories which every few months swept the valley and damaged the crops. Out of the dim sky, as it were, these storms would suddenly drop. It is not to be supposed that the people of the loveliest valley in America, and the prettiest farmhouses in the world, built in the sea-coast them, with steep roofs and hanging balconies, and mottoes and quaint ornaments carved all over their fronts. And the most peculiar and marvelous thing of all is the strange neatness of the grass and hay, which was accounted a sad thing by many ages in this valley. High up in the foldings of the great mountains, on whose tops winter sits all the year long, are lovely little fields of potatoes, where goats and sheep feed by the side of plaster-fed streams, and the air is full of the little of the heather and of the sweet smells of the mountain flowers. The covering of the face when greeting or meeting strangers is considered as a most important matter of etiquette.—Nature.

"Up there!" I cried with horror.

"Yes, madame. It was very rash. Any ordinary boy would have been dashed to pieces, but Fritz was very strong and active as a mountain goat. There are no such boys left now-a-days. One night, while his mother slept, he stole away, climbed as high as he dared by moonlight, took a wisp of sheep under a sheltering rock, and with the first dawn began to make his way upward, trusting every foothold, and investing cautiously, for though he loved adventure, Fritz was by no means a foolhardy boy, and had no mind to lose his life if will and care could keep it safe. But the climb was a terrible one. He had been in precipices before, but never on such as this. Only God's goodness saved his again and again. A hundred times he wished himself back, but to return was worse than to go on. So up and up he went, and at last, coming to that sheer brown cliff which you see there, and throwing himself breathless on a narrow ledge, he found himself close to the object of his desires. There, just before him, was the Little White Door.

"The sight restored his energies at once. It was a real door—that he saw at a glance, for there was a latch, and a keyhole and a knocker, all carved in the rock, and the door itself, as near a name in good German characters—Die Wolken.' I do not know the name in English."

"It is 'Clouds,'" I told him.

"Ah, yes; 'die clouds.' Fritz could hardly believe his eyes, as you may imagine.

"Pretty soon he grew bold, and seizing the knocker he gave a loud rap. Nobody answered at first, so he knocked again and louder, until the sound echoed from the rocks like thunder. At last the door opened very softly, and there came out three or four and shut the door again quickly. All was dark inside, but he felt a cool wind touch on his sweet, and a hand he could not see led him along a rocky passage into the heart of the cliff.

"After a while a glimmering light appeared, and the passage turned suddenly into a large hall, which was full of people. Fritz thought at first, but then he saw that they were not people, but strange rounded shapes in white or gray, who moved and bounded, and rolled playfully against one another in some sort. It was like a game of bowls, but the things they rolled to and fro on the floor were not balls, but—no, I will not tell you what they were, but you shall guess them, pray?"

"I didn't know who lived here, and I wanted so much to see," replied Fritz, shyly.

"You didn't? Didn't you know that you were there?" demanded the little Genius sternly.

"No, indeed. I didn't even know that you had a house."

"What? Not know that? Pray, where did you suppose you were when you didn't see us in the sky?" cried little Pink. "A house! Of course we have a house. Everybody has one. You've got a house yourself, haven't you? Why, we've lived here always. All we clouds. Sometimes we have great family meetings, when we get together and indulge in all sorts of fun and frolic, never going out-doors for weeks at a time."

"Oh, those must be the times when our goats all burn up, and the streams run dry, and the poor cattle low with thirst," said Fritz, suddenly enlightened. "So you are enjoying yourselves up here all the time, are you? I call that very unkind, and"—suddenly recollecting where he was, he hung his head, abashed at his own daring.

"I never thought of that before,' he said, penitently. "It was pleasant for us, and the time went fast. I recollect now that the world was looked rather queer and yellow sometimes when we have come out again after a long absence, but I grew green presently, and I did not suppose any one minded'—

"All this while a strange growling had been going on in a room opening from the hall, across whose entrance stout bars were fixed.

"What is that?" asked Fritz, unable longer to restrain his curiosity.

"That? That's only the North Wind," replied Little Pink, in a shocked tone. "We've shut him up, because he has no business to be abroad in the winter months, and he's a restless creature, and an wicked, that he will break loose if he can, and do all manner of mischief. Last year, about this time, he got out and blew a great storm, and made a fearful mess of it down below."

"I recollect. That was the storm that killed three of our sheep, and ruined the barley crop," exclaimed Fritz. "So you're naughty, are you, and made a fearful mess of it down below?"

"Pretty soon he grew bold, and seizing the knocker he gave a loud rap. Nobody answered at first, so he knocked again and louder, until the sound echoed from the rocks like thunder. "I recollect. That was the storm that killed three of our sheep, and ruined the barley crop," exclaimed Fritz. "So you're naughty, are you, and made a fearful mess of it down below?

"Why, where are you all going?" demanded the new comer, in a loud voice. "I've collected those stray lambs from hither and yon, and now I'm in for the day. What takes you out, pray?

"We'll not be gone a minute. We're only going to carry this boy home, answered the rest; while Little Pink whispered in Fritz's ear, 'That's the West Wind. He's a great favorite with us all.'

"Hallo! A boy! Why, so it is,' cried West Wind. He pounced on Fritz as he spoke, kissed him, ruffled his hair, kissed his ears softly, all in a minute. Then, with a gay, whooping laugh he vanished into the passage, while the clouds, raising Fritz, floated downward like a flock of white-winged birds. Little Pink lay under his cheek like a pillow. Softly as thistle-down touches earth they landed on the valley floor, laid Fritz on a bed of soft grass, and rose up to watch those stars, bright and smiling. Little Pink waved a rosy hand. Higher and higher sailed the clouds, then they vanished into the door, and the door was shut."

I am telling the story, as you see, rather in my own words than in those of the old shepherd, but you won't mind that. The truth is, I cannot remember the exact language he used, but so long as I keep to the main points of the history it doesn't much matter, does it?

In a few minutes Fritz recovered his wits and made haste home, for he feared his mother might be alarmed at his long absence. She was not, however, for she supposed that he had risen early, as he sometimes did, and taking a piece of bread in his hand, had followed the goats up the valley, breakfasting by the way. She met him, full of wonder at a strange thing that had happened.

"Such a queer mist filled the valley just now," she said, "I could not see the sun at all. I feared a storm was coming, but presently it rolled away all in a minute, and left the day as fine as ever. Did you notice it? I never saw anything like it before."

Fritz let his mother wonder, and held his peace. She would think that he had fallen asleep and dreamed it all, he was sure, in fact, after a little he himself began to believe that it was a dream.

But dream or no dream the strange thing was that it came true! From that time on the climate of the Unlucky Valley seemed to change. Years passed by without a single drought or inundation. When the pastures below were parched with thirst, rain fell on the pieces, for the water-lay over the earth, and did not run off, as waters generally do. The fertile valley was become a lake, into which points of land, fringed with bushes and battered trees, pushed themselves. It was a sad sight.

News of the disaster reached the lower valleys, and the kindly peasants flocked to help. But what could they do till the water subsided? Nothing. They could only say comforting words and return to their homes, leaving Fritz to his fate.

"He waited many days, then he formed a bold resolution. He determined to climb the cliff once more, knock at the Little White Door, and pl

XLVIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 30th ult. Mr. Logan, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported adversely on the joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of War to furnish tents, etc., to the Grand Army of the Republic of Wisconsin, there being no tents available for the purpose. A bill was introduced by Mr. Ingalls to provide for the sale of the lands of the Miami Indians, in Kansas. The Rescue bill for the protection of the Potomac Harbor and for the preservation of the canal and barrier in the Potomac River was passed. Amendments to the Indian Agency Appropriation bill were agreed to. The House passed the Senate bill for Deficiency Appropriation bill. Mr. Chyman reported the Army Appropriation bill, and Mr. Blackburn reported back the "Star Service" Deficiency bill, with the Senate amendments, and both bills were referred to the Committee of the Whole. The conference report on the case of Bradley vs. Nicholas, from the Second District of Arkansas, was taken up, and Mr. Bradley, the contestant, and Mr. Nicholas, the sitting member, made arguments each in his own behalf.

Bills were passed in the Senate on the 31st ult., among others for an international exhibition in New York in 1883, and to suspend for one year advertising in more than one place where necessary to make up the notice. The Senate then took up the appropriation bill which was taken up, and Mr. Hiscock moved an amendment providing that no Government printer shall receive a vacation or forfeit his wages or a deduction of pay, but may be supplied by Hooper, Carpenter, Edmunds and others, and was finally adopted. A motion by Mr. Hoar to strike out the clause relating to the appointment of reporters of the Supreme Court, leaving the appointments intact, was rejected. The House bill for the relief of Mrs. Mary Lincoln was passed. Several bills were reported on by the House, and the Army bill was passed. A resolution was adopted—18 to 21—declaring that compromises, War Department claims, entitled to be sent to the House from the United Arkansas District.

MAJORITY and minority reports were made in the Senate on the 1st from the special Committee on Election Frauds in the late Presidential Electoral Appointation bill was finally considered, the Democratic minority making a speech in opposition to the measure, and Mr. Edmunds closing in defense of the bill. It was then passed—43 to 21—nearly party lines. The Senate bill to amend the Revised Statutes was also passed and passed in the House. The Senate Star Service Deficiency bill was then taken up in the House, and the Senate amendments to the bill, to which the House did not concur, were agreed to

TAX TITLES.

For many years a tax deed has been considered as out of little consequence and as conveying no actual title to the holder of such a deed from the state and as a consequence every year has seen a large return of delinquent taxes to the state. Especially has this been the case in most of the northern counties where land is largely owned by non-resident parties, and this has been a great drawback to the development of these counties and a heavy burden upon the resident tax payers, who as a general thing are prompt in paying taxes assessed upon their property from the fact that if has been generally supposed that a large portion of the taxes assessed would not be paid, and therefore in estimations for the amount of the various funds necessary for county and township purposes, calculations were made for the deficiency likely to arise, and hence those who did promptly pay their taxes were caused to pay a larger amount than would otherwise have been necessary. Recent decisions of the Supreme Court of this state upon the question of the validity of tax titles have been such as will likely change the opinions heretofore held upon the value of such titles, and render the collection of taxes more of a certainty.

In the case of Sinclair et. Silsbee, decided in the October term, 1878, the court affirmed the validity of a tax deed, and in reference to defects complained of by the original owners of the land, says:

> Possibly some of these may have seemed to the owner before fatal, but the time has gone by, if it ever was, when the proceedings of taxing officers are to be criticised with microscopic nicety, and the exact line and method of every step examined to detect a departure from the law, however insignificant or whimsical. The policy of the law is that parties shall pay legal taxes, even though there may be some irregularity in assessing them, and that they shall complain to the courts of those errors only which may injure them. The possibility of contesting assessments upon grounds of the observance of this policy, and we do not feel called upon to examine in detail every irregularity which a record may show.

In the case of Hunter vs. Chapin, decided the November term, the court held that the Auditor General's deeds "are prima facie evidence of the regularity of all the tax proceedings, and that all taxes assessed upon any property in this state shall be presumed to be legally assessed until the contrary is affirmatively shown."

In a still later case, that of Blanchard vs. Powers, decided the February term, and ejectment case in which the defendant held possession under a tax title and which title was held to be good by the lower court and an appeal taken to the supreme court by the plaintiff, the judgment of the circuit court was affirmed. The plaintiff offered to show by the supervisor who made the assessment that he assessed the property at one-third of its cash value, but was not allowed to do so. The supervisor having made the certificate could not be impeached in a collateral proceeding like the suit in question. A distinction is made between proceeding to enforce or enjoin the collection of a tax and collateral proceedings like the case in question—the court holding that "the distinction is well marked between the right to impeach proceedings when so assailed" (for the purpose of enforcing or restraining the tax) "and when attacked collaterally." * * * * and "that the policy of the act of 1855," (under which this tax was laid) "as that of the later statutes, favors the stability and repose of tax titles, and discourages their being brought into question by collateral proceedings."

It would seem from these decisions that unless parties exercise contempt the collection of taxes, and showed some illegality in the assessment, prior to the land being sold for the taxes, that they would have no remedy, but redemption, after the lands were sold. In view of this it would seem to us that all that is necessary is that the assessment should be made legally so as to prevent the parties assailing the same and enjoining the collection, previous to their being turned over to the state and sold as delinquent. We think it highly important, therefore, that the supervisors of the different towns should see that their assessment rolls conform in every particular to the requirements of the law and as the time is fast approaching when they are to make their assessments, we would urge upon them the importance of this.—Cheboygan Tribune.

There never was any truth in the report of engagement of Ulysses Grant, Jr. and Miss Flood.

Wm. Wilson of Newton, Ia. died the other day leaving his entire estate of several thousand, for his former slaves.

It turns out that Senor Romero went to Washington simply on a sightseeing tour, and went home again with $800 in her pocket.

The Russian Prince Dondoff is about to build a palace near Florence, and invites the architects of the world to compete in designs.

Although 67 years old the queen of Denmark is so youthful in appearance that she is often taken for a sister of her daughters Alexandra and Thyra.

Senators and Representatives from California are not at all pleased with the selection of the commission to negotiate a treaty of labor with China. They claim they have badly treated, because it is a subject that their constituents are interested in almost exclusively, and they have been given but one member of the board, while we have been selected who know nothing of the situation or needs of California. They insist that no man can understand the Chinese question until he has come in contact with the race, and that learning by experience is vastly different from learning from theory.

French Canadians are leaving Montreal at the rate of sixty or seventy per day, their destination being Michigan or Colorado while others are destined for California. A large number of mechanics, chiefly carpenters, are being engaged to go to Colorado and other places to prepare lumber, etc., for new railways. They are guaranteed work for six months at remunerative rates in comparison with what they have been receiving. Fifteen cars full of passengers from New England left in one day for the Western states. The exodus has commenced earlier this year than for new years, and the numbers are increasing daily.

Nothing succeeds like success. Reinfavel by their success so far, the Liberals in the British parliamentary elections are likely to gain many more victories and it now seems certain that they will secure a strong working majority in the new parliament. The long rule of Beaconsfield and jingoism in Great Britain seems to be expiring and about to disappear in merited disaster and disgrace. The new Liberal government will have imposed upon it a delicate and difficult task to withdraw the British nation from the costly and mistaken positions into which it has been pushed into by Beaconsfield's jingo foreign policy. The settlement of the costly Afghan blunder without loss of dignity or prestige, a change in the Turkish policy to relieve England of her cumbersome, mischievous, costly and dangerous connection with the expiring Turkish power; the restoration of just and honorable relations with Russia, in place of the senseless and baseless Russophobia which has been wilfully established by Beaconsfield; the placing of England once more in cordial relations with all the European powers; the cessation of wasteful expenditures abroad in pursuit of elemental "glory," and the devotion of proper attention and the main share of the revenues to the relief of distress and the regrain of strength at home; the establishment of less pomp and show and of more justice, less glory and more business, these will tax the wisdom and energy of the new government severely. Under the illiberal control, England will probably cease her foolish attempts to run the affairs of all the rest of the world, and pay more attention to managing her own affairs wisely and in a business like way. There will be less attention to the distresses of the African savages and the Asiatic barbarians, but more to the distresses of the famishing Irish and of the unemployed British workpeople. The Queen may receive fewer new titles, but the people will be better cared for. There may not be so many new orders and decorations for the nobility, but there will be more work and wages for the industrious people. There will be less of foreign conquest, but more of home reforms. The British people may justly be congratulated upon this change in the situation, which shows to the world their returning good sense after a protracted period of unnatural excitement proclaimed and artfully kept alive as long as possible by political trickery.—Detroit Post & Tribune.

The Buck Hunter's Story.

"SPEAKING of duck shooting on St. Clair Flats," sighed an old citizen, as he took a seat in a gun store yesterday, "I don't think there are as many birds up there as there was 40 or fifteen years ago. Why, sir, the shores used to be just black with 'em, and they were so tame that you could knock 'em on the head."

Everybody agreed to think those good old days and ducks could never return, and the veteran hunter continued:

"I remember I was out one day in April. I got in among the bipeds, and how many do you suppose I counted?"

"Three hundred," ventured one of the audience after a long interval.

"Three hundred! Why, I always killed over a thousand every time I went out. No, sir, I counted over sixteen thousand great big, fat, young, delicious ducks, and then I had only counted those on one side of the boat!"

"How long did it take you?"

"I don't know, sir. I had no watch with me. Time is nothing to a man counting ducks. I counted aloud, and when the ducks were small I counted two for one. By and by I got tired of counting and got ready for the slaughter.

"How many did you kill?"

"Well, now, I suppose I could fix almost and say I killed nine or ten hundred, but I'm getting too near the grave for that. No, I didn't kill a blasted one, and that's where the strange part of the story comes in. When I began to lift that gun up those ducks knew what I was up to just as well as a human being, and what did they do? Why, sir, about two hundred 'em made a sudden dive, swam under the boat, and all raised on her port side at once and upset her! Yes, sir, they did, and there I was in the North Channel, ten feet of water, boat upset, night coming on and I in my wet clothes."

"Well?"

"Well, I climbed up on the bottom of the boat, floated five miles, and was picked up by two Indians. We bowed that about 1,000 to us myself, and have another curious thing comes in. Under the boat were 291 large, plump ducks. They had been caught there when she upset, and all we had to do was to haul 'em out and rap 'em on the head."

"Why, why didn't they dive down and get from under the boat?" asked an amateur duck-shooter.

"Why didn't they, sir—why didn't they? Well, sir, I might have asked 'em why they didn't, but it was late, a cold wind had sprung up, and I didn't feel like talking! All I know is that I counted over 16,000 ducks, was upset, captured 291, and have affidavits here in my wallet to prove everything I have stated. Does any man here want to see the documents?"

No man did. They all looked out of the windows and wondered if they could lie that way when they had passed three-score years.—Detroit Free Press.

An Irish Farm.

IMAGINE a level country, with few trees and no forests, cut up into very small, irregular fields by stone walls. It is of such land that Irish farms are composed. In most counties there is a great deal of boggy, swampy land, from which the farmers cut peat, which serves them as fuel.

An Irish farm is generally about as large as an ordinary village green of New York or New England, say, from two to fifteen acres. In some districts, a farm of ten acres is considered rather large, and it is often the sole support of an immense family—father, mother, ten children, and, perhaps, an old grandmother.

Boston Common contains forty-eight acres of land. It would make six good-sized Irish farms, which would maintain fifty or sixty human beings, half-a-dozen cows, a horse or two, some sheep, keys and many pigs, besides paying about three hundred dollars a year to the landlord, and something to the priest.

In good seasons, all this teeming and swarming life can just be maintained. But suppose a crop fails! Suppose the peat cannot be dried! Then what? Why, hunger and starvation, of course. And, remember, there are no factories or other business to fall back upon. If the crops fail, all fails.

If the crops of New England should be as poor this year as they were in Ireland last year, it would be a great calamity, but very few persons would go hungry on that account. The fish-[illegible] commerce and the savings-banks would go on about as usual, and the people would buy their food from other States.

Irish farms do not all lie along a high road, as with us. Farms are behind farms; and a great number of them can only be reached by a donkey path three or four feet wide. All the work is done by hand. The fields are dug, not plowed, and many farmers have no implements but a spade, a hoe and a turf-cutter, and no vehicle except a small donkey-cart.

The farm-house is generally one story high, and very often consists of a single large room, with perhaps a recess for a bed. It is commonly built of stone, with a roof of thatch, but many of the houses are made of earth, with a hard floor of horse-made cement. In this one room, the dairy-work is done, and all the family live, the pig coming in and going out as he pleases.

Are the people thus miserable and degraded? By no means. When the harvest is good and the rent reasonable, they are among the most cheerful people in Europe. And, in all the world, there is no land where the women are more modest and pure. The children are ruddy and robust. The houses are generally clean and neat. The people enjoy life as much upon those little black, boggy farms, that when they emigrate to America or Australia, they sometimes attempt the impossible. In many instances, a poor Irish girl among us never goes to bed for six months after leaving home, without crying a little for the old house of mud and thatch, and the old folks within it. —Youth's Companion.

Plain Facts for Thinking Women.

THERE can be little doubt that social manners, education and circumstances affect the qualities women derives from her material organization, and even efface the original character which nature has given her. In the simplest condition, the man labors with his hands and with his wife for mutual support and protection; the woman rears her children, cooks the food and conducts domestic affairs. Such, if the most primitive, is probably the healthiest and happiest condition for the female. The sympathetic and susceptible nature has here every scope for action without being shaken by rude and oft-repeated shocks. In civilized life, especially among the upper classes, everything seems combined to foster and increase the natural affectability of women's nature, and society renders her, already too susceptible by organization, the victim of the most painful and varied series of moral and corporeal affections. Medical philosophers have declaimed, and with good reason, against the whole system of the education and bringing up of women, which is directed solely to the purpose of making them personally attractive, and subsequently securing for them brilliant settlements for life at the expense of their health. Much might be written on this subject, suffice it at present to state that the useless and unhygienic but most young ladies lead, the total want of an intelligent interest and occupation, and the unnatural and artificial existence pursued, are highly calculated to injuriously enhance that natural affectability with which women has been endowed. The system of fashionable boarding-schools, whose anxiety to render their pupils accomplished and fascinating at all costs results in a forced and at the same time imperfect training, combined with injurious living, absence of exercise and other healthy circumstances, tends to increase the irritability of the nervous system, and to foster a precocious evolution of character. As this is increased, tone and energy are diminished. The girl returns from school a wayward, capricious and hysterical young lady, weak and unstable in mind, habits and pursuits. She enters into society and there her whole mode of life further contributes to her unfortunate condition. The competitions, disappointed affections, and vanity, the artificial excitements of balls, public entertainments, late hours and all the frivolities and pleasures of fashion tend in the same direction. The cultivation of music, poetry, novels and other inflammatory literature nourishes illusions contrary to the actual state of society. Her very dress [illegible] made on purpose to interfere with the healthy functions of her most vital organs, and to prevent the free play of muscular action essential to a sound constitution. Girls subject to such a regime, when their minds and bodies should be guided in a totally opposite direction, have one order of faculties alone exercised, and these, predominating over the reasoning powers, cause a host of nervous, vaporous, hysterical and hypochondriacal disorders.—Sanitary Record.

A Street Scene in Panama.

THE washerwoman's art is a very necessary, if not particularly elevated one, and no one with proper sympathy for a large, laborious and not particularly highly remunerated class would think for a moment of attempting to circumscribe their liberty or render their weary task more burdensome. However, we think it is not one of their inherent rights to occupy the streets with their clothes lines. To string them along above the sidewalks, where, burdened with their dripping load, they compel the passer-by to seek the middle of the streets, or, projected by long poles still farther into the street, they constantly endanger the safety of persons mounted upon or driving spirited and nervous animals, as well as sacrifice with ordinary travel. We recommend the matter to the consideration of the Governor and hope to see the nuisance abated.—Panama Star and Herald.

RICE AND APPLE SOUFFLE.—Boil two tablespoonfuls of rice in half a pint of milk; add, when soft, the yolks of two eggs, and sugar to taste; make a wall with it around the sides of the dish. Stew some pared and cored apples until soft, fill the centre of the dish with them, fill up the apertures in the apples with candied sweetmeats or jelly, and cover the whole with the whites of the eggs beaten to a stiff froth and sprinkled thick with white powdered sugar. Brown in the oven and serve with cream.

—Clem Kerr, who lives in Morgantown, N. C., has won local renown as a polo-climber. In 1844 he climbed a sixty-feet pole at a Henry Clay mass meeting and from its top waved the banner, and twenty-four years later he climbed a Seymour pole and took a drink sixty feet from the ground.

THE steamship Great Eastern is to be fitted up with new boilers and machinery at a cost of $140,000, to carry cattle between London and Texas. She is capable of holding 2,600 head of cattle and 56,000 head of sheep.

The Chinese in New York City.

THE great obstacle in the way of the growth of the Chinese population of New York city at present is the difficulty they have in procuring buildings for habitations and business purposes in any desirable part of the town. They are now scattered in all sections of the city, by twos, threes, and half dozens, in the laundry business, but their quarter is the lower end of Mott street. There their peculiar institutions flourish; there their stores are; there their fire-crackers and tin-foil bugs is flaunted glaringly upon red paper at almost every door. But the lower end of Mott street is an unsavory locality, disagreeably close to associations of vice, crime, and poverty, by reason of which the Chinese are unjustly but naturally compelled by mere proximity, to bear a worse reputation than they deserve. Yet even there landlords, especially Irish property owners, are becoming more and more unwilling to rent houses to them. Negotiations are now in progress with a gentleman who owns several large houses on Eleventh street, near Third avenue, and also with another who owns some tenement houses in Seventh avenue, a little distance below Greenwich avenue. In one or the other of these localities, the Chinese colony will probably be established ere long, and in course of time Mott street will, in all likelihood, be entirely rid of them. But they insist primarily upon low rents, and are averse to living at all beyond that point to which they are driven, which, in the case of most of them, is in down-town establishments. They are not unreasonable in the matter of requiring large accommodations for small rent. More of them will get along comfortably in a given space than any other people, and economy is their characteristic. The rent only cut up ordinary sized rooms, in leased buildings, into the most diminutive apartments by partitions, but where there are extra high ceilings they not infrequently run in intermediate floors. So, in the aggregate, the rental of a building devoted to them would doubtless be high, yet the presence of them by individuals extremely low. One recommendation in their favor, if San Francisco landlords are to be believed, is that they pay their rent, but the effect to that, on the same authority, is that after they have inhabited a house for some time it becomes so impregnated with the scent of opium smoke and the still worse odor of a peculiarly smelling tobacco which they use, that it is uninhabitable by anybody but Mongolians.

Here in New York there is not, as yet, any such overcrowding as in San Francisco, yet the manner in which they utilize space is really remarkable. Take Wong Ark's premises, for example. He is the principal Chinese store on Mott street, consequently the leading one in New York. It contains apparently somewhere near a million varied articles of the most incongruous character. There are an infinity of diminutive pasteboard boxes filled with Chinese medicines—gigantic pills, roots, herbs, barks, seeds, and such like. There are incense sticks, lade bracelets, strange exhibitions of dragons, sweetments in infinite variety, nuts that nobody but a Chinaman knows the name of, dried mushrooms, opium and pipes for smoking it, tobacco, tens of many kinds, some of them exquisite and much more expensive than any American corn-cobs; silks, fungus-looking black lumps, of which it is guaranteed that a small bit will make the dinnerest man immediately sober; sandals and Chinese clothing. In short, it is grocery, dry goods store, jeweler shop, drug store, millinery shop, and twenty other things, and yet it all comprised in the space of a small front parlor, with a narrow branch into a back room, necessarily small, so as to leave space for a well-patronized bologuss department. There is a little open space in the center of the store, just enough for three or four customers to stand in, but beyond that not an inch is wasted. Up a little table near the window stands the inevitable tea-pot and a number of little cups, preparation for a hospitality that the Chinese almost extends to every one. Behind the narrow little counter is Wong Ark himself, bland, courteous, deft in running up sums with the buttons of his Chinese abacus, ready to sell the smallest article, or cannel's hair brush with which he paints the mysterious symbols of his account-books, graceful and exact to the wiggle-tail of a worm, or the thread balance (on the steelyard pattern) of the minute quantities of opium constantly in demand by his customers. N. Y. Sun.

Small-Pox in a Letter.

THAT small-pox can be conveyed through the mail has been convincingly demonstrated. A few weeks ago a German family living in the West was afflicted with the disease, and one of its members wrote a letter, while afflicted, to a sister, employed as a servant-girl in a family in this city. Shortly after the girl was taken sick and a physician sent for, who pronounced the affliction to be small-pox. The disease had long ago entirely disappeared from this city, and the girl had not been where there was any possibility of contracting it. When the circumstances of her receipt of the letter from an afflicted member of her family was related to the physician, however, the medical man at once declared the origin of her disease. She was promptly removed to the pest-house.—San Antonio (Texas) Express.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

COOKIES.—Two eggs, one cup sugar, a little more than one-half cup butter, three tablespoonfuls of sour cream, one large teaspoon soda.

EXAMINE your strawberry beds during the autumn season, and if you find them disturbed by grubs scatter common salt among them freely. Ashes are also good. The salt not only destroys the grub but is most excellent for the vines.

SALTS it, and have the garden attended to. Give your wife and family the luxury of plenty of fresh vegetables. By having a good garden you will save money. Give your boys and girls healthful employment, and you will feel better satisfied with yourself and all around you.

FARMER'S sons and daughters should become acquainted with botany, learn all parts of a plant, the relations of one part to another, and of each to all. They should also learn what is the appropriate food of different species and the conditions under which they appropriate their food.

NEVER wait for a rain to set plants in a garden. Having the ground well prepared, open, with hoe or trowel, holes where the plants are to be set, pour a quart of water into each hole and put in the plant before the water sinks, drawing the fine earth into the water. This settles lumbly around the root of the plant, and if covered with dry earth will not bake.

STUFFED EGGS.—Boil the eggs hard; cut them in two lengthwise, and remove the yolks, which chop, adding to them some cooked chicken, lamb, veal or pickled tongue chopped fine, and remove the yolks, smooth them and press the whole together; moisten with the yolk of raw egg or boiled cream; stuff the egg-whites, smooth them and press the two halves together; dip them in beaten egg and bread crumbs twice. When just ready to serve, dip them in a wire basket into boiling fat, and when they have taken a delicate color, drain. Serve for lunch on a napkin and garnish with parsley or any kind of leaves or nerve with mushrooms.

TO WHITEN FLANNELS.—How shall I restore the color to my flannels? is a question often asked by housekeepers whose clothes have been ruined by the bad treatment of indolent, incompetent washerwomen. A solution of one and one-half pounds of white soap and two-thirds of an ounce of spirits of ammonia, dissolved in twelve gallons of soft water, will impart a beautiful and lasting whiteness to any flannels dipped in it, no matter how yellow they may have been previous to their immersion. After being well stirred round for a short time, the articles should be taken out and well washed in clean cold water. For washing black or navy blue linens, the following recipe is said to be an excellent one: Take two pints of ungrated into tepid soft water (after having them washed and peeled), into which a teaspoonful of ammonia has been put. Wash the linens by rule, and rinse them in cold blue water. They will need no starch, and should be dried in the shade on the wrong side. It is said that an infusion of hay will preserve the natural color in buff linens, and an infusion of bran will do the same for brown linens and prints.

FRUIT SAUCES.—The French bottled apricots, greengage plums or strawberries make delicious sauces for a Bavarian cream, blancmange, chestnut-puree or corn-starch pudding. They may simply be poured around the pudding on a platter, or the juice may be thickened by boiling it with a very little corn-starch, then adding the fruit to it when cold. The American canned Maydake cherries (shriveled) make a good pudding sauce. Boil the juice, and add the slight corn-starch thickening and a little sugar; when cold, add the cherries. It makes a good sauce poured around these puddings. Fresh red cherries, stewed, sweetened, passed through a sieve, and slightly thickened with corn-starch, make a prettier pudding sauce. The Colorado wild raspberries make a fine berry pudding, with the same kind of liere sauce around it. Marmalades and preserves, if not too stiff, make pretty garnishes as well as good sauces. For strawberry sauce take half a cupful of butter, one cupful of sugar, the beaten white of an egg, and one cupful of strawberries (mashed). Rub butter and sugar to a cream, add the beaten white of the egg, and the strawberries thoroughly mashed.

Draining Wet Land.

THERE are three methods of draining wet land worthy of notice. The first and cheapest is open draining or ditching. This method carries off superfluous water the most rapidly, and on very cheap lands is the only advisable method. Second, tile draining, as will for illustration, take a farm of low land such as exists in any quantity in all the Western States. The undrained elevation on a half section is only five feet. The water line during half of the year is within two or three feet of the surface. In answer it drops down two or three months to six, eight, ten or many more inches. By cutting ditches two feet deep with a seven-inch scraper, and drawing toward the lowest part of the land, the average water line may be lowered several inches only—less than that the water line on such land can be lowered, to the depth of twelve inches, increases its agricultural products one-sixth.

Stake out the ditch where desired, throw out with a large plow and a strong team as deep as possible, the first furrow. Throw another furrow from the first one, keeping only a team sufficient to hold the plow steady; throw out this core with a spade, ten inches deep. This is the first step toward a good open drain. Deepen it as time and circumstances permit. The cost of this first operation, in land free from stones, has not with us exceeded two cents a rod. And by it we have drained acres that before had half-inch water eight months in the year. Fences, if needed, can now be placed on the bank thrown up. The osage orange and black thorn grow better on these banks than on the undrained soil low ground. But the ground may be rolling with low places surrounded by higher ground, which keeps the water from running off. If this high ground be many feet high, drainage can only be effected by cutting through the high ground, and putting in tiles, boards, ashapeil, poles, rails or stones, where they abound, and covering. If tile is not feasible and it is decided to cut through the ridge, resort must be had to vertical draining. Bore with an auger a two-inch auger will do, and the larger the better, down through the clay subsoil, to the underlying strata of water gravel, as soon as this stratum is reached the water will sink into the hole and disappear; if the hole is kept open. Any cheap lining of wooden tubing will suffice. Underdraining this, though costly, pays for an amount named in the notice will fall due on a given day, and to which his prompt attention will be expected. Now there is no design to be audacious for these chaps to undertake, and, whether it be the census trick or some other equally bold, the farmer should show them the door early in the interview. If they insist you and attempt an interview inside of gate, shut down close to the gate, with a hint about a big dog in the back yard, always promptly at hand when out. If they climb the fence to you while in the field, point to the way back over the fence, and if the dog is not at hand quiet significantly to the toe of your stogy boot, or hint that you [illegible] to take a man of his size by the seat of his breeches.—Western Farm Journal.

Swindlers Abroad.

NOW THAT that class who get their living by their wits are apprised of the fact that farmers are reasonably flushed and quite likely to have a little money on hand, or a good name at the banks, they are on the alert. Nearly every loft in the large cities is supplied with shafting, which by steam power in the basements. Over the pulleys of this shafting, belts go to rooms here and there, in which every sort of establishment device, and a sprinkling of useful things are made. Look at the advertisements in a city daily and read the inquiries for partners "to manufacture something or other to sell," on which the profits are reported to be all the way from one hundred to three hundred per cent. To sell the goods of these upper lofts, especially the catch-penny portion, men with oily tongues are sent out, and their large and [illegible] pull at the bell rope is a familiar sound to housewives, the country over. For there is hardly a hamlet, or nook or corner into which their audacity has not been thrust. In the absence of something to sell, they are not at a loss, as for instance, the recent new dodge brought out in Eastern State. A well dressed chap with a business air, drives up hurriedly to a farmer's door, representing himself as employed by the Government to obtain the agricultural statistics for the census. He demands to know the number of cattle and other stock, acres under cultivation, kind of crops, etc. Having filled up his blank in a very business-like manner, he asks the farmer to sign the statement, first running over the figures, that the farmer may see that no mistake is made in the numbers entered in the blank. This is merely done as a blind. Diverting attention from the fact that there is a space just above the signature giving room to fill in a note of hand. In a month or so the farmer gets notice from a neighboring bank that the note for an amount named in the notice will fall due on a given day, and to which his prompt attention will be expected. Now there is no design to be audacious for these chaps to undertake, and, whether it be the census trick or some other equally bold, the farmer should show them the door early in the interview. If they insist you and attempt an interview inside of gate, shut down close to the gate, with a hint about a big dog in the back yard, always promptly at hand when out. If they climb the fence to you while in the field, point to the way back over the fence, and if the dog is not at hand quiet significantly to the toe of your stogy boot, or hint that you [illegible] to take a man of his size by the seat of his breeches.—Western Farm Journal.

Before Schastopol.

I REMEMBER four of the finest men in our regiment belong to No. 1 tent of that company. One night, wrapping their dingy blankets about them, they lay down together in their place near the slit in the tent-side called a door. That night the ice-king seized all nature with a terrible grip, and in the morning, when the starving, half frozen bugles sounded the call to arms, a great number were missing and lines [illegible] among the rest. The sergeant of the company who called the roll that morning endeavored, first by nudges, and then by kicks, to arouse them. Pulling the blanket from the face of the form nearest the door, he started back, exclaiming, "My God! they're dead!" They were dead, and frozen tight to the ground, too, never to rouse till the last "fall in" is sounded by the angel trumpeter.—Boston Commercial Bulletin.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

MR. J. M. BAILEY (the Danbury News man) has written a play for Sol. Smith Russell.

THE King of Sweden has turned author, and has just published a youthful rendering of the legend of Lohengrin.

GOVERNOR COLQUITT, of Georgia, is described as a working Christian—a man who carries his religion into his daily life. It is said that probably no man in Georgia gives so much toward the support of church and charity as does Mr. Colquitt.

MISS JULIA SMITH PARKER, of Glastonbury, Conn., who was married for the first time at eighty-seven years of age, signs her letters with her maiden name, Julia E. Smith. She says she bore that name too long to relinquish another as her own.

MR. R. H. DANA III the young gentleman recently married to Mr. Longfellow's daughter, was the most noted athlete in his class at Harvard. Since leaving college he has broken down physically, and he just made a journey [illegible] Cape Horn for the recovery of his health.

MR. SIDNEY LANIER, musician as well as literateur, has a paper in Scribner for April, which is entitled "The Orchestra of To-day," and is a clear and catechetical account of the instruments and differences of the orchestral instruments. Incidentally, Mr. Lanier advocates the training of women for orchestral work.

MR. YATES says that there seems to be no end to the literature of quarrels among authors. The last, which evokes much amusement in literary circles, is not even a novelist and a journalist. The story goes that a book libel has drawn the journalist's portrait, and has made him the villain of a novel now passing through a monthly magazine.

MISS BERTHA VON HILLERN, the pedestrian, is said to have been adopted as a daughter by a wealthy couple in Boston, who take her into the best society and are permitting her to study art. The money which she earned by her pedestrianism—several thousand dollars—is in the bank where it was deposited three years ago. Her adopted mother took her home immediately upon the completion of her walk in Boston.

SEVENTY-TWO of the paintings in the J. A. Harper collection, realized $49,646. Zamacois' "The Disputed Dance," starting at $1,000, took in $2,500. Schreyer's "The Advance Guard," brought $1,800; and Meissonnier's "Visitors," $2,600. Corot's solly, on which the profits are reported to be all the way from one hundred to three hundred per cent. "Return to the Farm" was sold for $2,600. A water-color of Fortuny's sold for $25. The total amount realized from the sale was $208,586; and the last picture sold brought the highest price of all:—Van Marcke's "Landscape and Cattle"—for $3,725. Perrault's "Education at Age" brought $3,600.

MISS NELSON, the actress, is a rich woman. Her fortune, it is said, will be $250,000 at the end of her present tour, without reckoning the market value of her diamonds, which represent, at jewelers' prices, $100,000. If she chooses to keep on acting, year in and year out, she could have $200,000 more, as the same writer asserts, in about three years. The one hundred and ten performances given during the present tour have brought her a upward of $45,000, and she must give forty more, besides twenty-eight California trips—sensations, by which she will make $20,000.

There is one boy in this city, says the Rochester Democrat, whose brain is filled with a pure and calm delight. For some offense his father took his dad away from him in the early part of the winter, with the promise that he should not have it again until another season, and the boy confidentially, remarked to a friend that "this warm weather was the best rigon the old man he had ever heard of."

Murder and Suicide.

The following account of a murder and suicide we take from an extra issued by the Ludington Tribune:

In the Tribune of the 23d inst. we closed at length upon the Deygenkolb mystery in Ludington, perhaps more mysterious than elegant. It was serious affair to charge a man with having committed murder, but we did make this charge against Adam Deygenkolb, in as plain a manner as possible, in the following article published a few weeks since:

"In the shores of Ludington county is it said that the rumors affecting the disappearance of Mrs. Emma Deygenkolb, of Ludington township, still remain unsolved, and as far as we can learn, no great attempt has been made to discover her fate, about Whitsuntide, or at least to discover her body and learn the manner of her death.

"That woman was married to a German named Adam Deygenkolb several years ago, and for some time lived with her husband in the village of Newlapeer. After a time she became divorced. Her husband soon thereafter married one of the neighbors to have been cleared by the bridal ceremonies of his former wife of several times fleeing to the neighbors for fear that he would take her life. It is generally known in the communities where they have lived that he was in the habit of beating her unmercifully and cohesively, before her. After a time her money is assumed such a hypnosis to necessitate her removal to the new town in Kalamazoo, where she is reported to have come to grief when she will send back no cards. At she became rational she often expressed a wish to return to the county, but was averse to again live with her husband. The couple again lived together however, on his homestead in the southwestern portion of Loudanni township, for a few months, but their domestic life was again the scene of strife and contention. Last summer she left her home and entered a livelihood doing house work. During the winter she again returned to her husband and about the middle of December last she disappeared from her home, and her whereabouts are yet unknown to him.

"Since this time no trace of her has been discovered. She has as effectually vanished as though she had indeed ascended to another world with as much mystery behind.

"The story of Adam Deygenkolb in connection herewith is "fishy," to say the least. While it is possible, it is very improbable that she could wander off in a fit of mental aberration and perish, without having seen a team or heard a human voice. In view of all the facts and circumstances—of the fact of his being in the habit of cruelly beating her, of their living unhappily together, of his repeated ly wishing that she was dead that he might again marry, of his apathy in instituting a search for her, and of many other like facts and circumstances—it is very probable that some time during the month of December last Adam Deygenkolb, in a fit of passion, murdered his wife, and has so far concealed every evidence of the crime as to escape detection!

"We hope this is not the case, but circumstances attending warrant the assumption.

"Something should be done about this. Thorough search for the body should at once be instituted, although it entail some expense upon the county. It is a disgrace upon this commonwealth that this affair should longer remain shrouded in mystery and if a crime has been committed the perpetrator go unpunished.

Emma Deygenkolb was a woman in the prime of life, full of vitality, and used to making her presence felt. The theory that she perished from cold and exposure is fallacious, when we take into consideration the fact that a few miles travel in any direction would bring her to settlements, where she would have been seen and cared for.

If Lueknan county is too poor to offer a liberal reward for the clearing up of this affair, and the discovery of her body, dead or alive, we propose circulating a subscription paper to raise such a reward.

We hope the county officers will do their duty in this matter."

This article had the desired effect. On Thursday of last week Ralph Pelon went to Northport and arrangements were then made to institute a thorough search for the missing woman on the following Monday. Accordingly yesterday morning about 60 persons assembled at Deygenkolb's homestead. He was at home, and was very communicative as to the mystery of her disappearance, offering to aid in the search. Nothing suspicious was seen until they discovered a well upon the premises of Frank Kowarshik near Deygenkolb's house, that had been filled up. It was determined to make a thorough search in this well. A portion of those present went to the well and others returned to Adam's house, he with them. He was asked to help clear the well, to which he assented, and started, shovel in hand. But when half the distance, he returned as he said to change his clothes. He went up stairs, and soon a heavy fall was heard by those below; who rushed up to find him weltering in blood, with his throat cut from ear to ear. He lived but a moment. Soon those removing the earth from the well discovered a shoe with Mrs. Deygenkolb's name on it and soon her body was searched, 15 feet below the surface, and it was found that her throat was cut and her head gave evidence of having been bruised. The body was considerably decomposed. Justice W. W. Barton impaneled a jury and an inquest was held on the two bodies. A verdict was rendered in accordance with the facts as above stated. Much excitement prevails in this portion of the county. The bodies are to be buried at Northport to-day. They leave a son 10 years old.

It is probable that arrests will be made in connection with this horrible affair.

The Deygenkolb tragedy is one of the most terrible in the annals of crime. The appearance of the body of the woman shows that she was probably murdered in the nighttime, as she had on only a calico wrap. The murder came very near escaping detection, for some time to come, at least.

The lawsuit of Lewis & Ackerts drug store has been remand to a party named Joseph Smith, who will fit it up and open a restaurant therein.

Banks, April 7, 1880.

ED. SENTINEL:

In your last issue I noticed an item that ought to be corrected.

You say there are less than a baker's dozen of Greenbackers in the Town of Banks. Now, sir, the "mesmerized relic" took some pains Town Meeting day to find how many Greenbackers there were in town. I saw only about half the voters, but found there were over twenty copies of genuine out and out Greenback papers taken, and have the pleasure of informing you that I have a list of thirty-four subscribers for the Chicago Express to send this mail. [As a jim up good greenback paper we recommend the Advocate.—ED.] He may not be very comforting to you, but it comforts the "old relic."

Now, I think you ought not to print such wild, extravagant statements. It looks as though the impression you intend to convey, that we are all in it, and that the money scare is "thurned out of sight." You may as well shut out the light of the noonday sun as to blind the people to the money issue much longer. The cowardly Congress—only did they not follow the advice of Horace Sherman Bayard & Co., and demonetize greenbacks and silver? We think it is because they know it would lose us the next election. So just think Hayes, in saying "he didn't mean any thing" in his message when he attempted the retiring of greenbacks, and those "thorned the money issue out of sight?" I would be ashamed to insult the intelligence of a lieutenant with such bosh. "Some one tell us what egregious fools we are." Why, haven't you and all the rest of the capitalistic press been telling us that for years?

Now, friend Smith, "the bantum" intends to make a still livelier for the old democratic "ox" upon its overthrow you that I am a full "fledg'd" and not all there is left of the Greenback party in Banks.

Yours,

H. W. BEACH.

[There is no better evidence of death than a putrid condition. The fallacious theories of the irredeemables stink in the nostrils of honest folk of both the leading parties as the rankest carrion. They have no argument left that has not been crippled or destroyed by events in the financial progress of the Nation since the calamitous infliction of the republican party upon the country. They are bootless and unarmed, and have only the occupation left of railing against capital, and trying to mystify some poor ignorant devil about "them bonds." What they want is more than we know, to be frank. Instead of the universal disaster which they predicted would follow the honest policy of specie resumption we have had steady and substantial increase in National prosperity, and the applause of the world. Right headed men choose to train in other company on the money question than the Butlers, Pomeroys, Kearneys and Shujues of demagogism, bimetallism and fraud. For Greenbackers to persist in their foolish fancies in the face and eyes of events transpired and transpiring, is simple to an idiotic demonstration.—EDITOR.]

"So near and yet so far" was the lamentation of our defeated candidates; but they have been consoled, and the successful ones are about over their exercies so that things are in an equilibrium again.

A Teutonic war is on our midst last Tuesday came very near unsettling the even tenor of our people; but through a successful arbitrament peace was declared in less than two hours, with no other damage than one schlocken the other over the head mit a glub.

We noticed Will Getz locked very solemn for the last three or four days, and ascertained the cause to be the responsibility of a little daughter.

South Arm Items.

Spring has arrived at South Arm, and we can prove it. How? Why, because the farmers are plowing and preparing the soil for the reception of various kinds of seed, in the production of which South Arm stands on a parallel with many of her "would like-to-be" superiors; and we have a stronger proof that spring is here. The air is full of that beautiful color called "leek balm," which is a sure evidence.

We are sorry to say that S. G. Isaman has not been well since his return from Port Huron. He suffers a great deal from neuralgia in his legs.

Ellis Vandercreek has purchased of S. G. Isaman 80 acres of land, located on Sect 26, in this town, paying $7. per acre.

Our esteemed fellow townsman Peter H. Lachair, the jeweler, we are sorry to announce, is going to leave soon for famous Leadville. He intends stopping at all points between here and his destination and work at his trade, when he thinks he shall realize from $10,000, to $12,000. Learn a trade and, "Go west young man."

One of the South Armers sold a resolver the other day, and took it home, but not until he had used his neighbor's dog for a target.

That is what we call cheek.

M. W. Roberts, of Kalamazoo, arrived in town Saturday, and will proceed at once to erect a cottage on the Resort grounds for P. Ranney, President of Kalamazoo village, and one for V. Van Vleck, of Ionia.

The Chamberlain building, on the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets, has one year, who will open a boarding house therein.

Mr. Eaton, Overseer of Highways has the work of grading Bridge street well under way. The street will be graded and graveled two rods wide the entire length.

It is expected that over a dozen cottages will be erected on the Resort this summer. Among those to build are Prof. Olney of the Michigan University, J. N. Howland, of Ypsilanti, and C. Y. Cook.

The Summer Resort.—At a meeting of the Charlevoix Summer Resort Association held at Kalamazoo on the 19th the following officers were elected:

President.—Kendall Brooks.
Secretary.—Geo. E. Hardison.
Treasurer.—Samuel A. Gibson.
Directors.—H. W. Page, S. A. Gibson, J. L. Schring, H. Weimer, S. Brooks.

We are informed that much enthusiasm was shown, and that the future of the Resort looks very promising.

THE FURNACE.

The Subscription Lists of Construction Now on the Ground—The Work to Go Rapidly Forward.

We are now enabled authoritively to announce that work on the Pine Lake Iron Company's Works has been inaugurated.

On Saturday there arrived in this village Robert Jackson, of Depere, Wis., and E. D. Hines, of Cincinnati, Ohio. The gentlemen have been delegated by the Company to lay out the ground and construct the lead lines, and will proceed at once with the work.

Mr. Jackson superintends those portions to be built of iron, and Mr. Hines has charge of the wood work. They will employ their machinery and laborers here and also the teams necessary in doing the work.

The brick for use in the construction of the buildings and kilns, have been bought at St. Clair, and a vessel chartered to transport the same here. She is expected daily.

The stone for foundations are to come from Sturgeon Bay, Wis., and their transportation here will be commenced immediately.

Two vessels have been chartered to transport ore from Escanaba, and will commence their part of the work as soon as the upper channel is in a condition to admit them.

A portable engine to hoist ore from the vessels to the docks, and do other lifting has been purchased, and will be among the first material shipped.

The Company's tug the Robert Stevenson—will arrive here soon. She is a staunch boat and is driven by a 14x16 engine.

A week or two, at most, will see the work on the construction of the Pine Lake Iron Company's Furnace well advanced.

Mr. Smith, of the SENTINEL, cuts as his paper is the school for journalistic work in the town. Well, it is a very laudable institution, Mr. Smith, but we propose to make you go on. In the meeting next week we shall if you cannot your worthy aspirations and retake your old Position.—Petoskey Record.

We shall do it, and retain our candid comments. But pull your coat off, Chick, and wade in, and we shall be likely to have two pretty cool papers in the county.

The upper channel is in such a condition that the steamer Gazelle cannot get into Pine Lake, and some of the tugs will dredge it out this week. A dredge will undoubtedly be here in a few weeks, to commence the permanent improvement.

Richard O'Neill, we understand, is slowly recovering from his recent serious illness. His son Lake arrived from Philadelphia last week, and will take the old gentleman home with him as soon as he is able to travel.

The Village Surveyor was instructed to establish the corners of Block 8.

The Charlevoix Board of Supervisor an to meet April 28th to take into consideration the basis of assessment. Evangeline, we understand, votes that their Supervisor should assess at one-third cash value notwithstanding the fact that the law says it shall be assessed at full cash value.

The Standard, in commenting upon the recent contest in Boyne Valley over the office of Supervisor, says:

"Mr. Moore, who ran against Mr. Robinson, has no interest in Boyne Falls, or even Charlevoix county, and when we count him one of our best friends personally, and about ten years ago rejoiced at his elevation we do so still that Mr. Robinson was elected by reason that it was not given the private character, but to the public opinion of the two men."

Very true. But bear in mind that our mutual friend Robinson came within seven votes of being defeated upon the issue at which you so mysteriously hint. Does this thought comfort you? Those rebellious voters in Boyne Valley may prove a thorn in your flesh some day.

The Fountain City House.—The main sitting room is being torn out and enlarged. Mr. Cooper, will May 1st begin the erection of an addition to his already large hotel, which will be 26x60 and two stories high and will contain 20 new sleeping rooms. This will give the Fountain City House a total of sixty-five sleeping rooms. Mr. Cooper will give the entire house a thorough overhauling this spring, and put it in better shape than ever for the accommodation of guests.

The contents include several hundred small pearls and like amounts and two lumps of gold, all worth about three thousand dollars.

THERE is a district in Belgium where a chain of villages along the valley of the Geer form a sort of immense street. The soil is clayey, but crossed at intervals with chalk, which gives to straw raised there an exceptional strength, pliability and brilliancy. This district is the seat of the Belgian straw trade, in which some 12,000 persons are engaged, who earn upward of $600,000. Every spring four or five thousand migrate to work in the principal cities for a few weeks. The chief seat of this industry to-day is Rochezre, a beautiful village surrounded by the villas of wealthy straw makers.

A Conductor Who Backed Down.

Before the train left Bay City yesterday morning for Detroit a woman nearly six feet tall and having a complexion like a fresh-burned brick, entered the depot followed by a dog almost as big as a yearling calf. Having purchased a ticket, the woman stood beside the train until the conductor came along, when she asked if with—

"You have been pitted out to me as the boss of this train."

"Yes'm," was his modest reply.

"Well, I'm going to Detroit by the old man."

"Yes."

"And this dog is going along with me. He goes where I go every time in the year."

"Yes, he can go down in the baggage-car."

"Not any he can't! That's what I stepped you for. This here dog is going long in this 'ere car and nowhere else!"

"The rules of the road——"

"Rules be-hanged! My old man can be hanged around by everybody, and he never demands his rights; but he stands hain't Thomas—and by a jugfull!"

"Madam, let me——"

"I don't want no dawing of!" she interrupted, as she pulled a pair of black mittens off her big red hands. "I'm going and the dog's going, and what I want to know is, whether you want to raise a row on the cars or have it right now and here?"

The conductor looked the dog over and was about to shake his head, when the woman began untying her bonnet-string preparatory.

"I s'pose, being as I am a woman, it would be no more than fair for the dog to sail in with me. Come here, Leonidas!"

"Madam," replied the conductor, as he felt a shiver go up his legs, "take your dog and get aboard."

"Honest Injun?"

"Yes."

"So I see 'tother the cars start!"

"No."

"Then just settles that, and I'm natur'ly stronger, though you did kinder bang off at first. Leonidas, foller me and behave yourself!"—Detroit Free Press.

Audacity of Italian Brigands.

For some time past, says the Rome correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette, it has been scarcely possible to pick up an Italian newspaper without finding mention in it of some robbery remarkable for its magnitude, daring or brutality; and these can scarcely be excused on the score of the hardness of the times, for many are committed by persons in a respectable position. I have picked out a few of the chief cases, beginning with one in which a brutal outrage was inflicted on Dr. Small, one of the oldest of the British residents in Rome. Dr. Small, who has retired from practice, lives alone with a man servant in one of the large barracks of houses lately built near St. Maria Maggiori. Yesterday morning, while his servant had gone out, he heard a ring at the bell, and, thinking it was the baker with the rolls for breakfast, he opened the door himself. Two young men, decently dressed, stepped in, saying they wished to speak to him, and once inside, closed the door, pushed him into his sitting-room, and threw him on the ground with great violence. Dr. Small, who is advanced in years, could offer no resistance, but, nevertheless, one of the ruffians knelt on his chest and squeezed his throat, while the other took his keys and ransacked the drawers for money. Finding none, and the doctor being by this time unconscious, they tied his arms and legs, wrapped a sheet round his head, and left him. After a while, he recovered, he was able to free himself and send for the police. Fortunately the thieves only secured very little booty, but they were persons evidently well acquainted with the habits. I have not heard if they are already apprehended, to the great credit of the Roman police. Another very desperate attempt on the house of a prince, the chief of whose name is reported from a village near Cassino. In this case, however, the prince had received warnings, and his men again set officer and six gendarmes had been keeping watch in the house. At last they had begun to think it must be a false alarm, when in the dead of the night they heard the sound of a lock being made in the wall at the back of the kitchen fireplace; a breach was quickly made, by which six men entered the house, the police keeping quiet in the while. The leader then struck a light, but, catching sight of the police for the first time, blew out the match, and with his followers opened fire on them. The officer dashed at the leader of the party and grappled with him, and a terrible fight occurred in the darkness. The gendarmes, fearing to wound each other, made for the door to surround the house, but there found nine other men, who opened fire on them. Meanwhile the thieves inside escaped as they entered, and the whole party fled right, with the exception of the leader, the officer had seized, who was mortally wounded with a pistol shot. Through his means the whole band was captured within twenty-three hours, for he took it into his head that he had been betrayed and entrapped by them, and gave all their names before he died. From Bologna we hear that the land agent of Prince Torlonia, the millionaire ex-contractor, who owns half the whole of Rouniglia, has absconded, leaving a deficit of nearly 1,000,000 lire in his accounts. This man seems to have been implicitly trusted by the Prince, who mostly manages his own affairs himself, with great attention. He had a place to live in, rent free—two horses at his disposal, and a handsome salary for Italy, besides the presents and pickings, which, in the management of such a property, amount to a considerable sum in the year. There is no news of him yet. A successful fraud on the Government has lately been brought to light in Genoa. The provincial treasuries are authorized by the central office to pay the coupons of Italian stock which may be presented to them, and draw on the Treasury for the amount, forwarding the said coupons in packets of so many lires each, stamps of the same amounts being of course, classed together. The appearances have been considered as negligence in the examination at these packets, for in the last half-year said, one of the barber boys opened he a forgery. It was discovered, by mere chance, that instead of examining all coupons of £20, each of the senior ones were of far smaller value, and further examination showed that there were £30,000 wanting in that parcel alone. Something of the same description lately happened at Naples also. The paid coupons and bonds of the municipal loan are stored in a room in the prefecture, to which there are three locks, the key of each one of which is kept by a separate officer. A short time ago, on entering the room, what was the horror of the custodians to find several packets missing. The locks did not appear to have been tampered with, and they could not imagine how the room had been entered. At last an active and intelligent policeman discovered that, at some risk of life, the window could be approached from the roof of a church near, and thus the mystery was explained. A large fraud on the lottery has also been discovered, it is said, at Milan. In this case the officers in charge of the registers are believed to be implicated, as they are said to be at Naples in the famous fraud of 2,000,000 by the priest Mattei, which, by the way, has never been cleared up yet, though committed more than a year ago.

BEAUTY BUT SKIN DEEP.

How to Beautify, How to Preserve, and How to Treat, when Diseased, the Skin and Scalp.

BY M. L. DAMRELL, M. D., OF NEW YORK.

Apart from the suffering caused by skin diseases, their influence on the happiness of those to whom a defiance and pearly complexion is the greatest wish of their lives is pronounced by all others. No lady afflicted with, shall we say, ringworm, or loss of hair, will deny that to obtain a fair skin and healthy tresses, she would gladly exchange the distinctions that make her otherwise handsome face, hands, or hair, for other diseases of greater severity—even dangers—until their existence be emancipated from the public gaze. Many a woman's life has been embittered by permanent affections. She imagines that every one sees and comments upon her looks. She avoids society and public places, and endeavors to hide her misery. Many of them the struggle to improve her appearance is renewed. No remedy is too expensive or dangerous to be used. A cosmetic is convenient in many localities, another is taken internally and applied externally until the teeth refuse to chew, and the stomach and digestive organs become the host of poisons it is obliged to contain.

Of such to the feelings of our afflicted with skin diseases, we would say, that in the vast majority of cases suffering from skin disease, testing they wished to speak to him, and once inside, closed the door, pushed him into his sitting-room, and threw him on the ground with great violence. Dr. Small, who is advanced in years, could offer no resistance, but, nevertheless, one of the ruffians knelt on his chest and squeezed his throat, while the other took his keys and ransacked the drawers for money. HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

SOWING OSAGE ORANGE SEED.—Osage orange seed is sown early in spring, as soon as the ground is fit. The seed is put into boiling water and left to soak for forty-eight hours before planting. The seed is sown in drills eighteen inches apart, and the plants are well cultivated the first year, after which they are ready for transplanting.

JELLY CAKE.—One cup of sugar, one-half cup of butter, three eggs, one-half cup of cream, one-half teaspoonful of saleratus, two cups of flour; bake in three long, shallow tins, when done put each one in two in the middle (not split them) and put them together with jelly, and you will have a cake composed of six layers one-half as large as your tins.

VALUE OF POULTRY MANURE.—Poultry manure is rich in ammonia and phosphoric acid, when made by fowls fed upon grain. It contains the greatest quantity of any other animal excrement. When one has sheep manure, it would be best to mix the two and use it for crops that are grown in hills, as corn. Plaster may be added to the mixture with benefit.

POTATO PUDDING.—Beat well together fourteen ounces mashed potatoes, four ounces of butter, four ounces of fine sugar, five eggs, one wine-glass of brandy, one small lemon; a pinch of salt; pour it in a mold or dish well greased, and bake in a slow oven. Time, half an hour. Sauce as smoothly as possible, and adding a little butter at first helps to make them smooth.

CULTURE OF SUGAR-BEETS.—There is no market for sugar-beets except for the manufactures of sugar. For this purpose the sugar factories pay $4 to $5 per ton. But they are very valuable for feed, and it will pay to cultivate them for this and for the supply could be grown for a factory. The manufacture is now established in this country, and nothing more is needed than a certain quality of the roots. The culture of this crop is not difficult. Deep soil and clean cultivation only are required. A fair crop is twelve or fifteen tons, and a good one, twenty tons per acre.

MILK FEVER IN A COW.—Milk fever is caused by the irregular excitement of the circulation consequent upon the changed condition of the animal. If the trouble can be noticed at the outset, bleeding from the jugular vein is the most effective remedy; but after the disease is confirmed this is dangerous; the remedy is then to give purgative medicine, (sixteen ounces of epsom salts,) with one ounce of saltpeter daily until the fever abates. Nourishing food, such as bran mashes or chopped roots, should be given, but no grain food for some time. If the animal is very weak and torpid, give a half dram of ginger each time, mixed in the other medicine. If there is much inflammation of the udder, bathe it and massage it occasionally.

A School of Forestry.

At a recent meeting of the Chamber of Commerce of the City of St. Paul, Minn., an elaborate report was submitted setting forth the necessity in this country of an institution of the character. The popular ignorance prevalent as to the worth of our timber-lands, as well as the disastrous consequences attending the present wanton destruction of the forests of the country, tend to make the movement for the establishment of a school of forestry both timely and important. Such schools, it may not be generally known, are in flourishing existence in Europe, and no more regarded as experiments, but have proved themselves to be of immense public utility. The present time has come an impulse to the growing of timber on waste lands, as well as a more economical management of forests, sufficient to vindicate the economy of their foundation.

These schools are found in Neustadt-Eberswalde, near Berlin, at Tharandt, in the vicinity of Dresden; at Eisenach, Stockholm, Zurich, Aschaffenberg, and other places; and the testimony, after years of practical working, is that through their influence forests have been grown upon once barren and sterile lands, while systematic efforts have been successfully made for the preservation of woodlands or the regrowth of timber where once cut off.

The instruction furnished in these schools embraces mathematics, pure and mixed, so that, according to the report in question, "the forester may reckon intervals on capital invested, the interest value of a given piece of forest-land, measure distances, compute the cubic contents of a group of trees, and ascertain the average annual increase of the same by growth." Furthermore, the courses of study includes physics, chemistry, physiology, the natural sciences, with particular attention to ornithology and entomology, to which may be added civil and criminal law in its bearings on forestry and on the economical advantages to the Nation of the latter. Besides the above, instruction is given in forest history, wood-planting, protection of timber lands, methods of fostering the growth of trees, and their general uses.

Such a school in this country, with its full yet practical curriculum of study, would furnish us with men who as examiners and managers of our forests would be of great value; and through such the timber interests of the Northwest, and the various mechanical and industrial pursuits depending thereon, could be protected and promoted.

The pungent need of an institution of this kind no one will deny who knows aught about our forests, or of their rapid destruction, entailing wholesale ravishing damage. According to the estimate of the United States Surveyor-General, there are in Northern Minnesota alone thirteen millions of acres unsurveyed. The Government has been robbed of millions of acres of timber-land, as the report of the Commissioner of the Land Office declares, by "the fraudulent use of Homestead laws, soldier's additional rights and Indian half-breed scrip." Whole townships, once covered with luxurious pine forests, have been entirely denuded of the same, and are now unoccupied wastes. Something should be done to arrest at once this wanton destruction of our Northern forests, and if the establishment of a school of forestry be not the most correct sentiment in reference to their worth, and how they may be secured, preserved and not wantonly destroyed, be reproduced. The present Secretary of the Interior, in his report for 1869, has called attention to these matters which always follow the destruction of the forests of a country are known to every well-informed man. These reminiscences will inevitably come upon us in a comparatively short time, considering the rapidity with which the timber growth of this country is being swept away, unless legislation be adopted systematically to arrest this indiscriminate spoliation. To no county would a school of forestry be of greater utility than to those Europeans sojourners in the premises is sufficient to show of the economical advantages of the same. Such a school would become a bureau of information in reference to the culture of forests and their sanitary and material benefits. It would supply us with competent foresters and report the best methods of preserving or regrowing them.

Our fellow-citizens may be so cared for as to become sources of permanent supply, and not, as by present practice, lessen the country's wealth. From such a school would naturally come those whose knowledge of the science of forestry would make them available to railroad and lumber companies and those industries dependent upon the use of wood.—Inter. M. & G. Intelligencer.

Preserve the Fertility of the Soil.

How MUCH individual poverty has been caused by excessive cropping and a total neglect, or an inadequate application of manures? writes the author of American Manures. That this state of things has in a great measure been caused by ignorance we cheerfully admit; but whatever be the cause of the evil the effect is the same.

In this fertile land of true and successful farming sustaining fertility by sufficient manuring, we are as a Nation, shamefully ignorant and criminally negligent. In this matter many of our farmers seem totally indifferent, either to present or future example, and the land deterioration is still going on (to a great extent) unchecked and unheeded in all parts of the country, while the very substances that would prevent and avert all this great National evil, are allowed to go to waste everywhere. Farmers often permit their stable manure to lie for months exposed to the influence of the weather, thus losing the most valuable part of it, namely the ammonia and the solvable salts that are dissolved and washed away by rain. Whereas all such substances should be stored under cover, so that a certain amount of fermentation may be produced, thus preparing them in an active manure when needed. All the waste material of the farm should thus be prepared. An accurate knowledge of the value of these waste products, as regarding grass, butter, corn, beef and bread and the other necessaries of life, will naturally lead to economy in saving those materials.

When the farmer is fully informed on these subjects, he can realize the commercial value of those elements of fertility that are yearly removed from his land in the various forms of the produce that is sent to markets, and, also, if he does not add anything to the soil in the shape of manure, and only realizes a bare living for his labor, he can see how much poorer he is becoming every year.

A thorough knowledge and appreciation of these things will at once convince the farmer that it is impossible for him to preserve the fertility of the soil unimpaired, even by the most economical and judicious saving and application of all the waste substances produced on the farm; but the purchase of the produce which is removed from the farm in the shape of cattle and grain and other products is a constant drain on the valuable elements of fertility that should finally give his land a value; and that if he wishes to preserve its average productiveness or improve it, he must return an equivalent in some cheaper form.

To meet this want, concentrated manures and superphosphate of lime are prepared, and the farmer finds in these the most convenient means at his command to supply the wants of his land.—Western Farm Journal.

What Better Evidence

Could the people ask to substantiate the merits of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines than the fact that they have the only yearly sworn to regular favor in this country, but the foreign demand for them has become magical as to necessitate the establishing a branch of the celebrated World's Dispensary in London, England, that these blessings to the afflicted may be distributed from the greatest Commercial center of the world to every country and people? Golden Medical Discovery is a concentrated, potent alterative, or blood-cleansing remedy, that wins golden opinions of all who use it for all humors, from the common pimple, blotch, or eruption, to the formidable scrofula or scrofulous swelling. Internal fever, soreness and ulceration, yield to its benign influence. Consumption, which is but a form of scrofulous affection of the lungs, may in the early stages be cured by a free use of this blood-purifying, strength-restoring, flesh-producing treatment. In "Invalids' Guide Book"—10 cents post-paid. Address, World's Dispensary Medical Association, Buffalo, N. Y.

For H. V. Pierce:

DEAR SIR—With trembling hand, from my extreme age, being eighty-five, I write to inform you of the great benefit your Golden Medical Discovery and Pellets have done me. Three years ago I was prostrated with pneumonia, and was thought I would recover. By the use of those medicines I was raised to health, and by the blessing of God and your medicines I have enjoyed pretty good health ever since. Now for two years past I suffered from weak lower back and head ache.

Gratefully yours, MARY B. PIKE.

In Powder Form.

VEGETINE put up in this form is within the reach of all. In making the medicine yourself, you save from a dollar to three dollars per bottle, as nothing is required but to steep the barks, roots and herbs, make the proper quantity of the liquid, and bottle. Thousands will gladly avail themselves of this opportunity, who have the conveniences to make the medicine. Full directions in every package. Vegetine in powder form is sold by all druggists and general dealers. If you cannot buy it of them inclose 50 cents in postage-stamps for one package, or $1 for two packages, and I will send it by return mail. H. R. STEVENS, Boston, Mass.

The Best Hour Through the Train

Patronize all ordinary Conversation, Lectures, Concerts, Theatres, Churches, Prayer Meetings, and in fact all Meetings of a public character, and you will be sure to have a good time. Go to sleep when you feel like it, and wake up when you please, and you will not be annoyed by the Conductor, Newsboy, Baggage-master, Brakeman, Porter, or Peddler. Ride on the Fast Line, and you will reach your destination in advance of all others. Ask for Tickets via Pittsburgh, Fort Wayne & Chicago Railway, and take no others. Then you will be sure to have the best hour through the train.

DR. W. ROSS WRITES:

Scrofula, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Weakness.

H. R. STEVENS, Dear Sir—I have been prescribing medicine 25 years, and as a remedy for Scrofula, Liver Complaint, Dyspepsia, Rheumatism, Weakness, and all diseases of the blood, I have never found its equal. I have used it in my own family with astonishing results. I do not hesitate to recommend it to the public as the best blood purifier. DR. W. ROSS BROWN.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:

DEAR SIR—My little daughter Stella has been afflicted a long time with sickness, suffering everything, and was given up by physicians to die. Her case was pronounced Spinal Disease. I thought none of your Vegetine Powder would help her, but as a last resort I gave it to her strictly according to the directions, and am sure surprised to a great degree at the result. She is now able to be around the house. She is now gaining every day, and I can cheerfully recommend your remedy to the world, for what we have received.

Respectfully yours, J. V. WEBB.

KIDNEY-WORT The Only Remedy THAT ACTS AT THE SAME TIME THE LIVER, THE BOWELS, and the KIDNEYS. This combined action gives a wonderful power to cure all diseases. Why Are We Sick? Because we allow these great organs to become clogged or torpid, and poisonous humors therefore pervade into the blood that should be expelled naturally. KIDNEY-WORT WILL CURE BILIOUSNESS, PILES, CONSTIPATION, KIDNEY COMPLAINTS, KIDNEY DISEASES, FEMALE WEAKNESS, NERVOUS DISORDERS by causing free action of these organs, thereby giving them strength to throw off disease. Why suffer Bilious pains and aches? Why be troubled with Piles, Local Pains? Why feel tired and dull, and have Headache? Why endure nervous or sick headaches? Why have sleepless nights? Use KIDNEY-WORT and relief is insured. It is a dry vegetable compound and one package will make six quarts of medicine. Try it at once. Druggists sell it. Price, $1.00. OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

New York April 16 1880.

To maintain my principle of writing on the subjects which seem to fill their fully the public ear, I shall have to confine myself strictly this week to the shows of the city, for at this moment the various forms of amusement quite overshadow other topics not only in number but apparently in activeness. First of all there is our six-day walking match. Now I am aware, that with respectable persons "walking matches" ought to have a fighting word, and I undertake for multiplying words on a subject that has been a dozen times nailed out. In fact, every time I mention pedestrianism, or any thing connected with it, I instinctively look round with the expectation of having to dodge something, very much as a man does when quoting Pinafore or referring to the 15 puzzle.

But what is a scrupulous correspondent to do when a much-bellowed puzzle will turn out by the ten thousand, as they have done through the past week, to witness the same old spectacle of half a dozen or so more or less crippled men chasing their own shadows in dreary monotony, mainly for the benefit of backers and the betting fraternity? But any one asked my opinion on the chances of another walking match succeeded here, I should have said the money would be safer invested in well-cut mining stock than risked in so played-out an enterprise. But the result shows that the pedestrian fever has fastened on to New York as the Old Man of the sea beset Sinbad of old, for the lessees of Gilmore's Garden are making money hand over fist. There is one point, and one only, in connection with this match which is really worth notice, and that is the manner in which the African element is bombing up in this form of contest, the two darkies, Hart and Fosbrum, covering themselves with glory an inch thick, and conclusively proving that the sons of Ham are fully as strong on their pins as their cousins of the Japhet family, previous popular opinion to the contrary notwithstanding.

Another show that obtains its full share of attention is Barnum's new turnout for 1880. Whether old Phineas has discovered in his rearings the veritable fountain of youth, or whether he is merely destined to reach the age of Methuselah, is perhaps not material; but somehow or other he contrives each such successive spring to come brisk and smiling with a more outrageous embarrassment of combination of novelties and curious attractions than ever before. He puts it in mind one of the papers facetiously styles an "Eight-clown power circus" from the large number of those venerable jokes it contains in addition to a menagerie, a squad of trained elephants, a flock of trained doves, a pair of asses who dance a waltz, a wonderful leaping stag, and an interpid young lady in tights, who for a presumably liberal compensation consents to be shot out of a cannon twice each day to the horrified delight of the gaping multitude.

Yet another spectacle has been afforded the sightseeing New Yorker this week which to my thinking is better worthy the interest it has awakened than either of those above refered to. All of us can remember, if we do not experience, the wild enthusiasm of our youth over the exploits of whalers, and have probably all of us—those of the male persuasion I mean—hankered at one time or another for the excitement of such a life and the chase of those great kings of the deep, who seem like living relics of that remote age which produced the monster mastodons and pleiosaurians and megalosons and a multitude of monsters to mention of creatures with endless names and hopenply still more prodigious tails. When, therefore, I saw advertised an exhibition of a whale down at a certain dock on the East River, I grasped at the chance of writing—or otherwise—my youthful conceptions of leviathan, and went down forthwith. To tell the truth I rather expected to be disappointed in the size and general appearance of the animal; but on the contrary I was surprised at both. In fact I stood for a while like the veriest rustic and gazed in open mouthed astonishment at the critter. Not, however, half an open mouthed as the critter gazed at me, for his mouth measured 17 feet by 10 or 11, while mine is—well, it isn't much larger than Brother Talmage's. The great mass of blubber lay upon a couple of dry docks which were sunk under it, and then raised its prodigious the air out of them. Most of it, of course, was covered by a thick, smooth black skin, that looked for all the world like so much rubber, but along the sides were the head the color was changed, and the surface was regularly corrugated that it looked exactly like the ribbed sounding boards on a hand organ. The eye is larger than it, of course, were better to be found in the head anywhere of its leathery hide; but perhaps the strangest thing about the animal's structure was that the throat, which had to convey all the nourishment from that vast mouth in the yet more capacious maw, was barely two inches in diameter. The whale's food, which consists mainly of small fish, is taken into the mouth in great quantities, ground to pulp by the action of the enormous tongue against the fringe of whalebone in the upper jaw, and then sucked down this microscopic throat. It seems to me that where anything needed to prove the proposition that the Bible is to be spiritually and not literally understood, the story of Jonah and the whale would suffice for the purpose.

After taking in these points by my own observation, I questioned an attendant and obtained the following additional facts. The whale is of the "humpback" variety, was killed off Cape Cod and sold by its captors for $900. The purchasers towed it to this city at a cost of $400, after cutting it open and taking from its stomach 27 barrels of herring, which they replaced by fifteen empty oil barrels to help float the carcass. The latter measured 65 feet in length and 45 feet in circumference at the largest part and weighed 50 tons. The width of the flukes from point to point was about 10 feet. The carcass is now being cut up and is expected to yield some 1,200 gallons of oil. On the whole the dead giant was a wonderful sight. "If I hadn't a seen it myself," as the sailors say when getting off a sea-serpent yarn, "I wouldn't be believed it."

But I don't know as I am much better than a sailor myself; for I find I have been spinning out my big fish story till my space is all filled and more too. So I shall have to leave this letter to be continued. BAYAX.

Senator Ben. Hill, of Georgia, got mad simple because one of the Washington newspaper men said that "Washington society was running down Hill." Ben didn't even wait to find out what Hill was referred to. Perhaps a guilty conscience needs no accusing.

The Northern Tribune, of Cheboygan, has this very pointed paragraph. "We suggest that Bob Ingersoll cease lecturing upon "The Mistakes of Moses," and get up a lecture on the "mistakes of the Democratic party." The Democratic party have double discounted Moses."

That little Maine episode, or that deeply laid scheme as of villainy, in fitter words, is slowly but surely being unfolded to the [illegible] people. Ex-Gov. Garcelon claims to be the embodiment of innocence, and as ignorant of doings of his wicked council as a new born babe is of cholera. He has returned to the State treasury $925 drawn by himself without the authority of law, however, but fails to make restitution of the $1,100 which he unlawfully expended. Now if he will turn state evidence and make a clean breast of the matter he will undoubtedly ease a troubled conscience.

There is no more striking illustration of the fact of the return of prosperity to the country than is furnished by a revival of railroad building. A New York paper publishes a list showing that within the last seven months 2,971 miles of railroad have been built and preliminary arrangements have been made for building 12,541 miles more, making the total completed and projected roads, since September 1st, 1879, 15,512 miles. This says the Leavenworth Times, of mileage for the three years 1859, 1870 and 1871, which have been looked upon as the most active and busiest periods of railroad construction in the history of the United States. Taking the actual cash cost of these railway enterprises to be $17,500 a mile, the conclusion is reached that they will absorb $273,000,000 of capital.

One of the county Democratic newspapers in the floral district of New York State that have been interviewed in regard to the propriety of nominating Mr. Tilden at the Democratic Convention for the Presidency, only thirteen express themselves in favor of it. If 900 is the light on which Mr. Tilden stands in his own State, we ask what can be reasonable expect other than a worse result in the nation.

The National Distinct Ink which boldly forth at Washington, D. C. says through its Secretary, that Blaine's chances are daily growing brighter and that by the time the National Convention comes at Chicago he will receive on the first ballot at least 300. That certainly is a good beginning but that sort of chicken has often been counted and never hatched.

The subscriptions to build the railroad from Butler, Ind., to Detroit is slowly accumulating having now reached $145,000, the sum needed being $200,000. The importance of the road to the commercial interests of Detroit should have made it possible to have raised that amount in two hours in Detroit alone.

The Detroit [illegible] publishes in its issue of April 7th the choice of the Republicans of Michigan, as obtained on election day, in 1,348 voting precincts. The figures stand: Blaine, 10,621, Grant, 2,848; Sherman, 819; Washburn, 392; Edmunds, 183; and scattering 134.

There is scarcely any question but that the Beaconsfield Cabinet has been defeated at the polls and that resignation will immediately follow. Mr. Gladstone is already mustered as the one on whom will fall the duty of forming a new cabinet. It could hardly be placed in better hands.

The multiplicity of blunders committed by the Democratic majority in Congress is being echoed to daily in the disbursement in passing the appropriation bills, and the pot-boiler the wire betore that body. They took very much time in finding out that the Fitz John Porter case was a real bad poker with which they were badly scorching their own hands.

The Adrian Times refers to the fact with which we are challenge. In the township of Blissfield lives Eli Bostler, who will be over 100 years old the 16th of October next. He lives with one of his grandsons, Lake Rocket, who is about 35 years of age. Last fall, beside doing other work, they put in and harked 10 acres of corn, and although he lives 13 miles from the city he often walks to town and back before dinner. He is the father of three sons and two daughters, is great father to 22 children great grandfather to one. And now we want some other person to step up and beat this plain statement of facts.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

THE Senate on the 6th insisted on its amendments to the Census bill, and a Conference committee was appointed. The joint resolution to allow employees of the Government Printing Office holidays, with pay, was passed. The bill ratifying the Ute agreement was further debated, Messrs. Maxey, Pendleton and Hill favoring its passage, and Messrs. Morgan and Teller withholding the notice of Saturday's session. Several committee reports were made—by the Navy, by Naval Appropriation bill (H. R. 5,797), being a reduction from the estimates of $250,000 was reported on by the Committee of the Whole. The Senate joint resolution providing for the payment of wages to employes of the Government Printing Office for holidays last was passed. The Army Appropriation bill (H. R. 6,666) was taken up in Committee of the Whole, and Mr. Hoar stated that the measure as a whole received the unqualified support and approbation of the executive officers of the army; it provided money for the gov ernment, subsistence and equipment of the army. The Committee on Appropriations proposed to bring that all other officers, such as bullding Clerks, constructing Quartermaster's duty, etc., should be charged to other accounts, and provided for in the Civil Service Appropriation bill.

A NOTE was received in the Senate on the 7th from the Vice-President stating that he would be absent several days, and a resolution was adopted to that effect. The session was to preside. Mr. Hatton, from the committee on Appropriations, reported back the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill. The Ute Agreement bill was then taken up and further amended. Several bills were reported in the House, one of them providing for an increase of the pensions of certain soldiers and sailors who are totally disabled on account of disease contracted in the service. Mr. Cook asked leave to offer a resolution requiring the alleged outrage reported upon J. C. Wallbaker, a cadet at West Point, and instructing the Secretary of War for any information with a view to more severely punishing the alleged outrage, and also as to what steps, if any, had been taken in regard thereto; but objection was made by Mr. Aiken on the ground that the authorities at West Point were investigating the matter, and he thought it better to wait until that action was taken. Mr. Conger then called up a bill for the relief of Sparks, laboring under the impression that improper motives had been imputed to him, called Mr. Bynum a liar. Eventually he withdrew, and Mr. Sparks by saying withdrawn the offensive language, the explanations satisfied and business was proceeded with.

THE Ute Agreement bill was further discussed in the Senate on the 8th. Several private bills were reported in the House. The Army Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole, the pending question being upon a point of order raised against the amendment prohibiting any of the appropriations to be used for the transportation, equipment, transportation or compensation of any part of the army to be used as a police force to keep peace at the polls at any election held within any State. After debate the Chair held that if the army were ordered by the proper authority to report from any additional duty, it would be in the force of circumstances it could not be considered as such. The decision was not carried at that if the amendment was adopted there would be a saving to the people; therefore, he would hold that the amendment was in order. An appeal was taken, and the decision was sustained—98 to 87.

IN the Senate the Ute Agreement bill was further debated and amended on the 9th, and it was agreed that general debate on the bill should cease at three p. m. on the 15th, and that a final vote should be had at four p. m. on the same day. Adjourned to the 13th. A bill was introduced in the house by Mr. De La Matyr, and, referred, establishing a temporary government for Alaska. Between fifty and sixty private bills were reported accordingly from the Committees on War Claims and laid on the table.

Domestic.

IT was stated on the 7th that many of the officers at West Point believed that Whittaker, the colored cadet, had mutilated himself, and held that the absence of serious injuries, as shown by a medical examination, demonstrated the falsity of his description of the assault made on him. Others rejected this theory, and placed implicit confidence in his story.

JACKSON & MORSE, grain exporters, of Boston, have failed, with liabilities estimated at $100,000. They have extensive trade in Chicago, where, with the exception of $20,000 borrowed from personal friends in Boston, their obligations rest.

ON the evening of the 6th John Petrie, fifty-one years old, of Baltimore County, Md., married a young lady of twenty-seven. On the morning of the 8th he went out in the garden and blew his head off with a shotgun.

THE Military Committee of the lower house of Congress on the 8th appointed a sub-committee, consisting of Messrs. Sparks, Johnson and Brown, to inquire into the alleged outrage upon Cadet Whittaker, at West Point.

FIVE miners at work in the Preston colliery, in the Schuylkill (Pa.) coal region, were severely and perhaps fatally burned on the 8th, by an explosion of fire-damp.

ANNOUNCEMENT was made on the 8th that the New York Central Syndicate had closed out the last of the Michigan shares of stock purchased of Mr. Vanderbilt last fall. It purchased at 120, and sold at an average of 138. Jay Gould secured 90,000 of the shares disposed of on the 8th, and Mr. Vanderbilt had a proposition from him to purchase a additional block of 100,000 shares under consideration, and would give him an answer in thirty days.

A CONFERENCE of the Mormon Church, which opened at Salt Lake on the 8th released many late arrivals from Europe from the payment of debts amounting to $800,000 on their passage money, authorized the purchase of cows and sheep for poor people, and appointed fifty elders to proselyting missions in the United States and Europe.

ON the afternoon of the 8th a car attached to a passenger train on the Bellaire & Southwestern Railway jumped the track on a trestle eighteen miles from Bellaire, Ohio, and fell fifteen feet to the ground. Four or five persons were seriously injured, one of them fatally.

THE amount of postage stamps, stamped envelopes and postal cards issued to postmasters upon requisitions during the first nine months of the present fiscal year aggregate in value $38,979,398, an increase over the issues for the corresponding nine months of the previous fiscal year of $1,016,-063, or about 14½ per cent. The greatest increase is in the sales of postal cards.

GENERAL HATCH'S command, operating in Southern New Mexico, had an engagement, lasting four hours, with Victorio's band of Apaches on the 7th. The savages finally broke and fled, leaving several of their dead on the field and considerable stock, which fell into the hands of the soldiers. Captain Carroll, of the Ninth Cavalry, and seven troopers were wounded.

GENERAL MILES, who passed through St. Paul on the afternoon of the 9th, expressed the opinion that trouble with the Northwestern Indians might be expected during this summer, but nothing like a general war.

THE announcement was made from New York on the 9th that Witteman, the persecutor of Dr. Hill, had turned out to be a first-class swindler, forger and mail-robber. He was said to be wanted for forgery in Pittsburgh and for stealing letters in Philadelphia, and was anything but the half-crazy fellow he had been represented to be.

CADET WHITTAKER appeared before the Board of Inquiry at West Point on the 9th, and was subjected to a rigid examination. He repeated the story of the assault recently made on him, and it is said no serious discrepancies were found in his statements.

THE New York Supreme Court, in affirming the judgment of the Court of General Sessions, refusing to compel W. H. Vanderbilt to testify before such body touching the moneys paid by him for the benefit of his brother Cornelius, rebuked Scott Lord, the latter's attorney, for making the application.

THE fishing schooner Annie C. Norwood and a crew of fourteen men, hailing from Gloucester, Mass., are supposed to have been lost in the March gales.

Personal and Political.

A REPORT that Mr. Tilden had, on the advice of his physicians, concluded to retire from the Presidential canvass caused something of a sensation at New York, but was regarded on the 6th to be without foundation. To an intimate friend who called on him Mr. Tilden declared that he had not been consulted by any doctor, that there had not been any conference between him and his political associates, and that he had not said to any one that he was not a candidate.

THE San Francisco Board of Supervisors on the evening of the 6th adopted a resolution that the peace of the city had been seriously imperilled by the alleged inciting speeches of Major Kalloch, and authorized the Judiciary Committee to investigate the matter and report. It was said this was the first step toward impeaching the Mayor.

AT the local election in Chicago on the 6th the Republicans carried their tickets in the South and West Towns, and the Democrats in the North Town. The Republicans elected nine Aldermen and the Democrats and Socialists nine. In Milwaukee, Wis., the Republicans carried every ward but one, and elected the entire municipal ticket. General Clerk of the Municipal Court, by majorities ranging from 1,000 to 3,000. In Cincinnati the Republicans elected their candidate for City Comptroller by about 4,000 majority, and the entire Board of Education by majorities ranging from 200 to 2,000.

THE Iowa Democratic State Convention was held at Burlington on the 7th, and delegates were selected to represent the State in the Cincinnati Convention. No instructions were given, but the sentiment of the Convention unmistakably favored Tilden.

THERE was no choice for Governor and Lieutenant-Governor at the election in Rhode Island on the 7th, the Republican candidates not receiving a majority of all the votes cast. The Legislature, however, is largely Republican.

PRESIDENT HAYES on the 7th nominated William A. Newell, of New York, to be Governor of Washington Territory.

THE Connecticut State Republican Convention met at New Haven on the 7th, and elected delegates to the Chicago Convention. The delegation was said to be divided between Blaine, Edmunds and Washburne.

THE widow of Daniel S. Dickinson died in New York on the morning of the 8th.

THE State Democratic Convention of Oregon was held at Portland on the 8th Candidates for District Judges and District Attorneys were nominated. The platform adopted advocates economy in public affairs, uniform taxation, equal protection to capital and labor, regulation by legislative acts of rates of common carriers, maintenance of public schools, free elections, without interference by military, economical keeping alive the bitterness of the late war, censures President Hayes for removing the Chinese Minister, declares the recent decisions of the United States Supreme Court in relation to the Election laws as favoring the Republican party, pledges support to all laws favoring unincumbered suffrage; opposes a protective tariff, and denounces the third-term movement.

THE Republican State Convention of Nebraska for the selection of delegates to the National Convention will be held at Columbus on the 19th of May.

THE Senate on the 9th confirmed the nominations of James B. Angell, of Michigan, as Minister to China, and of Joseph F. Smith, of California, and William H. Trescott, of South Carolina, to be Commissioners to China, to constitute, with the United States Minister to that country, a consular court to negotiate and conclude with the U. S. settlement of such matters of interest to the two Governments, now pending between the same, as may be confided to it.

THE Oregon Democratic State Convention at its late session elected Tilden delegates to the Cincinnati Convention.

GENERAL GRANT arrived at Mobile on the afternoon of the 9th, and was banqueted by the Cotton Exchange in the evening.

THE Minnesota Republican State Convention for the election of delegates to the Chicago Convention has been called to meet at St. Paul on the 29th of May.

THERE were fourteen hundred business failures in the United States during the first three months of the present year, against twenty-five hundred for the corresponding period last year.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A FIRE at Port Austin the other night destroyed the saw mill and salt-block of Thomas Winter & Co. Loss, $14,000.

WILLIAM ADDIS was arrested at Grand Rapids on the 31st ult. upon the charge of subornation of perjury in proceedings for divorce from his wife. He gave bail in the sum of $10,000 to appear for examination.

THE Alexander House, a three-summer hotel on Grosse Isle, also 4 fourteen miles down the river from Detroit, burned on the 1st. It was owned by George W. Alexander and valued at over $40,000, including contents, most of which were lost.

DR. A. B. STINNEY, a prominent physician of Detroit, who had been presiding over the recent session of Spiritualists at Battle Creek, was brought home on the 31st inst. Paralysis of the left side of body. The fatal malady is said to be the result of a long-continued mental excitement, and have only faint hopes that his derangement will not be permanent.

A WAS named Albert Davis, in the employ of Everson, Hills & Co.'s mill, at Muskegon, met with a fatal accident the other night. He was working what is termed the horse saw for trimming lumber, which is suspended in a frame sawing from above. A board falling on the ground, he attempted to pick it up, and while in that position the chain holding the saw struck him at the base of the neck and severed his head from his body.

BENNETT & BROS.' store, warehouse, barnes and shoe shops at Boscommon were burned on the morning ago Loss, $20,000; insured for $11,000. But little was saved.

AS a sequering suit near Grand Traverse the appliances are so perfect that in four minutes after the log is down a log, dried, and ready for shipment. The logs need are bird's-eye maple, beech, birch, cherry ash and oak, which are found in great abundance in the vicinity of Traverse City. The green log is first cut to a proper length, thoroughly softened in a steaming vat, and placed in the lathe, when the perfect veneer comes from the knife in a continuous sheet until nothing is left of the log but a valueless core.

MICHAEL MCNELLEN, a tenderman on the Flint & Pere Marquette Railway, was found lying by the other night and died from his injuries.

A FEW mornings ago Armstrong's billiard-table establishment, in Ionia, was entered by burglars and robbed of several hundred dollars. A wide-awake officer saw them escaping from the building, and succeeded in effect the capture of one of them and secure the plunder. The rest were subsequently arrested and were recognized as former inmates of the State Prison.

A FIRE the other morning in the basement of A. Hale's store and boot building at Grand Rapids damaged the structure to the extent of $1,000, and also injured A. W. Giles & Co.'s stock of hats and caps to the extent of $1,000 more.

THE room of Thomas Kinner, at Kinner's hotel, at Bay City, was entered the morning and $100 taken. The thief was captured and $80 recovered.

A SAW days since Old Tom was found dead at the residence of his father, Samuel Tuer, a Kalamazoo, from the effects of a pistol ball shot by his own hand. He had been left in charge of the family for several weeks, and on returning home forced open the house and found his son on the bed, dead. He is a painter by trade, with plenty of work, and no cause is known for the suicide.

ON the night of the 4th Kalamazoo was visited by the heaviest rain-storm witnessed there for years. The pond which supplies the water works at the Michigan Asylum for the Insane was swelled until it burst its dam, overflowing the banks of its outlet, Arcadia Creek, and inundating a large portion of the west and northwest parts of the village. Many cellars were filled and a large amount of drywalls carried away. The cellar of the market block was completely filled, and also the cellar of a brick block being erected corner, when, on calling the horse by the name given him by the family, he immediately left his grain and came bounding toward me like a child to its parent, smelled me over from head to foot, laid his head on my shoulder, closed his eyes, and commenced handing up one foot and then the other to shake hands as I thought, but I was sadly before. No mortal ever expressed more joy and gladness to meet a long-lost friend than was manifested by the horse; he would not return to his feed, but followed me about the stall, kept as close to me as possible, and when I left the stall followed me to the door and tried to push out the door. He watched me as long as he could, then called after me and kept coming over the gate at the side to the other, hoping to escape, that he could meet me again. Cor. Homerlad.

Colonel Solon's Cistern Water.

"I'VE bin a workin' like all possessed to-day," said Colonel Solon last evening, as he borrowed a pipe from the local editor.

"So, what you been doing?"

"My wife, ye see, has the rheumatiz an' 'twas wash day, so she says to me, says she, Solomon, the water in the cistern is out an' I can't wash without its bein' warm water, an' my rheumatiz is so bad that I can't fetch it. Sufficiently pro-fanulized, says I, sayin, I'll bring the water. An' I brought twenty-five pails full of water from my neighbor's well an' poured into that cistern, an' then I jummped every blamed drop out for the washin.' Mitey hard work."

"Why in the name of common sense didn't you put the water in the tubs instead of turning it into the cistern, and then pumping it out again?" said the editor.

"Cos," said the Colonel, bristling up, "cos in the name of common sense, she had to have cistern water to wash with, yer darned fool."—Oil City Derrick.

A FURNISHER at Happy Camp, Josephine County, Oregon, offers to build a new wagon road for $10,000, and to give bonds for the faithful performance of his work.

Jay Gould's Railroad Possessions.

"RIGHT" says in a recent letter to the Cincinnati Enquirer: Jay Gould's ranchings out after new railroads received but little attention to-day in the publication in a financial newspaper of the fact that he controls more miles of road than any other man. The Pennsylvania lines controlled by Colonel Scott have a total mileage of 5,400, and the Vanderbilt roads are 4,661 miles in length, including the Chicago & Northwestern, in which Mr. Vanderbilt has the largest individual interest, while the leading lines are under Gould's management. He has a formidable competitor in the Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe, but all the other routes in Kansas are in his grasp. In Missouri he controls the lines centering in every east and west line, except the Chicago & Alton. In Colorado he has every mile of road except that owned by the Atchison, and all the lines in Utah are within his control. The fact that at present Gould has no connection with Louisville, Nashville & Cincinnati adds weight to the report that he is after the Ohio & Mississippi. Gould's control of the Wabash & Ohio lines also folks have been very intimate lately. Gould's American Union Telegraph wires run on all the Vanderbilt, Baltimore & Ohio managers, and Gould and Garrett have been much in conference during the last few days over the Western trip. Were Gould to secure the Ohio & Mississippi, and then strike a compact with the Baltimore & Ohio managers, he would get a through outlet to the seaboard for all his roads west of the Mississippi, and were he to be controlled the Iron Mountain Road, which rumor credits him with having in view, his system west of the great river would be well-nigh perfect. By use of the New Jersey Central, New York would be reached in connection with the Baltimore & Ohio. That Gould is actively negotiating to effect such an arrangement is believed by many long-headed men in Wall street.

How a Horse Remembered His Old Master.

I OWNED a very gentle stock horse for a long period, which I sold to go South in 1858. I left him with the greatest regret and affection for those having him in charge exercised anything I ever witnessed in the way of memory. After leaving went South I did not see him for two years, then being in that section and within eighteen miles of his home, I hired a team and drove out to see him; I had not forgotten the kind and gentle manner in which he took a few bites of hay from my hand, twenty feet by twenty, and just eating his oats, it being noon on my arrival. The man in attendance not knowing me, and that such a horse was in the plantation and in would lead him out, I informed him that I proposed to ride him home, to which he objected, saying he was not fond of strangers, but a friend being with me said he thought there would be no trouble as I had owned him before he came South. Therefore I was permitted to enter his stall, then closed the door, and I found the horse eating his grain from a box in one corner of the stall, and took my place at his side in feeding. I stepped into the opposite corner, when, on calling the horse by the name given him by the family, he immediately left his grain and came bounding toward me like a child to its parent, smelled me over from head to foot, laid his head on my shoulder, closed his eyes, and commenced handing up one foot and then the other to shake hands as I thought, but I was sadly before. No mortal ever expressed more joy and gladness to meet a long-lost friend than was manifested by the horse; he would not return to his feed, but followed me about the stall, kept as close to me as possible, and when I left the stall followed me to the door and tried to push out the door. He watched me as long as he could, then called after me and kept coming over the gate at the side to the other, hoping to escape, that he could meet me again. Cor. Homerlad.

THE CHURCH REVERIES OF A SCHOOL GIRL.

I have a new bonnet; I'll go up to church
To hear the new preacher, young Amandus Birch;
He's single and handsome, but they say he's very Stingy.
And that his sermons are long and dry;
But, bless a heretic, I'll try for his sake
To look interested, and keep wide awake.

What a good conversation; I'm glad that I came,
That face is familiar, but what is her name?
Ah, just at the social she came through her mind
I wonder if Murray will ever propose?
The choir has finished its opening hymn,
The preacher's face pale and acridly grim.

His prayers I think tedious, and prosy and long
They say that he imitates even Dunton in wrong;
What unfaithful mention the Burton girls
wear;
I wonder if they really do bleach their hair?
They dress awful stylish and haven't from pew;
They say that Burton's worth millions, that's true.

And there goes the sermon—I must listen with care,
Oh, how can Frank Davis get beautiful hair?
I must remember I am the object of envy,
I wonder what Jean Smith's dress will have made;
Ah, me! now I wish the choir would sing,
I'd give something even for a new diamond ring!

Oh, why don't the preachers all preach to the point?
I have at last here ill-every hour's out of joint!
I have a crash in my neck and a pain in my back!

THE BASKET OF SHAVINGS.

CHAPTER I.

"BECKY FAIRWEATHER, where have you been all this while?"

It was a shrill woman's tongue that put the question; and it was a timid child's voice that replied, "I've just been playing in the court here, Aunt Nora, with the girls. Please don't whip me, Aunt Nora! Please don't!"

Little Becky stood trembling at the door, with a face full of terror and entreaty, while the woman advanced upon her with a towering look, whose cloud-like menace the child knew too well.

"There!" said Aunt Nora, giving the little shoulders a rude shake. "You stop your crying. I'll teach you to be out playing with the girls, when I want you!"

"I didn't know you wanted me, Aunt Nora," sobbed the child.

"You might have known. Hush your noise. Now take the basket and go over to the Dimmock house for shavings, and don't let me hear your voice from out of your head, if you know what's good for yourself."

"Oh, it's getting so dark. I'm afraid to go."

"What are you afraid of? There's nothing to hurt good girls, and if you're a bad child, it's your own fault. You might have gone before sundown. Come, I shall want the shavings to kindle the fire in the morning; and the longer you wait the darker it will be."

"O aunt! I can't go into that old house. The last time I was there I heard something, and it wasn't half so dark as it is to-night. I'll get up early and go in the morning, if you'll let me, O aunt do!"

The aunt made no reply, but turned to take down from its place on the entry hooks a switch, whose marks poor little Becky's hands and arms had carried many a day. At sight of it, she caught up the basket, and ran out of house.

"Well, you better!" said the woman grimly, "You'd be old enough not to be afraid of the dark. You can see well enough; and there's nothing under the sun to be afraid of. Now don't you come back into this house without the shavings or you'll get such a whipping as you never had in all your life!" which was saying a good deal, if Aunt Nora only knew it.

Not that she meant to be a harsh or unauthentic guardian to her little nephew-orless niece. But cares and toil had worn out about all the health and patience she ever had; and it was no wonder that she, who so often had angry words for her own children, should have kept something worse for the orphan, whom coming into her house she had always regarded as a bitter trial.

It seemed as if she had never forgiven Becky for it, or for being a child with all a child's thoughtlessness and love of play. She expected more of her than she did of her own girls, who were older; and could never understand why Becky should not contentedly settle down into the quiet, womanly drudge she wished her to be. Yet Becky was only eleven years old.

The child went off with the basket, sobbing with fear and despair at the thought of what she had to do. It was really not very dark, only deep twilight, on a pleasant summer evening. No dumbt her aunt was right in saying there was really nothing for her to be afraid of; yet the sensitive, imaginative child could not help being afraid.

Her own playmates and the girls to whom she had been playing with, when I want you!" had just been talking over their ghost stories, and Dunmock house stood in a lonely lot, back from the street; it was undergoing repairs, and Becky had often been there before on errands, and she remembered well that night, in spite of her anxious thoughts. The next day Mrs. Cary kept her in the house; and on the day following, two messages called to see her—a gentleman and a lady, who asked to her kindly, and regarded her with so much interest that Becky could not understand. At last the lady said:

"Becky, we like you pretty well: Mrs. Cary has told us a good deal about you; and, as we have no children of our own, we would like to have you go and live with us, and be our little girl. Would you say Yes?"

"O Mrs. Cary!" cried Becky, turning to her friend, in terrified surprise.

"Yes, dear," said Mrs. Cary, cheerfully. "I know those good friends very well; and it is for this that I have sent for them. They will give you a good home and all the advantages a girl can ask. They live in another city, and you will begin a new and happier life with them."

"But," Becky faltered, joy and hope getting the better of her astonishment, "my aunt——"

"She has no real claim upon you; and it will be best that you should not see her again, I think," said the lady.

"Oh! and then I shan't get whipped for not carrying home the basket."

"Not getting whipped!" said the lady, taking the girl in her arms.

"I am so glad!" exclaimed Becky. "O dear—dear Mrs. Cary, I shall want to see you sometimes; you have been so good to me."

CHAPTER II.

Aunt Nora was very angry that first evening when Becky came home, bringing the basket of shavings. Then, as it grew late, and the child did not come, she was alarmed. Then, as it grew later still, and the child did not come, she was alarmed. Then, as it grew later, and perhaps a little conscience-smitten at the thought of her own harsh treatment of the orphan girl——

Tom found the empty basket the next morning, in the old Dimmock house, and took it home. Becky was gone two days. Then came a letter from some unknown person, in which were these words:

"I am not be anxious about the child. She has a home among friends who will be kind to her. They are grand folks, and will give her all, in short, be to her what you are to your own children. Good-by."

"Good riddance!" was Aunt Nora's first petulant exclamation, on reading this letter. But she was not long in finding out that Becky had been, after all, less a burden than a help.

When the dishes were to be washed, or errands to be done, the good woman scolded well because she missed the services of her little drudge. Finally, however, seeing every day how proud and ungrateful her own daughters were, she began to cherish very tender, regretful thoughts of poor Becky, and to hold her up as a pattern to Josephine and Laura.

"Becky never would have answered me in that way!" she would say; or, "Becky would have been kinder to her aunt than you are to your own mother!"

Then she paused again. She could see nothing but the faint outline of the woodwork, the bare walls, and the windows through which the evening light came. Suddenly she heard a rustle in the shavings. It may have been caused by a prowling cat, or perhaps by some beggar who had crawled in there for a night's lodging. But to poor little Becky it was the rising of the ghosts, and she really fancied she saw a huge head, with horns and fiery eyes, starting out of the darkness. All her courage, which had cost her so much, was gone in an instant. She dropped her basket and ran.

Out of the house and down the steps she went, and along the street, until she began to meet people. Then she came to herself a little, and remembered the basket, and the whipping she was sure to get if she went home without it.

She stopped, and finally turned back toward the old house. But she could not summon courage to enter it a second time; neither durst she go home to her aunt; and thus, between two fears, she wandered to and fro, the most wretched little girl in all the world that night.

At last, tired out, and not knowing what to do she sat down on a doorstep and cried. A woman approaching the house saw her there, and started back.

"What! Becky Fairweather, is it you?"

"Yes'm, if you please," said Becky, meekly. "I didn't know it was your doorstep, Mrs. Cary. I'll go away."

"No, you won't," cried the woman, "not until you've told me what's the matter, anyway. Has your aunt turned you out?"

"She hasn't turned me out, not quite, but she made me go to the old house for shavings in the dark, and I got scared, and left the basket, and she said I wasn't to go home without it full of shavings; and I did, she'd whip me worse than ever."

So Becky, amid sobs, told her story. Mrs. Cary put her arm kindly about her, and spoke so pityingly that the child cried all the more.

"You needn't go home without it, nor with it, if you don't want to. She don't fit to bring up a child like you; I've known it, and the neighbors have known it, a long while. So if you'll come with me, I'll take you and give you a good home till I can find a better one for you. So don't think of the basket, but come along with me."

Mrs. Cary's house was not far off; and there she received comfort and kindness, such as she had not known since her mother died. Only one great fear had been there for she seemed as though she might as well die at once as let the time come for her aunt to be lighting fires in the morning, without the basket of shavings.

But children soon forget their troubles, when blessed with "good comes;" and Becky slept well that night, in spite of her anxious thoughts. The next day Mrs. Cary kept her in the house; and on the day following, two messages called to see her—a gentleman and a lady, who talked to her kindly, and regarded her with so much interest that Becky could not understand. THE AMENDMENT.—The county canvass of the votes on the Constitutional Amendment, relative to the Governor's salary gave 394 for and 306 against—a majority of 88 in favor of the amendment.

HENRY BENNETT has commenced operations in rebuilding and repairing his residence known as the Clifford property. He will thoroughly renovate it throughout, and build a forty foot addition on the south side. He will make it his permanent residence and he builds his new house, which will be probably next season.

THE PRESENT RISING.—The present rise exceeds from the ice marsh on the Betsey river to the Platte river, north, basin fifteen miles long and from four to eight miles wide, the resting place containing about 160 square miles of territory. It is the largest rise and containing the largest body of pure water now in the United States and coming across the lake to the coast or its vicinity daily. As has been said, the nearest way to nowhere, to sell, is via Traverse City, and hunters by scores are pouring into that country.

At the session of the Board which takes place the 28th, the question of detaching certain territory from Melrose and Evan geline, lying on the north side of Bear Lake, and attaching it to the Township of Bear Lake. As it is now, school districts in both the first named Townships are divided by Bear Lake, and children are compelled to cross the Lake to attend school.

TO EXTEND THE HAND.—The Grand Rapids Eagle says that the officers of the Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad are already considering the matter of extending their road from Petoskey to the straits of Mackinaw, and are doing some of the preliminary work. Whether much of the actual work of construction will be done this year or not, has not yet been determined—it will be settled soon—but it is certain that the line will be finished and the cars running to the Straits by July 1, 1881. The extension of the road is only a question of time now—it certainly will be built.

—Petoskey will have a few lasses to cut cheap about that time.

REAL ESTATE CHANGES.—A. R. Upright has purchased of Alex M'Sawtis lots 2 of Section 19, at the head of Oyster Bay. Consideration, $200.

—Fred. Veit has purchased of A. R. Upright a lot at west end of Clinton street. Consideration, $75.

—O. D. Wood has purchased of E. Carpenter a lot in Newman's addition, adjoining W. J. Bradley on the east. Consideration $50.

—Arch McNeill has purchased of John Nichols the lones and lot adjoining Dr. Lewis residence on the east, and lately occupied by James Hemmings.

—The "Black list," on the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets, in the village, was last week sold to L. D. Hagadorne, the purchase price being $650. Thirteen years ago this lot was bought for $50. This sale is a fair illustration of the steady and substantial growth of our town, and of the confidence which our business men have in its future.

Letter From Col. M'Glashan on the Furnace Question.

TO SENTINEL:

I have just returned after nearly five days spent in calling on residents around Pine Lake and South Arm, and although I have not seen half of those I wished to speak with, have succeeded in adding almost $200, to the fund for deepening the upper river. This will leave about $800, still wanted to complete the work, and I would urgently request those willing to increase their subscription and those who have not yet subscribed to write to me at once, at Charlevoix. It will expedite matters and save me all the time I have to spend in running round the country, time often lasting much needs hours to one man's person.

Without this but a filled Autumn Stately another whole season will be thrown away and the work ever as much again.

I have letters from the President of our shipping stating that material, tools and stores are now being shipped at Chicago and will probably be here before this goes to press, and immediate operation will be commenced at the furnace site.

Yours,

Obituary.

DIED.—In Norwood, March 29th, SARAH, wife of John Hemmings, aged 42 years.

Mrs. Maitland was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. P. Campbell, of South Arm, who have been called upon to bury four of their children within six months. Their disease is commonly considered to be consumption.

Mrs. Maitland was a member of the Baptist Church in Traverse City, where she and her husband resided for some time previous to removing to Norwood. Her attachment to the Church and cause of Christ was strong. Her Bible was the chief book of her choice. She was organized by all who knew her as a sturdy devoted and consistent Christian woman. To life she was ever interested in the welfare of her family, in youth one calmly resigned to the care of the Infinite Father of all. She left three young children, one of whom—an infant of ten weeks—has since followed its mother from the sufferings and sorrows of earth. Her illness was brief, and was attended by the constant and loving attentions of neighbors and relatives. Her memory is as the fragrant balm, and her repose is in Him who "giveth his beloved sleep."

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

CARBOLINE.

A DEODORIZED EXTRACT OF PETROLEUM.

The only Article that will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

WHAT THE WORLD HAS BEEN WANTING FOR CENTURIES.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from Petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative, and, while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The felling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which supply the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and the many other wonderful discoveries it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in far-off Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when rubbing the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his nasty locks, and the result was in a few months a much finer head of hair, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was first used on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The manes and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the greatest body and gray as well as to civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our own chemists has overcome the difficulty, and, by a process known only to himself, he has, after many elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as delicately as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments made with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications where the hair was thin and falling gave renewed life and vigor to the roots of the hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid, researching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once and set on a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and by some mysterious operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light-brown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most brilliant blonde can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburg Commercial of October 23, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of thousands who are using it with most gratifying and encouraging results:

MR. CHARLES PARK, of the Oates Opera Troupe writes: "After six weeks use of CARBOLINE, I am happy to say that my head is entirely free from dandruff, and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had none for years."

N. MCCLEAN, 810th Avenue Pharmacy, Pittsburg, Pa., says: "The good effects from the use of CARBOLINE are apparent to me and to every day to seek an excuse, as to justify me in recommending it to my customers and friends."

CARBOLINE Gives the utmost satisfaction as a Hair-Renewer.
CARBOLINE Has a magical effect on gray hairs.

Business Success.

Among the rare bits of wordly wisdom uttered by Major Eastburn, one of the former magnates of State street, whose familiar face and form so he stood at his office door at noonday will be recalled by many, none may be more profitably considered at the present time than his comment on making haste to be rich. "I've stood here on State street," said he, "for forty years, and I have seen men accumulate fortunes by speculation, and I've seen these fortunes disappear. I have seen men go up in worldly wealth, and go down, and I've noticed that those persons who were content with slow gains and six per cent. interest came out ahead in the long run." The greatest of proverbial philosophers has also said, "A faithful man shall abound with blessings, but he that maketh haste to be rich shall not be innocent;" and again, "He that hasteth to be rich hath an evil eye, and considereth not that poverty shall come upon him." He hastens best who hastens slowly; not lazily, for there must be work, backed by energy, perseverance, intelligent self-denial and through business habits. Believers in business impossibilities are not as numerous as formerly. For years we seemed to be living in the atmosphere of venture and great undertakings, and our whole industry was tinged with the unearthly light, but of late years we have been suffering from a collapse of these great hollow ideas, and there is hope for a return of the staple prosperity of earlier times.

The past six years of depression has solidified all branches of business. Prudence and economy is now the motto of the successful merchant. The misfortunes of the past did not come for naught. It is a delusion to suppose that success is attained by any kind of patent process. Books are sometimes advertised with such taking titles as "The Secret of Success," "The Road to Wealth," etc., but many make the path of success an plainer or easier for those who are looking for a short road to wealth, power, honor and influence. These come only of years of intelligent labor and devotion to business, prudence, economy, honest dealing, courage and perseverance. He that would have true and lasting success must deserve it. A fortune won by blunder or accident, by short cuts, by strategy, or close bargains, is not success, and is likely to leave its possessor as quickly as it came. Success must be conquered in a legitimate way. The man who enters business only for plunder and gain, with no turned of his reputation or character, is not a good business man, and is never regarded by his fellows as a successful man. The truth is that real success does not mean wealth, social position or political honors alone. To these must be added honesty, a heartfelt consideration for others, civility, promptitude of thought and action, intelligence, sobriety and every manly virtue.

The truly successful business man is one who is conspicuous in everything that belongs to his calling. He has a thorough knowledge of what has been done in his business, and applies this knowledge with untiring diligence to the undertakings before him. He watches and studies the markets, knowing how much is produced of the commodity in which he deals, and the amount consumed; he is prompt in decision and execution, truthful in word and conduct, and keeps his credit unimpaired. In all that he does he commands the respect and confidence of all with whom he deals, and maintains a high and noble character before the world, which is beyond all price. The principal of the "survival of the fittest" is nowhere more applicable than in business matters. The unworthy and incapable are sure in the long run to sink to their proper level.—American Manufacturer and Exporter.

The Banker's Daughter—A Pennsylvania Love Story.

Kate Boas is a banker's daughter. Nature gave her good looks, and her father's million enabled her to add such accomplishments and adornments as made her one of the foremost young women in the mining districts of Pennsylvania. She was modest and quiet, did not make a display of her dress, and in no way seemed to be spoiled by wealth and flattery. It was thought that she misjudged the sincerity of her admirers, and was fearful of fortune hunters, for she avoided association with gentlemen as far as she could politely. The fact is now public that she never gave up the love of the sweetheart of her school days, when she was a comparatively poor girl, and he was too heedlessly boyish to couple love and money in his calculations. Her choice, however, was not that of her father's, and she obediently married a man whom she did not love. That was seven years ago. Now she is in an asylum for the insane, and her husband sued for a divorce and obtained it yesterday. It is in the testimony in this suit that the extraordinary story is told.

Kate Boas went home from school with her heart pledged to her lover; but she soon found that her father was of a different mind. A. F. Boas had grown enormously in wealth, while the young man's father, a contractor, had been unfortunate. Mr. Boas forbade her to correspond with the suit of a poor man's son, and she was obedient, though she was revengefully repellent to other suitors. She spent her winters here in Reading at her home, and her summers at her father's country house at Wormelsdorf, twenty miles distant. The young heiress became almost a recluse, but she did not let anybody know the reason. To everything else her father gave her the utmost freedom; but to the matter of a husband he not only denied her the use of her liking, but finally chose one for her. This was Dr. Beaver, who lived close by the Boas residence at Wormelsdorf, and belonged to a wealthy family. Kate married Dr. Beaver. He was in all respects worthy of her. There was a grand wedding and an extended bridal tour. The husband was successful in his profession, the wife became a leader in fashionable society, and a daughter was born.

Dr. Beaver excitedly entered the office of the prosecuting attorney of this county, William M. Goodman, one day, and asked for help to expose and punish a faithless wife. He believed that Kate lord a lover other than himself, and wanted the means of learning the truth. Detectives were placed at his service, and it was not long before she was prepared to plainly accuse his wife. He had a witness in his office, and then sent for her. She came without knowing what she was to hear, and the blunt accusation of having held clandestine meetings with her lover was like a blow in the face.

"Whoever says that lies," she indignantly replied.

"Did you never write to him?" he asked.

"Never since I left school."

"Have you not written to him within three or four weeks?"

"No!"

Then he put before her the proof of her falsity—a letter which she had sent by a housemaid to the lover for whom she deceived her husband. In it she said: "Who could imagine that such a drama was being enacted here in real life?" The doctor said that they would have to separate. She wept, and begged of him not to drive her out.

"Let me remain as your housekeeper," she cried. "if not as your wife."

Her prayer for forgiveness was in vain. Her husband covertly accumulated that the witness had heard all she had said, and then dismissed her. He permitted her to stay in the house, but no longer as his wife. She would not go to her father for comfort, for he already had, through failure in business, as much trouble as he could bear, and she dared not see or send to her lover. She was informed that her husband had begun proceedings for divorce. She made no defense, and said that she would confess to her father. The aged and broken-down man went to her, responsive to a message, and heard from her own lips how wretchedly the wedlock of his planning had turned out.

The testimony given before the referee, Simon P. O'Reilly, was convincing enough; but it hardly degraded the case to the level of ordinary divorce proceedings. However, the professional spies swore that Kate and her lover met frequently; but her own servants described his visit to the house as in the business of a steward. A case gets had been fixed so that he could open it from the outside; certain signals had been agreed on to indicate danger and safety, notes had been sent to and fro frequently, and he had all but lived in the house while the doctor was away on a fishing excursion. One witness described the wife as slipping out from the presence of her husband in the parlor, lifting her silk train as she tripped over the dew of the garden grass, and nesting her lover for a sentimental exchange of words in the shadow of a back fence. Another told of her jealousy on hearing a rumor that he was paying court to a girl; and it seems that it was her dread of his marrying anybody else, rather than any purpose or lack of being untrue to her own vows, that made her cling to him. She always spoke most respectfully of her husband, and praised him for his kindness and generosity.

She once told the story of her schoolday romance to a friend as an occurrence long past, but added, impulsively, "I love him to this day." A passage in one of her letters to him, however, indicates that she had rejected a proposal to elope. "May God bless and reward you for your devotion," she wrote, "for I never can," and the last four words were underscored.

The lawsuit, ended yesterday in Dr. Beaver securing the divorce, made the matter known to everybody. Kate Boas herself out of sight, as though crushed by shame. But she could not hide from herself, and, to deaden her feeling, she took to drugging herself with opium. Her reason was soon destroyed, and she was taken to the Danville Insane Asylum.—Reading (Pa.) Cor. N. Y. Sun.

A Princess and Her Suite.

The Princess Koket, with twenty gypsy followers, passed through Memphis, the other day, going to the annual spring convocation, near Dayton, O., where, in May, a large number of these peculiar people hold a festival. The party, over which the Princess Koket holds absolute sway, have been wintering in Southwestern Texas and Arkansas. They were well dressed, some in rather gay colors, the Princess especially so, and their outfit, consisting of six wagons, eleven horses and a round lot of camp equipments, were all in capital order, seven fine hooked fat, sleek and happy. The Princess Koket was questioned by a number of people during their stay in Memphis, and proved to be very intelligent and understood the way of mankind and the world generally; could tell a fortune in entertaining style, on short order, and for a single trade-dollar, and she said she always managed to captivate the purse.

How the Feeder Was Fooled.

One party on the West Hill did not make much by fooling his wife. When he went home late, waiting until after twelve o'clock so as to play the joke, he rang the door bell, and answered in "April fool" when she appeared at the door. His wife pulled over the joke, and it was soon forgotten. About two o'clock in the morning our friend was awakened by his wife, who informed him that there was something wrong with the horse at the barn. She held the lamp while he went out to see. At once he had gone a short distance, he "smelled a mice" and returned to find the door locked. He knocked, pounded, kicked, but it did no good. He went around to the bedroom window and could hear his wife breathing heavily, as though quietly sleeping. He could not go down town for he was on dishabille. Finally, tapping on the window he gently called:

"Dear?"

"Yes."

"Let me in?"

"Will you promise never to try to April fool me again?"

"Yes."

"Will you get me that new bonnet?"

"Yes."

There was a tumbling of bolts and the man, who had gone home happy with the thought of fooling his wife, passed in and retired. But we will wager that the party who informed me will die if he is found out.—Burlington Hawkeye.

Wrecked by the Fifteen Puzzle.

They were two young men from the country, and they drove up to the Postoffice corner this morning, attracted by a large crowd which had collected to hear a street-corner vender of the Gem Puzzle explain to the gaping spectators how the puzzle could be done "just as easy as falling off a log." They concluded to purchase one, and did so, but were so impatient to try and work out the confounded thing that they commenced moving the blocks as they drove down K street. Long and patiently they wrestled with it, and had got the numbers all in place with the exception of the 13, 14 and 15. Suddenly the man who was driving imagined he had discovered a move to bring everything out all right, and in his excitement and eagerness to show his companion how to make the move dropped the reins. The team started. The man who held the blocks was thrown out into the mud, his blocks flew in all directions, and the horses were only checked by running into a buggy, which latter vehicle was damaged to the extent of about thirty dollars worth, a bill the country youths agreed to settle before the owner of the buggy allowed them to depart.—*Cor. HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

Stimulant for the Hair.—Take of spirits of hartshorn two ounces, lard oil, twelve ounces; shake well together and take care that it is kept tightly bottled.

Cold Cream.—Take of oil of almonds two ounces, spermaceti half an ounce, white wax one dram. Melt together and while cooling add two ounces of rose-water, stirring it until cold.

Gingersnaps.—One cupful of butter, four cupfuls of flour, sifted very fine; one and a half cupfuls of molasses, one teaspoonful of ginger, one-fourth teaspoonful of red pepper, and a teaspoonful of cinnamon. Roll very thin, and bake on flat tins.

Tea Rolls.—One pint of milk, scald and cool; the white of one egg, one tablespoonful yeast, two tablespoonfuls of sugar, one yeast cake. Make stiff enough to mold; let it rise over night, then cut in rounds and fold over; butter the edges and let it rise again before baking.

Raw Hemp Tea.—Take one ounce of hemp; shave with a knife until the seed pulp is removed from the fibers and they remain a white, stringy mass by themselves; add two tablespoonfuls of cold water, and let it soak for fifteen minutes. Give it cold, or, if not liked thus, very slightly warmed.

A Substitute for Bee-Bread.—Bee-meat is believed by many bee-keepers to be the very best substitute for bee-bread, when the latter is not in full supply. The meal should be put in shallow boxes or troughs near the apiary. A few pieces of empty comb put on the meal would soon attract the attention of the bees to it. This food causes the bees to send out hunger and gather swarms than those not similarly treated.

How to Cook a Tough Fowl.—The best way to cook a tough fowl is to fill a wash-boiler one-third full of boiling water. Invert a pan in this, rest the turkey on the pan so that it does not touch the water, steam until tender and then roast. It should be covered tight while steaming. This neither loses flavor nor flavor, while it hastens roasting wonderfully. Chickens may be steamed in a fraud steamer. It is a good plan to cook all fowls in soda-water before cooking.

Yeast.—To a handful of dry hops add boiling water enough to make a strong tea; let it cool; then strain; add to this tea as much flour as will form a stiff dough; set in a warm place to rise for about eight hours. This yeast will be too bitter to be used, so take two-thirds of it and to it add flour as before; let it rise, and prepare it ready for breadmaking. To keep your yeast always on hand and ready, keep back a small portion of the yeast at breadmaking time, mix with a little flour and warm water and set aside until needed next day.

To Clean Brass.—If the brass is very much tarnished, use a little sulphuric acid solution. If spots are imbedded, rub them out with a little powdered pumice-stone. Then wash with water and dry. Mix rotten-stone with sweet oil to a paste, and rub it over the whole surface of the brass with a cork until it assumes a greenish-black color. Then wipe off completely with an old cloth. Next rub over with Lamphlack until thoroughly polished, using a soft, smooth cork. This gives an excellent result, and repays all the extra trouble that it causes.

Cure for Fistula.—Put one pint of alcohol in a bottle; then add one ounce of sulphuric acid. Shake well and see if this will make the bottle moderately warm. If not, add one-half ounce more of the acid. When the bottle cools add one ounce spirits of turpentine. In twenty-four hours it is ready for use. Grease the affected part twice a day for a few days. Then drop off and grease once a day for two weeks. Then every third day until, you include a month from the beginning. Be sure and not quit too soon.

Cream Tapioca Pudding.—Soak one teacupful of tapioca in one pint of new milk over night. In the morning boil one pint of milk and turn it over the tapioca. Stir in a large spoonful of melted butter, a pinch of salt, two large spoonfuls of white sugar, the grated peel of a lemon, and four eggs beaten very lightly, after saving out the whites of two eggs. Stir all together, bake in a pudding dish half an hour, float on the whites of the eggs, lay them over the top of the pudding, scatter sugar over it, and brown for a few moments in the oven.

Wash for Horses' Feet.—A wash or brine of salt and lime is good to wash horses' feet that are driven on pavement or hard ground when the hoof is apt to crack, and it is also good in case of founder. Salt will extract moisture from the atmosphere, which keeps the feet moist. Salt operates nearly like melted grease upon the foot, and renders the hoof tough and pliable. Like a drink of wood saturated with salt water, it is tough, yet moist. Wash the legs above the hoof, hold up the foot and pour into the bottom, and it will sink in and keep the feet in good condition and prevent the hoof from cracking.

Does Farming Pay!

That is a question that occasionally stares us in the face in the best agricultural journals, and as emanating from the editors, but from some doubting ones who obtain access to their columns. "Does farming pay?" Why, indeed, if farming does not pay, what does? What will? Agriculture lies at the base of all National prosperity, and when it does not flourish, or is without vitality, or will not bring more than it costs, there can be no wealth, power or growth. It therefore does pay, and must pay.

Perhaps there are individual farmers who carry on their business in a slovenly, slip-shod way that returns no profits and causes the pursuit to appear like the road to ruin. Farming is like every other profession—it must be conducted with economy, energy and skill. The farmer who plies his work so that he only secures a deficient crop—half a crop or no crop—will fail in the occupation, and discover eventually that his manner of farming does not pay. But the farmer who is industrious, systematic and thorough—who loves his calling—who takes advantage of all his opportunities, will find that farming realizes profits in numerous ways. There are solid returns to place on the credit side of his ledger—a surplus to go to his account in the bank, or to be loaned out on interest to his neighbors, or, what is better, to be expended in necessary and valuable improvements. These answer the question at the head of this article, and solve all that there is problematical in the matter.

But what is the farmer to do who finds that he cannot make his two ends meet after struggling along in the vain effort to ramose his methods to pay? He can give up his farm and hire himself out as a laborer, or he may hie to the town and set up a grocery, only if farming did not pay I can hardly see who would have the means to buy groceries. But if farming did not pay when followed by such a person, it is doubtful whether any other business would.

The farmer must work with his own hands, and every one around him should cheerfully follow his example. It is by being a full of boys, he grows rich as their number and muscular power increase. Even girls are not to be considered as burdens. There is much that they can do to bring in the dimes and dollars, and to make farming pay. The main point to be kept in view at all times by the head of the family is to be sure that his income exceeds his outgo. Then it will be ascertained that farming pays as well as any other undertaking.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

A great many men throughout the country are "going back to farming" this year, and an unusual number of young men are looking out for a start in the same business. The reports that come from the West, of a revival of the old-time importing of new settlers, and that is now the time to take up 40 of 80 farms in New England, are among the best signs of the times. If the men who come to settle start right, and then stick to it, their success may be insured in advance. Want of foresight in choosing, and want of pluck to stick, are at the bottom of half the failures in farming, for it is even more disastrous for a farmer to make sudden and radical changes in his business plans than to "put all his eggs in one basket," by depending on one crop. The farmer who "rotates" from sheep to cows, and from cows to grain, and from grain to fruit, with every fluctuation of the markets, is pretty sure to get in one crop that he can't "raise"—a mortgage.

Every farm is better adapted to some one industry than to any other. If the land is low and springy and cold, fout rot or other diseases will take the profits off of sheep. If there is not plenty of pure cold water and pasturage specially adapted to cows in its chemical characteristics, and that does not shrivel up by the end of July, dairying will not prosper. If the grain-producing elements in the soil are exhausted, or insect enemies or climatic influences interfere, grain crops will fail. If fruit trees must stand with their feet in water, owing to a lack of drainage, orchards will prove disappointing.

Then again, men are as different as their farms. Some have just the knack to bring together a dairy of cows, nearly every one of which shall be a "good milker," and by gentle, clean, provident management secure large returns for the best of products. Another has the faculty of having his land, its acid, his fertilizers, his times and seasons, just right to coax fields of waving grain from the soil. Another will have a flock of sheep, every one of which looks as though bred to enter for the premium at the County Fair. Still another will plant and prune and shape an orchard of half-a-thousand apple trees as they should be planted, and standard, smooth, symmetrical, yielding just such apples, in just such quantities, as he planned when he bought the trees from the nursery. The point is, that every man, in farming as in other occupations, should ascertain what his combined inward forces and outward circumstances will enable him to do best, and do that. As a rule, diversified farming is the best, except in the localities pre-eminently adapted to one branch, like the dairy regions of New York or the natural grain-fields of the West.

A snug little orchard; fields of grain, grass, corn and root crops; a manageable dairy of cows and sheep; a few choice breeding mares; pen of good hogs; a yard of poultry; some extra crops to experiment on—this old-fashioned method is about the safest and most comfortable after all. For specialties require special knowledge and special conditions of success. They are like a one-legged milking stool—can't stand alone; while varied farming has various supports.—Golden Rule.

Grand Teaser, of Carthage, N. C., was furlet at the foot of an old oak that had apparently been dead for several years. The limbs and twigs all fell off, and nothing but the body was left standing as a landmark in the old Phillips churchyard. After Grandy's burial the tree came to life, flourished, and is three feet in diameter at the base, having as fine limbs and boughs as it ever bore.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

Rhoda Broughton has a two-volume novel in press.

Mark Twain has given up the lecture field on account of his health.

Mr. Edison, it is reported, is going to California to try a new process of extracting gold.

Charles G. Leland (Hans Breitmann) is lecturing in Philadelphia on the decorative arts.

G. W. Carle, the author of "The Grandissimes," in Scribner's is a cotton-broker at New Orleans.

General Lew Wallace, Governor of New Mexico, is writing a novel, the scene of which is laid in Damascus.

Simon Pollashe, the Spanish Consul to New York City, smokes his Havanas in a pipe mounted with diamonds worth $750.

Judge Jere. Black is noted for his quiet after struggling along in the vain effort to ramose his methods to pay? He can give up his farm and hire himself out as a laborer, or he may hie to the town and set up a grocery, only if farming did not pay I can hardly see who would have the means to buy groceries. But if farming did not pay when followed by such a person, it is doubtful whether any other business would.

The farmer must work with his own hands, and every one around him should cheerfully follow his example. It is by being a full of boys, he grows rich as their number and muscular power increase. Even girls are not to be considered as burdens. There is much that they can do to bring in the dimes and dollars, and to make farming pay. The main point to be kept in view at all times by the head of the family is to be sure that his income exceeds his outgo. Then it will be ascertained that farming pays as well as any other undertaking.—Cor. Country Gentleman.

Rev. Dr. Peabody, of Harvard University, now at the full age of threescore years and ten, was such a Samson in his youth that a farmer once offered him extra wages if he would enter the harvest-field.

George Pendrard, author of "History of Congregationalism," in his earlier years a minister, and by the editors and publishers of the Traveller, died recently in the seventy-fourth year of his age.

Miss Ella Sherman, the pretty young third daughter of the General, is to be married early in May to Lieutenant Thackara, of the navy. The wedding is to be celebrated at General Sherman's house in Washington.

The Scandinavians in Paris gave a grand banquet in honor of Nordenskold, Arctic explorer, and his Lieutenant, Pellander. Two hundred and twenty persons were present, including Prince Oscar and Christian Allison.

Joaquin Miller's real name is Cincinnatus Heine Miller. His father was a "Westward hoer," always moving and he kept following Greeley's famous advice until he got to Oregon and could go no further unless he swam.

David Davis is a great reader, and as a Circuit Judge on his early days used to carry his saddle-bags full of historical and biographical works. His favorite novel is "David Copperfield," though he has a fondness for Thackeray and Walter Scott.

A book-store salesman hears some laughable mistakes. One day a lady customer in search for Dickens' "David Copperfield," another for the "Schonberg Cotton Factory," a third asks for fourth volume of the French Revolution which will tell her about "Robert Spear guillotining the gridiron," while a fourth wants "Madam Ramcat a Memoirs" of Napoleon.

Mr. James Parton, who has written some of the best and most successful of American biographies, says that an industrious and capable writer can, during his best years, earn $7,000 or $8,000 a year, but that no man should adopt literature as a profession unless he has a fortune, or can live comfortably on $2,000 a year. Mr. Parton's first book was the "Life of Horace Greeley," of which 40,000 copies were sold. Since then he has published a dozen other works, all of which have been very popular. Several of his shorter biographical sketches first appeared in Harper's Magazine, commencing about fifteen years ago.

THE SENTINEL
CHARLEVOIX, MICH.
WILLARD A. SMITH, PUBLISHER.
TUESDAY, SEPT. 9, 1879.

For President
ULYSSES S. GRANT.

For Governor
Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

Republican County Convention.

Why Grant Should be Nominated.

The nomination of our favorite is the love of loyalty to the people. The fear of an empire resulting from a third term arises from a want of confidence in and a misconception of this proposition and liberty. The wise operation, intelligence of the people would not, from reflection and a free vote in the most conservative form, dismember this or another. No other republic has possessed the features for liberty and public tranquility as now exposed in the country, especially as other republics have been so perilously ruled and the hopes of the people. From the days of Rome the peaceful era of the United States, and its extension by the Louisiana purchase, has the most conspicuous mark in the Napoleonic name has constantly given up all effort to reestablish the empire, and the leading Democratic organs are signified its conversion to republicanism. The career of generosity which has crowned upon both sides of the republican of the south, harvest of the sentiment created latterly in the face to fraternalism, something against this poverty which is the inevitable consequence of landed aristocracies on the one hand and taxation without representation on the other, must tend to make permanent the great republican idea of free government, and should the usually enfeebled of the civil war, succeeded to be held by certain politicians that a third terms would endanger the permanency of the republic.

These should be but one question in regard to the choice of a presidential candidate, and that is who is the best man for the position, taking the interests of the country into consideration and leaving out all preferences or claims on the gratitude of the people. To be concise, we will state some of the reasons why we believe ex-President Grant is the best man as the Republican party to nominate at the Chicago convention, and in doing so we assure do what all true republicans should be willing to do, viz: throw aside our individual and personal preferences for the sake of the common good of the whole country.

1. General Grant's experience as president is unquestionably greater than that of any living man.

2. General Grant's traveling has secured an insight to the workings of all the prominent governments of the earth, giving us an advantage possessed by no other person in this or any other country.

3. General Grant is beloved of war and desire for peace prevailes any idea that he would for any avoidable cause plunge the country into either foreign or civil war.

4. The confidence which a personal acquaintance with General Grant has established among the nations of the earth would immensely strengthen United States securities abroad whenever it became known that Grant is president.

5. Confidence is the foundation of commercial prosperity.

6. The plan of making United States consuls and other government representatives abroad commercial agents for extending the commerce of the United States, which Grant proposes to the chamber of commerce, Philadelphia, would, if carried out, greatly promote the demand abroad for United States products and manufactures, and, consequently, keep up the balance of trade in favor of the United States.

7. No other man can so justly by carry out the idea as Grant, being personally acquainted with the wants and circumstances of each foreign country and the kind of men required to accomplish these desirable results.

8. Grant represents and believes in the grand republican principle of equal justice to all men without regard to nationality, complexion, or previous condition.

9. The principle competitor for the Republican nomination, Mr. Blaine, has made himself conspicuous for his disregard of the fundamental republican doctrines, as shown by his speeches in congress on the Chinese question.

10. Grant has shown his contempt for Republicanism by endorsing an interview by Dana Lowrey, the unprincipled demagogue of the Pacific coast.

11. Grant is ready stand against Chinese immigration of the Pacific coast has shown that it would rather be ruled than president.

12. Mr. Blaine by his congressional record of Republicanism, has shown a willingness to exercise the worst principle of republicanism in the shit of his leaders—party political association.

13. Grant is the man of all effort on his part not to become a monument to keep the country into to do the people's will and promote the best interests of the country indicated by personal pledges as rewards for support.

14. Other candidates find personal effort necessary which embarrassments unavoidable.

15. The nomination of Grant and his triumphant election would prevent the country from being trammelled with no unwritten law in reference to the number of terms the people may assign to a president who has gained their confidence by honest, faithful, and patriotic service.

16. President the "unwritten law of precedent," which is much extolled by republican orators, like G. W. Curtis, is the greatest barrier to the nation's progress. It constantly coming between the people and their rights. It is the tory cry by which are entrenched the Episcopal church was a burden to the state, the bench of bishops as a political power in the house of lords, the monarchial hereditary system and absolutism in Poland, and every other despotic feature of the government.

17. A republic with a written constitution expressing the will of the people, wants no imported system of unwritten laws to be construed by politicians to serve their own selfish purposes.

18. There is not likely to occur a better opportunity than the present for the American people to sanction the threatened despotism of an unwritten law of the republic.

19. The republic should assert its right now to rule, choose its own president without being influenced by the bugbear of a supposed established custom.

20. The wise framers of the United States constitution refused to trammel the country with a limitation as to the terms for president, and the Republican party should show equal wisdom by virtually refusing to endow a president with all the power of constitutional authority.

21. Confidence in the virtue and intelligence of a free people is better than law written or unwritten.

22. Those who desire to trammel the country with precents with established precedents show their want of faith in the free choices of an intelligent people.

23. Sound, popular education is the best safeguard against revolution.

24. General Grant favors education, which is an evidence that he is opposed to empire.

25. General Grant is not only honest and patronage but is universally known to be so.

26 General Grant has, in an eminent degree, the affection and confidence of the people, without regard to political affiliation.

27. General Grant is modest and unassuming. His conduct becomes a universality which they do not possess by right, efforts to promote their own personal elevation.

28. By nominating Mr. Blaine the present the Republican party would virtually commit itself to the support of the most disgraceful element of Pacific coast politics, wherein by nominating Grant it would maintain the grandest principles of republicanism, which Grant is well known to support.

29. The election of Blaine might lead to complications, if not to open war, with the oldest empire on earth now holding friendly and profitable commercial intercourse with this country.

30. The election of Grant would be understood throughout the world as a reaffirmation of the doctrine that the American people from whatever cause, of all nations.

31. Grant represents republicanism in its purest form of principle.

32. Mr. Blaine represents republicanism more from a politician's standpoint.

33. Grant will command the support of the patriotic of all parties, north and south.

33. Grant has never been beaten.

Now if any one can give as many, and as good, reasons for the support of Mr. Blaine, or any of the other aspirants to presidential honors, let us hear from him.

The writer of this, although always a Republican, was not an original Grant man, but has been won over by the simple, direct, manly, straightforward action and utterances of the ex-president, and a careful study of the whole situation from an independent, Republican standpoint.—Cor. Allegan Journal.

Prices range from three to one hundred dollars per acre. Most of these lands are covered with magnificent Maple, Rock Elm and Beech. Good, lively soil, well watered, and the healthiest climate in the world. For particulars address

EDWARD H. GREEN,
Charlevoix, Mich.

Republican principles will never die; but will triumphant as long as the memory of Lincoln lives in the hearts of the people and the victories of Grant are recorded on the flags of loyal states.

The Republican party has always lived up to its pledges. It promised the people honest money and it redeemed its promise fully and completely when specie payments were resumed.

The Republican party watched the country in the hour of peril, and placed the flag of the nation so high above all perils and danger as to render it a mark for the admiration of the nations of the world.

Organization and harmony are the support of all associations, especially of the Republican party. It is members therefore are to it that the complete harmony that now exists is maintained, and thorough organization secured.

Maine, Kansas, Rhode Island and Iowa have chosen Blaine delegates to Chicago while Connecticut sends a delegate to Chicago whose first choice is Edmunds and second choice Grant. The choice of the Vermont delegates is Senator Edmunds with Grant as second choice.

The state of Michigan is entitled to 22 delegates to the Republican national convention and to 22 alternate delegates. The convention will be held at Chicago, June 1st. Michigan's state convention to nominate delegates to Chicago will be held at Detroit, May 12, at 11 o'clock a. m.

We commend the patriotic view, from the Indianapolis Journal, upon the great issue soon to be decided: "The Republican party is not large enough to divide, and the interests at stake in the next election are so great to admit of personal preference and private feelings being taken into account. The first duty of every Republican is to hold himself in such a position that he can give the standard bearer of the party in the next presidential contest may be, can give his undivided and unreserved efforts to the success of the party.

SEIDLITINE.

Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. 8 cents each. All druggists keep.

LAXATINE.

Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. 25 cents per box. All druggists keep.

From Dennis Donovan, Pastor of the Church of the Immaculate Conception, Detroit, Mich.—"My son was dangerously ill and entirely paralyzed from his waist. Every remedy and physician we could obtain had been tried without effect. Mr. Cady who had used Thermalene as a tonic, advised us to try it, which was done, resulting in his complete recovery within a few days."

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.

Are endorsed, recommended and prescribed by Physicians of the Leading Homœopathic Colleges. They will cure any constipation in one week. The best Bowel Regulator in existence. Given per box, with full directions. Expense small, only 75 cents. Express paid on orders of $1.00. Any druggist can obtain them for you, or they will be sent by mail, postage paid, on receipt of price by DUNDAS BECK & CO., Mfg. Chemists, 55 Wooster Street, New York.

DR. BARBER'S INHALER
IN OPERATION.

The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect inhaler ever invented.

Other vapor making inhalers carry the vapor in a circle for it's destination is only to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's inventive wisdom is free from all unwholesome qualities through pure water, making it a healthful breathing instrument.

CATARRH

Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by inhalation. Dr. Barber's inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the sore and inflamed surfaces, and reaches at the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself, not a quack nostrum for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of high-priced "secret" nostrums.

All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler, because it cures in all stages. It cures Bronchitis, it relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Catarrh, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It furnishes

The ONLY TRUE WAY to CURE all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the common sense, rational and complete treatment ever known.

Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have handed a great deal of health every week. But sufferers who have been deceived by delusive advertisements will require some evidence of the genuineness of this treatment. Such a great discovery, to know all about it costs you only a postal card. Give address plainly and name of paper containing this notice. Address the sole manufacturers

Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil.

"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Willson's exclusive process." — Dr. Wells.

All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Willson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. Its purity and readily digested where all similar preparations are rejected by the stomach, and immediately enters into the circulation, giving nourishment to the whole system. The nutritious properties of the oil remain and tends on one hand, while the active curative properties of the preparation continues the work of healing.

Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach.
Is free from Unpleasant Taste.
Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.

It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Anæmia, Bronchitis, Influenza, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness and all Lung and constitutional complaints.

As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil is a remarkable efficient. In the Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., is strongly recommended. Its purifying power is wonderful in Consumption, — spreading, as it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.

It acts upon the external surface of DYSPEPTIC ASSIMILATION, as well as upon the digestive organs, enabling it to throw off the disease.

In more than ordinary skin and testimonials during the past seven years prove its superiority.

WILLSON'S CARBOLATED (NORWEGIAN) COD LIVER OIL is sold only in large wedge Shaped Bottles. Wilson is stamped with a medallion "D." Remember, the word "Carbolated" is inserted in the glass, over, and inserted in the label.

THE Geneva Award bill was further debated in the Senate on the 10th. Mr. Hassard, from the Committee on Finance, reported, with amendments, the senate bill to provide for the appointment of a commission to investigate the question of tariff. Mr. Slater introduced a bill forfeiting all the United States unearned lands granted to the Portland, Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad Company by the act of May 4, 1870, and for other purposes. Mr. Dorsey made a speech in the House on the Army Appropriation bill, explaining the disproportionate number of troops at the posts, after which the consideration was taken up by sections. Several sections were adopted at that point in the bill and the bill was then laid aside. The Senate passed without debate the bill relating to trespass on the Fort Smith reservation in Arkansas. The bill was amended so as to except the mineral lands from the operation of the act. Mr. Morrill, from the Committee on Finance, reported back the Rev. Mr. Eldred made us a pleasant call yesterday.

The Good Templars have received their organ.

Geo. Hughes caught a large sturgeon near the outer dock, Thursday.

A new stock of Boots & Shoes as good as there is in town at Byron Sees.

Wm. Mears, of Boyne Falls, made us a pleasant call one day last week.

A new invoice of clothing and Dry Goods just received at Carpenter & Barthelomew's.

Miss Kate Graves, the popular music teacher, still sojourns in town and has a class of piano scholars.

The lecture of Hon. E. H. Green on Monday evening was well attended, and an able address.

Worse.—A dispatch last evening from Detroit stated that Richard O'Neill was worse and summoned his wife hither.

Meleod on Friday received from Milwaukee four fat cattle, six fat hogs, and six sheep, to supply his meat market.

The Susan Lake Mission Indians have raised enough money to purchase the site on which their church stands, and yesterday it was deeded to them.

Trout.—A party consisting of J. L. Schring, H. W. Page, Geo. Smiley, and R. Cooper, with a guide caught 232 trout in Horton's Creek Saturday.

Real Estate.—A. R. Upright on Thursday sold to Levi House, of Hayes, the N. E. ¼ and Lot 3 of Section 19, in Hayes. Consideration, $1,000.

Fire Department.—Chief Engineer Miller announces that there will be a meeting at Town Hall Thursday evening, to organize a Village fire department.

We call the attention of our readers to the advertisement of W. S. Levitt, in this issue. Mr. Levitt is an experienced tailor and [illegible] permanently locate with us, we hope our people will give him good patronage.

The Board of Supervisors of this county are to meet in July to organize two new Townships in the eastern portion of the county. It is generally understood that this means war on the county seat question.

The Bridge Street Grade.—The Village Council, at a special meeting last Tuesday evening, voted to modify previous instructions in relation to the grading of Bridge street, so as to conform more to the original contour of the street. Very little more cutting or filling will be done, but leveled up at about present grade and graveled.

Excursion to Chicago.—Hannah, Lay & Co., of Traverse City, have arranged a grand excursion to Chicago on the occasion of the National Republican Convention, June 3d. To Republicans.

The Republicans of Charlevoix county have a few things to think of before the active skirmishing of the coming summer's campaign opens.

First, we must have unity.

All local considerations that tend to awaken strife and discord in the party, should be laid aside, and the Republicans of every Township look toward a common object; viz: a glorious Republican victory next fall.

To insure this, we must exercise generosity, and a spirit of justice in the selection of nominees for county officers, as regards locality; selecting good men and men whom we know to be such.

In all things which concerns the good of the party, let us throw selfish bickerings to the winds, and unitedly look to the success of the cause in November.

Norwood Notes.

There are probably few places in Michigan of the size of Norwood where the usual Thursday evening prayer meeting is so largely attended as here, and the most remarkable part of it is that the majority of those who attend are young people who do not make any profession of religion. We observed that the number in attendance at the last meeting was something over fifty. The good order and interest that is manifested is also highly worthy of mention.

A necktie social, gotten up by the young people, for the benefit of the Methodist Minister, was held in Good Templar's Hall on Wednesday evening. The receipts were about $17, and the evening was spent very pleasantly.

Mr. Wm. Phelps has moved from the Eagle House to the Methodist parsonage. Mr. Johnson of Northport was in town Wednesday night, the guest of F. J. Meech [illegible]

The only son of Mr. Chester Denton, aged two years lacking three days, died on Friday evening, April 23d after a brief illness. He was a very bright and promising child, and the sorrowing parents have the sympathy of the whole community.

Dr. Chamberlain's household goods have arrived from Detroit, and the Eagle House is being thoroughly renovated and repaired for his immediate use as a residence.

Mr. David C. Chamberlain a young man and nephew of Dr. Chamberlain has arrived from Canada, with a view of remaining an indefinate length of time.

The steamer City of Grand Rapids made her first call at this dock Tuesday the 27.

A vessel loaded with railroad ties and hemlock bark by Mr. Wm. Flanigan, cleared for Chicago on Wednesday night, and another arrived on Tuesday night for Mr. F. J. Meech, which is being loaded with ties.

Greenback meeting in the school house on Friday evening, the speaker's name we did not learn.

Mrs. Wm. F. Pearl has gone to Little Traverse for a few days.

Mrs. F. J. Meech and Miss Nellie Meech gave their Sabbath school classes a supper and entertainment on Friday evening April 23d. Of course, no one doubts the enjoyable character of the occasion.

30—Schr Kearsage, 140,000 feet lumber for John Nicholls to Chicago.
[illegible]
May 4—Scow Supply, 30 cords wood, 30 bark, to D Bartholomew to Milwaukee

—The schooner Rob Roy arrived to day with hold full of wood and deck-load of lumber, and the Hercules is taking deck load of wood in the harbor.

—The schooners Minnie Mueller and Ashtabula arrived in port Sunday evening. The former is after ties for March.

—The schooner Nellie Church and scow Contest arrived Saturday, and are loading up Pine Lake.

The Resort.—J. L. Schring, H. W. Page and Geo. Smiley, all of Kalamazoo, arrived in town one day last week. These gentlemen constitute a Committee of the Resort Association, and are here for the purpose of inaugurating certain improvements on their grounds, and effecting the purchase of about seven acres of land which lies between their present plat and Round Lake and the upper cut, and owned respectively by Messrs. Dixon, J. M. Clark, Green, Buttars, Stockman and A. C. Newman. Negotiations are in progress, and the property will undoubtedly be transfered this week. The consideration is to be $100 per acre.

—Mr. Roberts has the frame up of the Ramsay cottage. It is to be one of the finest on the grounds, cost about $600.

PROCEEDINGS

Of the Board of Supervisors of Charlevoix County, April 28, 1880.

Pursuant to call a full Board were present at the above date.

Mr. Harris, of Norwood, was elected Chairman for the ensuing year.

Claims—Kent, Niles and Ward.
Roads, Bridges and Ferries—Barrie, Stroud and Darrah.

Moved by Mr Kent that that the Board follow the order of business laid down in Tibbitt's Manual. Carried.

On motion of Mr. Darrah the Clerk was instructed to purchase a copy of Tibbitts' Supervisor's Manual for the use of the Board.

A petition was presented by Mr. Robinson, signed by G. Hatch and seven other residents of Bear Lake Township, in reference to establishing certain section corners in said Town. Added to special order.

A petition was read signed by 30 residents of Melrose, Bear Lake and Evangeline, in reference to detaching certain portions of Melrose and Evangeline from said Townships, and attaching the same to Bear Lake Township. Granted.

A petition was presented by Mr. Kent signed by John Monroe, asking for an amendment to a resolution of the Board at its October session, in reference to a bond required of said Monroe regarding the construction of a certain dam across Jordan River.

On motion the Board went into Committee of the Whole on said petition.

After due consideration, the committee arose, and through its Chairman, Mr. Darrah, reported as follows: That said bond be amended to read as follows:

That the said John Monroe be required to keep a good and sufficient [illegible] to construct a roll-way [illegible] from the lower end of the dam and connect the head of such water created by said dam. Also that he be required to construct and keep in repair a sufficient and sufficient windlass and other appliances for the passing of boats through the sluice in said dam. [illegible] or his Deputies to be instructed to carry into effect the regulations in relation to said dam.

Adopted.

On special order it was moved that a committee of three be appointed to report on said petitions at October meeting.

Amended by Mr. Ward that said petitions be laid on the table.

On motion Mr. Bradley was excused from voting.

On the amendment:

Ayes—Ayers, Burgess, Ward, Kent—4.
Nays—Pinkerton, Darrah, Robinson, Niles, Stroud, Bailey, Miller—7.

Lost.

On original motion:

Ayes—Pinkerton, Darrah, Robinson, Niles, Stroud, Bailey, Bradley, Miller—8.

Levi House, of Hayes, on Tuesday entered the post-office and received a letter from his box. Soon after he asked the postmaster to open his letter for him, as his hand trembled. That official did as requested, and disclosed to Mr. House's gaze a Pension Department draft for $1,5[illegible]6, that being the amount of back pension awarded Mr. House. Mr. House has like many other in this county endured many privations incident to a homestead life, and now that assistance has come to him, we are glad. Mr. House used $1,000 of his money in the purchase of 80 acres adjoining him, which is well fenced, and has twenty-five acres of clearing.

Dr. M. L. Leach, who was a temporary resident of Charlevoix several years ago, well known to many of our citizens, has returned to engage in the practice of medicine. The doctor will respond promptly to all calls for his professional services. He will visit by boat any point on Pine Lake [illegible] the patient may be located

Hard-Headed People.

THE hard-headed man is almost invariably successful. "Luck!" he says. "There's no such thing as luck. I built my own fortune brick by brick, simply took no steps backward." But the truth is that Fate gave him in his cradle sharper sight and a cooler brain than the rest of us, and he has been exciting and sharpening them ever since. No nurse could frighten him with bugaboos or the dark; and no clergyman's talk of remorse or the judgment-day affects him now. He has never slept wrong: why should he be afraid? Naturally over anxious, his character. He was known as a "clear-headed fellow" when he played marbles, like-log and worn pentlemen. His father never romped with him; and his mother, telling the dear old Bible stories, observed when she caught his keen, incredulous eye. Angels, she remembered, did seem so very unlikely after all, when one looked at things in a common sense way; and as for the old heroes and martyrs she was ashamed to let him see the glow of awe with which she thought of them. Could they have really found no more practical method of advancing the Gospel than by going through the rack and fire?

He was a cynical little doubter as a boy, but as a man he came to be known as a Christian to all his customers and as a trade-man to all Christians who had to buy supplies. But he prefers church-going people as patrons; they pay their bills promptly. And he thinks that the christian religion teaches sound business principles. It is honesty that wins in the long run in the market; and it is the fair dealer whose profits are the biggest. He is a successful a man that the public always give him credit either for genius or luck; but he has neither the one nor the other. He simply knows the market, and has no higher aim than to please it. He is a tradesman, he catches the curious glimmer of the coming whim of fashion and fills his shop with it. He is an author, his are the "made" books, which nobody can do without; his pictures, if he has given himself to art, are those popular studies of babies and young mothers at prayer which are first marked at the exhibition rooms. If he has devoted his life to science, he seizes the crude invention of some visionary fellow, gives it a practical use, patents it, and makes his fortune. If he is a physician, he is always at hand in an epidemic to treat; you will seldom miss his name out of the papers. If he is a clergyman, he is always master of the occasion of the hour, ready to preach upon any subject upon which the public has temporarily gone mad. It really does not matter to him where the hobby goes, so that he sits astride it. Other men in their middle-age times upon good fortune hiding in the field. He has no wait for it, catches it when it is tamest. He knows how to ride his time, he is a sad spa sort.

If he happens not to be a man, but a woman, you usually find this shrewd hard-headed creature a thin-lipped, pale-eyed leader of the "best society," whether fast and fashionable or sternly pious depends altogether on the accident of her position. She is usually, however, so immaculate as to her own morals as to have no mercy for any shortcomings in others. The New-Testament system of charity, in her opinion, wernicle and bad. If she had been there she would have given the man bees by thieves a ticket for work to a ward committee, instead of oil and wine; and she would have handed the Magdalene over to a policeman to make sure that she sinned no more. This lady is always known as a capital manager of servants, sometimes as a church suppers or her sons' wives. She can get an incredible amount of work for small wages out of the people in the kitchen. Her neighbors (easy, thrifless creatures, to her mind) look on with envy. Neither she nor her husband's life-engineer has at heart the slightest faith in any man or woman but themselves. If is they who can lay an unerring finger on the one black spot of character which your friend keeps hidden, be it freckle or bloodstain. They know human nature. You shall not humbug them!

The possessions of wealth, of public esteem, and of ideas of this hard-headed citizen are all so substantial that he is the man whom the world always trusts most. It does not love him probably half so much as some luckless, lovable, sinful Lazarus staring at his gate, who had but the crumbs from the rich man's table here, and is not at all sure of Abraham's bosom hereafter. But what is that? He has been shrewd, rational, practical. He has sought solid goods in the world: money, influence, respect and he has gained them. As for that vague, cloudy world of love, friendship, imagination, he knows nothing about it; he has invested nothing in it and he expects no dividends. His neighbor, a widow in rusty black (one of the easy, irrational sort), gave all of her labor and thoughts to a sickly husband and son, who are now both dead. What improvident folly that was! Now, the most real things in the world to her are the love they gave her, the Heaven to which they are gone, the God who cares for her and them. He listens to her as to a dying man who babbles of green fields that live only in his fevered fancy. God and Heaven and love are to him only poetic names.

Perhaps, as he nears the end, the withered little atom of a heart in him stirs feebly, and craves a late tenderness from some one; but a smile or once given a shoulder-shrug is all he will get when he fell dead from exhaustion. The other is on the verge of his solid goods and goes out. They all are left, but he is gone. His hands yonder must be quite empty. His forlorn little neighbor is gone, too; but people talk with a smile of the home which was ready for her and the friends who were waiting. There are certainties which outlast money or goods upon which our hard-headed friend did not lay his hand.—N. Y. Ivanoe.

A Mean Trick.

THERE is a large and influential class of people in th's world who think they are falling into obscurity if they are not inventing advice to their fellow men. They know a remedy for everything, from a cold down to the happy mode of electing a President of the United States. A gentleman of this kind is a clerk in a Market Street store, and he feels who is suffering from anything, no matter what it is, can come into that store and get good advice. The other day a man came in limping painfully, and with wonderful energy, instantly destroying and showing axes, supplies of all sorts, which was about half a mile south at this point. Lieutenant Cross was in command, and when stopped met the dark herself, pistol in hand. Before any blows were struck those formidable and noisy bags, filled with provisions, were seized and carried a great distance. The noise of the fight drew the whole village to the scene and scenes of infernal people made a hasty retreat. The destitution and suffering were terrible. The destitution and suffering were terrible. The destitution and suffering were terrible

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, MAY 4th, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880,

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

FOR LIEUTENANT GOVERNOR,

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

An Interesting Letter

The following is a letter from Hon. Geo. Esterly, father of Mrs. John Nicholls, of this place, to a Whitewater, Wis., paper Mr. Esterly is with a party in Florida, for his health.

Our party arrived at St. Louis on the morning of the 22, and was met at the "Lindell" by Julius C. Birge, who spent the day showing us the sights. At 5 p. m. we dined at the "St. Louis Club" room, which, by the way, are fitted up in superb style. Ladies are invited once a week, members can invite their friends being out of the city, at time with them at the Club House. During the afternoon Mr. Birge took us to Shaw's Garden, and other prominent places in the city.

We took tea with Mr. and Mrs. Birge after which we were driven to the Union depot, and left for Mobile at 8:30 p. m. accompanied by Mr. Waller, through whose kindness we received our invitation.

At Union City, Ky., we were met by Col. Brown, who is general representative of the Virginia properties. He is Vice President, General Manager, Superintendent and Chief Engineer of the Mobile and Ohio R. R. all of which positions he appears to be entirely competent to fill.

This road is in the most perfect order. We made 20 miles an hour stopping, engages to Mobile. Every five miles to miles an hour over the entire line. The grading and ballasting are perfect. They have nothing but sand and clay mixed for ballast, yet notwithstanding the very great storm, in consequence of which the road was flooded in many places as we passed, the track was in perfect order, the ties being bedded their entire length. The last rail was raised in the centre a little higher than the top of the ties, shunting to the lower edge of out end, as the ties were all of equal length, and perfect in line, it gave the track a fine appearance. The ditches were kept clear, and the sides of the cuts made beautifully rounded down.

All of the buildings on the line, belonging to the Company, are all of the same color, and all are neat and tidy. At Union City, Col. Brown is building a fine eating house, in connection with a hotel, with all the modern improvements, which will be open to the public in 30 days. At Artesia Miss. the Company have an eating house, which is all the most fastidious traveler will require.

Their railroad shops at Mobile are said by first-class judges, not to be surpassed in the United States, for neatness, order and completeness. The Rivers has also established a line of Steamers between Mobile and Havana, via Cedar Keys, and Key W st, and a line of ocean Steamers between Mobile and Liverpool, one of which was loading at the dock when we left. With such important connections, the Mobile and Ohio R. R. must soon become one of the prominent lines between the United States and Europe.

Our party was very much disappointed to learn at Meridian, that Mr. Walter, could not accompany us to Havana, as he had expected to do when we left St. Louis. We are under lasting obligations to him for his many courtesies extended to us between St. Louis and Mobile, and which extend to Havana.

At Mobile we were accommodated at the Battle House, a very good hotel. In consequence of the boat not being ready to leave on Monday, as understood, we were detained until Tuesday at 10 a. m. which gave us time to take in the city, and have a drive over the shell road, which extends several miles along the shore of Mobile Bay. This is a very fine drive, the road being lined for miles, with Magnolias and other flowering trees, which were just budding, these being occasionally one in full bloom. We saw many good residences, beautifully surrounded with flowering trees and shrubs. The public buildings are neat but not elaborate. The post office is of the usual style of U. S. public buildings. The post master we found very much of a gentleman, who informed us that he was in the Union Army and was an intimate friend of Gen. Harrison, of our state.

As we were about to leave Mobile, Col. Rivers sent me word by Mr. Waller, that notwithstanding his superior appreciation of General Washington, I was not only a Virginian, but a relative) he had ordered a special car to New Orleans with an invitation to General Grant to visit Mobile, and he had directed it to be liberally supplied with cigars of the finest quality. Colonel, while a Democrat, has a high regard for General Grant, and said he thought the Republicans of the South would go unanimously for him.

At 1 p.m. we left Mobile yesterday, at 10 a.m. we took breakfast Wednesday, 11:30 a. m. are some 230 miles on our way to Cedar Keys where we expect to arrive this evening, and where I will mail you this. We have been all day out of sight of land, and a more beautiful day I never saw. I am writing in the cabin, and I find no trouble from the motion of the boat. Some of our passengers have been quite sick but none of the party. Dr. Whitewater have shown any signs of retiring up their accounts.

Hoping Whitewater is all right, and enjoying itself hugely in our absence, I am, Yours, on the Gulf of Mexico,

G. E.

P. S. 6 p.m.—We have just had a most splendid supper, on kernels of "King-fish," caught by our party, we caught this afternoon 6 large king fish, from 2 feet 6 inches to 3 feet long, and one Spanish mackerel 24 feet long, caught by Mr. Partridge.

LATER.—We are now lying at the dock in Cedar Keys, Florida, in sight of Faber's Pencil Factory, got in about midnight, they are now, 10 a. m., unloading freight, will leave this afternoon for Key West. They are using a steam hoisting machine to unload, which shakes the boat more than the waves did, we have had no rough weather. Have been ashore and bought an orange, for which I paid 20 cents, that measures 24 inches around. This town contains 600 inhabitants; lots 25x100 feet are worth $400, where the tide overflows them several feet, and the same price on Main street for corner lots. The lots are laid out 100 feet on the street, and 25 feet deep. The town is a succession of lagoons and sand knolls, country back of it sparsely settled. Notwithstanding, they have several good stores here, much larger than we have. Trade comes here from 100 miles up and down the coast. Several lines of steamers run. Ships are here from Mexico, taking on ties and timbers for railroads, also from England, taking on lumber. Faber's Pencil Factory is near by us in plain sight, and I should think as large as Cedar Keys, or nearly so. The village has, besides Faber's Factory, a Saw Mill that gets out lumber for Liverpool. The town, I think, is much higher and situation much better than Cedar Keys for residences.

Grant in the Ascendency.

State after state is falling into line for General Grant's nomination for president of the Chicago national Republican convention. We have closely recorded the glorious results achieved in New York, Pennsylvania and Texas, and now comes Missouri and Kentucky to swell the Grant boom. The national convention is to consist of twice the number of presidential electors. Each of the eight territories and the District of Columbia will be entitled to two delegates in the national convention to be held at Chicago June 2d. In that case the convention will consist of 756 delegates, of which number 379 will be necessary to a choice. Now who is to be the lucky man? With the exception of North Carolina (where a Sherman delegation is said to have been chosen) the vote of the southern loyalists and Republicans will be cast solid for General Grant, the colored vote being almost a unit for Grant. Quite a number of northern states have not yet held their conventions; among others, Grant's own state, Illinois; which will doubtless cast forty-two votes for him. Nebraska, Minnesota, Colorado, Nevada, Oregon and Wisconsin. The Michigan delegation will doubtless go to Chicago uninstructed but will be for Blaine, as the Maine statesman is the undoubted first choice of the Republican of this state. As to the result at Chicago there is no room to doubt. U. S. Grant will be our nominee. In case the delegation from Ohio is divided in its preference, Mr. Sherman has announced that he will withdraw. It is given out from Washington that the secretary's friends will cast their votes for General Grant. As an intelligent contemporary says:

The difficulty in making a specifice estimate is that some states will instruct their delegations to vote as a unit as has Pennsylvania, while others will leave their delegates to act upon individual responsibility. Another difficulty in forming an estimate is the rush that is almost invariably made in conventions to record the votes of the states for the successful candidate when it becomes evident who is the coming man. If Blaine or Sherman should poll such a vote upon an informal ballot as to make it evident that Grant would be nominated on the first formal ballot he would be apt to receive the almost unanimous vote of the convention. The probabilities therefore is that General Grant will make such a showing of strength at the very outset that he will be nominated on the first ballot or by acclamation. Indeed, we anticipate that his strength will be so well developed within the next few days as to make his nomination a foregone conclusion. The people have willed it, and while they have the most profound admiration for the other distinguished gentlemen who have been mentioned for the presidential candidacy, they feel and believe that Grant is the only man who can meet the exigencies of the hour. They know that if they elect him, he will take his seat in the presidential chair. The confederate Democracy might attempt to "count out" silver men but General Grant they have learned to let alone. He will be the next President of the United States.—Hogan Journal.

THE SENTINEL.

WILLARD V. SMITH, Editor and Proprietor.

CHARLEVOIX, : : MICHIGAN.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

IN the Senate on the 20th the House amendments to the bill for an international exhibition in New York in 1883 were concurred in. Adverse reports were made on the bills to increase the pensions of wounded soldiers of the war of 1812, and in relation to the compensation and expenses of Pension Agents, and they were indefinitely postponed. Messrs. Edmunds and Thurman spoke on the Census Apportionment bill. Bills were passed in the House providing that all banks within the line of the Fort Riley military reservation shall be open to homestead settlement and preemption entry, and creating a new land district in Kansas. On motion that part of the day's session was occupied in a continuous executive session that all general debate in Committee of the Whole on the Special Deficiency bill should cease at five minutes past 4 o'clock on memory demanding an hour and a half for the debate, and then followed by vote on pending amendments, thus leaving the House to vote on the general bill. The rule on the bill for the reimbursement of bills on the private calendar, and absent and absolute pension bills were disposed of.

IN the Senate on the 21st Mr. Hoar's amendment to the Geneva Award bill, to strengthen the provisions for the payment of the claims of underwriters, was agreed to—48 to 18. Mr. Thurman stated that he could not support the bill as amended, and did not wish to remain in charge of it. A motion to indefinitely postpone the measure was adopted—29 to 26—and a motion to reconsider was tabled—28 to 25. Mr. Morrow, from the Committee on Naval Affairs, reported favorably (without amendment) the bill authorizing the equipment of an expedition to the Arctic Sea. The conference over the question of detail on the Special Deficiency Appropriation bill was continued. In the House the Republican members withholding their votes and thus indicating the want of a quorum; Mr. McMahon finally withdrew his motion to adjourn. The naval appropriation bill was reported and referred to the Committee of the Whole.

THE Army Appropriation bill was taken up in the Senate on the 22d. Blaine made his strike out Section 2, which provides "that no money appropriated in the said bill to be used for the maintenance or support of armies, except for the purpose of keeping in repair and preserving such fortifications and other works as may have been commenced prior to the passage of this act, or may be thereafter ordered by the President of the United States, or such as may be necessary for the proper defense and security of such of the forts, harbors, arsenals, dock-yards, and other places as are now in the occupation of the United States." Mr. Blaine's object was to prevent the use of troops as a police force to keep the peace at the polls at any election held within any State, provided that nothing in the provisions shall be construed to prevent the use of troops to protect any portion of the United States against invasion or obstruction to the laws or the process of the United States." The Senate refused to strike out the section—29 to 27—and then adopted it—29 to 27—the vote being a party one. Mr. Edmunds then offered an amendment to the effect that the section should not be held to apply to any case in which the application of the military force of the United States is authorized by the Constitution and laws, and to any case in which such force may be employed to suppress domestic violence. After some discussion the amendment was rejected—29 to 26. The Naval Appropriation bill was then taken up and Mr. McDonald made a proposition, which was accepted by the Republican side, limiting debate on the pending bill to-day to-morrow and twenty minutes each, to be equally divided between the Republican and Democratic members.

THE Post-Route bill was passed in the Senate on the 23d. The debate on the resolution declaring Henry M. Stafford out entitled to the seat in the Senate held by Mr. Kellogg was resumed. Mr. Hoar spoke in support of the claim of Mr. Kellogg. Mr. Thurman followed against that proposition. Mr. Lamar spoke in favor of the resolution declaring Mr. Stafford entitled to the seat. Mr. Kellogg addressed the Senate in support of his claim. Mr. Hoar closed the debate in favor of Mr. Kellogg. The Senate then proceeded to the consideration of executive business, and after a short time the doors were reopened. The House bill to provide for the payment of the claims of underwriters, who agreed to abide by the Treaty of Washington, and to refer the question of the liability of the United States to the Geneva Award, was reported from the Committee on Foreign Affairs, with a recommendation that it do not pass

From Boyne Falls.

EDS. SENTINEL:

The correspondent of the Boyne City Standard, who appears to be of opposition proclivities, clearly demonstrates to the public that his mind and understanding far exceed his knowledge and appreciation of the material advantages of this Township. Being called to the county convention of Nov. 2nd and results as evident of his laudable endeavors and accommodativeness, we look it our duty to remind him that the per diem of holding conventions, and holding office is $2 per day, not $1.25. Clearly showing a balance of 60 cents per day in favor of this town.

The Boyne Valley Rod and Gun Club is at present in a flourishing condition and the Secretary in such a manner as to convey the impression that that department of said organization is in a healthy condition. By means of which, and others of a similar nature, we are enabled to keep our game down, and thereby add much to the comfort of those who visit the old orchards, with the exception of a few of our young men who, we are sorry to say, are in the habit of shooting at anything that flies, and in so doing destroy the birds of song, which are the only music we have in the spring of the year. Hoping that the Standard will, for the future, refrain from misrepresenting the affairs of this township, we remain, Yours truly,

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

GRAHAM BISCUITS.—To a quart of graham flour add sufficient thin, sweet cream to make a stiff dough, beat until light, and bake in a moderately hot oven.

HYGIENIC GRIDDLE CAKES.—Three cups purified middlings, one cup graham flour, one egg, one teaspoonful saleratus, a little salt. Mix with sour milk. Use a hot griddle and serve immediately.

COCOANUT DROPS.—Beat the whites of two eggs stiff with four ounces of sugar, then stir in four ounces of desiccated cocoanut. If the fresh is used it must be grated, and dried in a porcelain kettle until like flour; add a tablespoonful of a cup of fine cracker crumbs; make the mixture into small pointed cakes, and bake until a light brown on the top and bottom.

TO CLEAN BLACK MATERIALS.—Take the article you wish to clean, on the side you intend to make up as the right side; brush well all the dust out of it, then take a piece of black flannel or an old black woolen stocking (it must always be black); dip it into cold coffee, and sponge well the material all over, also the lining of each piece or breadth like; then fold up each piece or breadth nice and even, and let it remain damp for three or four hours. Iron on the wrong side, and the old dusty, shabby dress will look just as fresh and bright as new.

BAKED SHAD.—One shad, two ounces of butter, one-half teaspoonful of pepper, one-half teaspoonful of salt. Split the shad, when cleaned, directly through the back-bone with a strong sharp knife. Grease the broiler slightly, place the shad, with its back, and broil over a quick fire for ten minutes. When done, remove quickly from the broiler, dress with the butter, pepper and salt, and send it to the table as hot as possible. The dish may be garnished with lemon quarters and a sprig of parsley at either end.

ROLL JELLY CAKE.—Sift two teaspoons of cream of tartar with two cups of flour (measured after sifting.) Dissolve one teaspoon of soda, in three tablespoons of cot water. Beat six eggs, whites and yolks separately. Add two cups of sugar to the yolks, put in half the flour, then the soda, the balance of the flour and the whites of the eggs. Bake in a thin, even sheet in a large dripping pan; when done turn onto the bedding board; spread with jelly and roll up without delay. Wrap a napkin about the roll to keep it in shape.

ROCK CREAM.—Boil a teacupful of the best rice till quite soft in new milk, sweetened with powdered loaf sugar, and pile it upon a dish; put on it in different places several lumps of either currant jelly or preserved fruit of any kind; beat up the whites of five eggs to a stiff froth with a little powdered sugar, and flavor with either orange flower water or vanilla; add to this, when beaten very stiff, about a teaspoonful of rich cream, and drop it over the rice, giving it this form of a rock of snow. This will be found to be a very ornamental as well as delicious dish for a supper table.

RAISING WATERMELONS.—Select a good piece of ground—soil is the best. Plow it well and then harrow and roll it. Now mark it off twelve or thirteen feet each way. This allows the vines to run only six or six and a half feet each way, which is not too much. The seed should be soaked about twenty-four hours, then planted, putting half a dozen seeds in a hill. They should be thinned afterward to three in a hill. Plow and hoe them well, but do not leave the dirt loose. It should be pressed tight around hill and vine with your feet. When you think the vines have run far enough pinch off the ends. This will cause them to stop running and to bear more.

PAINTED FLOORS.—A correspondent of the Country Gentleman writes: I should like to tell how we got our painted floor hard and dry, so that it will stand the wear of a large family. Our floor is made of narrow yellow-pine planks, clear of knots; a splendid floor for a kitchen, and we have always kept it painted. This winter we treated it as follows: As fast as the floor was painted we laid strips one inch square on the painted surface, and on these strips boards were laid snug, using as long boards as the spaces would allow. Each day we took up two pieces of board were laid to step on. At intervals of two weeks a second and third coat was applied. When this was all sufficiently dry we covered the floor with heavy sheets of straw-board paper; over this paper a carpet was spread. Now, after two months' protection we find the painted floor very hard, and ready to stand a long time before it will need repainting.

Bones for Poultry.

A WRITER in the American Poultry Yard urges upon poultry keepers the necessity of giving to fowls a liberal supply of baked bone and oyster shells, and writes his own experience in a very entertaining manner. It is as follows: "I supposed I did my duty by my hens when I burned bones to ivory whiteness, ground them to the consistency of flour, and fed them occasionally, with the idea that I was giving them egg-shells in a very available form. But I did not consider that the gelatine, the fat, the ammonia, and other constituents of the bones, which were discharged by the internal heat (leaving only a little pure lime) were really the richest possible food for the hens and the greatest egg-producing diet that could be furnished them. My new tenant only bakes them nearly or just brown, in an old tin plate on the top grate of the stove oven. This is not a very pleasant process, for, like all scorched portions of the animal frame, they give a pungent, half-suffocating smell, which tempts you to shut the kitchen till the fresh air from doors and windows has sent the objectionable odors into outer space. But, you soon become reconciled to this incursion of ill scents when the fiery combs, the ceaseless cackle, the evident high health of your fowls, and the daily-filled egg-baskets show you what they have accomplished. No other tool, nor any amount of food, if this is left out, will give you such returns; and this baked bone, pounded on a rock in your pantry pans and fed with ordinary food, will give results that ought to satisfy the most craving disposition. The bones cluster around that primitive mammary gulping down the rich morsels with evident delight; and since everything necessary for the production of eggs is thus fully furnished, there is no undue strain on the vital forces, no weakening of the system, but a daily attention to business, to the complete satisfaction of the fowls and their owners. You can hardly give too much burned bones to your hens to provide the necessary amount of lime for the egg-shells, and the next best thing for that purpose is oyster-shells, which can be obtained by the barrel (and generally without cost, except taking away) at hotels or restaurants in your nearest city. My new tenant goes eighteen miles for them, and considers them cheap enough at that. The hens eat them when pounded into fragments as eagerly as they pick up shelled corn, and they furnish the needful material for the egg-shell more completely than anything else."

Puddings for Children.

Whatever may be the reasons or reasons, children do not take to fat very readily, and certainly a large proportion of them reject the fat of joints; consequently it becomes very desirable that they have dishes provided for them which are fairly rich in fat which is not visible to the eye. Such dishes are to be found in milk puddings when a piece of butter has been put into them. Butter is not an extravagant article of diet, and is a fat which is usually well borne by the most delicate stomach, and assimilated readily by the feeblest digestive organs, provided always that it is not swallowed in masses, but is taken in a finely divided form. Many children who can not take butter well in the form of thick slices of bread with a comparative thick layer of butter, can take it famously when the slice of bread is thin and the butter well rubbed in—commonly bread and butter, in fact. In the latter form the butter is finely subdivided, and in mastication is thoroughly mixed with the bread, so that it reaches the stomach in an acceptable form; while in the other form the stomach resents its presence. When added in generous quantity to a pudding consisting of milk and some form of farina, butter can be given to delicate children in practically sufficient quantities.

Many children would be all the better if they were taught to eat puddings of all kinds with butter, or with butter and a little sugar, instead of the jam and preserves now in such common use. A more economical form of fat is beef suet; and suet puddings, especially if made with molasses, are readily eaten by children, and should be more largely used even than they are at present. Such puddings made with corn meal cost little, are very palatable, and have comparatively a high food value. In the present condition of the digestive organs of children, it is eminently desirable to provide them with a sufficient quantity of fat for proper tissue nutrition, without offending their palates or their stomachs. Much dyspepsia, much phthisis intimately, would be avoided if the problem of how to successfully introduce fat into the stomachs of children could be practically solved, and there is reason to believe it might be if the hints here given were generally adopted.—Harper's Weekly.

The Chemistry of Butter.

THE production of butter by churning is both a chemical and mechanical process. Milk, according to analysis, is composed of:

Cream, pure cent	4.49
Butter	3.53
Milk sugar	4.46
Saline matter	0.66
Water	87.06

Good butter should contain at least eighty-two per cent. of fat, or oil. This fat is composed of solid or margarine fat, and liquid or oleine. Winter butter contains, of solid fat, sixty-five parts in one hundred, summer butter only forty parts. This fact explains why milk should be churned at different temperatures in different seasons of the year. This fat, oily substance, in the forms of globules, is found in suspension in milk. By the mechanical action of the churn, the envelopes of the globules of the fat are broken, and the globules brought into cohesion and separated from the other portions or components of the cream. By the chemical process the sugar of milk is converted into lactic acid, and the bulk of the fluid, which was put sweet into the churn, is instantly soured. Bonsingault, proscribes the temperature for churning to be 50 degrees for sweet cream, 62 degrees for sour and 64 degrees for milk. About one-fourth of the total amount of butter globules which exist in the cream escape collection, which accounts for the rich taste of the butternilk. Fresh butter consists of about 83 per cent. of pure butter and 15 of milk of butter. The former can be separated by melting the whole in a long tube, after a time the butter proper rises to the top. It is then drawn off into water at 104 degrees, and after two or three washings may be considered quite pure.

Advice to Would-be Colorado Miners.

THE first thought that strikes one is that the great majority of those who are coming are coming too soon. The season in Colorado, especially in the mountainous portions, is backward. The snows fall until late in the spring—for that matter they often fall in summer—and the passes are not open, at the earliest possible time, the first of June. In most mining camps the ground is covered until this time, and in many even a month later. Thus it may be seen that to get to the mines is now difficult, and prospecting is entirely out of the question.

Whatever is done in that direction now is a majority of the diggings which the hopeful hundreds are rushing must be done blindly. When the snow covers the ground to the depth of five or six feet it is of course useless to look for surface indications, and if the searcher for precious metals would do this supplement, he must first dig through the snow and then into the earth. Many do this, and many in doing so are fortunate enough to strike mineral. Within the past year or two Colorado has earned such a reputation for mineral wealth that a popular impression seems to prevail that a bed of gold and silver underlies the surface of the entire country, that one must do to find it is to procure a pick and shovel and start down and continue to dig until he discovers the longed-for treasure. This is a great mistake. It is safe to assert that out of ten holes that are sunk, according to the best information of the most experienced miners, not more than one developes into a paying mine. Now it may be easily seen that the prospector, even he who operates according to the most intelligent rules, takes great risk upon himself. Many of them who have learned to know ores as the farmer knows corn and potatoes and the miner who are thoroughly acquainted with the geological formations and the character of the rocks and minerals of the earth—dig and dig year after year, living in holes in the ground, constantly shut out from the light of day, but "never striking it rich." They contrive to sell enough "property" to buy food and rough clothing, but never accumulate a cumpetency.

This is a dark view of the life of the miner, but it is one that all who have engaged in the business will recognize as a glance. It seems almost hardhearted to present this picture of the apparent misfortunes of those who are flocking into the State, and of whom ninety-nine out of every hundred are led to our midst by the hope of bettering influence which they permit their imaginations to paint for them. But it is intended for no other purpose than to warn them that all cannot expect to reap a rich harvest. Some will be disappointed in the mountains to those who are coming into the State, and of whom ninety-nine out of every hundred are led to our midst by the hope of bettering their circumstances. But it is intended for no other purpose than to warn them that all cannot expect to reap a rich harvest. Some will be disappointed in the mountains to those who are coming into the State at this season of the year, particularly those who have their eyes set on the most inaccessible districts, which are over, according to the popular belief, the most promising fields for the fortune-hunter, are likely to be the first to receive a set-back. Many of those who are coming into the State cannot afford to take any more than the ordinary risks; hence the warning not to start so early in the season.

It may be plainly seen that besides the increase of the venture in working without means, there are other reasons which should prevent men from going into many of the new mining or prospecting districts at present. In numerous cases one is required to go by routes twice the length of those traveled later in the season, because the short roads are absolutely impassable. Thus the hardships and expense of the trip are multiplied. In many cases the adventurer is required to travel on snow shoes, and if he is not a hardy man and accustomed to exposure and fatigue, this will prove a trying experience.

And then when he arrives at the camp, on account of the rush of those who are as foolish as himself, he is likely to find that hotel accommodations are the next thing to unattainable. He will in many cases be fortunate if he finds sleeping room on a floor with dozens of others, and if he gets a cold potato for his supper and a cup of coffee for breakfast—for all of which he will have to pay as if he were feasting at Delmonico's.

At the present season none but hardy men should venture into the mining districts and they should be provided with an abundance of clothing, a good supply of blankets and some money to "see them who have not started in Colorado, but who are expecting to come to the State for the purpose of mining, we would say:

Do not start with less than $400 in your pocket.

Do not expect too much, but be prepared for any disappointment.

Do not come unless you are in good health and able and willing to "rough it."—Denver Tribune.

IT is stated on good authority that tramps are more numerous in Connecticut than for some time after the enactment of the present law, and the reason is probably to be found in the short sentences in the State prison that is now usually assigned in such cases. Three or six months at Wethersfield is not long enough to terrify a professional tramp. His time is not very valuable; he is sure to be well housed and fed, and can hope to escape part of the hard work because he does not know how to do anything and will not be within the walls long enough to learn. The contractors do not want him if they can help it, and in one way and another he manages to have a much easier time than was ever intended.

Our Young Readers.

THE STORY OF A SATURDAY.

THE place where we first met our hero is a grass-plat about twenty feet square, bordered on one side by a barn so weather-beaten that it looks black, on another by the clothes-line, and on the third by a path. The fourth side was filled up by a pile of apple-tree wood. Upon a large limb, gnarled and twisted, and with dried leaves and the remains of what had once been pinktinted apple blossoms, sat General Scott.

A queer position for the renowned military individual, did you say? Well, this General was a little ten-year-old boy named Scott by his grandfather, an admirer of the original Winfield. The rest of the family had, by common consent, dubbed him "The General."

"I said he was about ten years old, didn't I? Yes. Well, imagine a boy of that age, with black eyes, nut-brown complexion, and close, curly, sunny head closely cropped, after the manner of the lads of the day—to say nothing of State Prison convicts. So you have my hero. His uniform was not much to speak of. It consisted of a blue-checked shirt, a pair of brown trousers worn to a light small-color about the knees, and a hat which had little crown and less brim. The only things which like in the surroundings were the little ax leaning against the chopping-stump, and a pair of red flannel mittens dangling from the clothes-line with a flags-of-defiance air.

As for the General, at the time of which I speak he was deeply engaged in the soul-absorbing labor of taking a chip between his toes and laying it upon the chopping-block. Several times he had tried this, but with no success. At last the spring time deposited the chip upon the block, and the brown legs crossed themselves complacently. Their owner then drew from out his pocket a bit of maple sugar, which he began to munch with great gusto. Just then a voice from the neighboring white house called out, "Scott!" The maple sugar, now reduced to a mass of stickiness, was hastily tucked into one side of his mouth, and, in a voice exceedingly liquid, the General replied, "Ma'am!"

"Have you split any of the wood yet?" and the questioner, a small, slight woman, with snowy hair and gentle, human eyes, came down the path and paused by the chopping-block.

"Why are you not working?" continued the little woman.

"I've been at work, ma'am. You've been out here a quarter of an hour, and not a blow have I heard you strike."

The General's black brows contracted.

"I don't care!" he said, angrily. "I can never get this hateful pile split—it's a regular aggravation!"

"You might have had it done long ago had you not played with the boy so much."

"Well, Jack Hazard and Billy McEvoy don't have to split wood—not even kindlings!" in injured tones.

"The wood is not hard to chop, and I think it much better for a boy to have a little employment than to idle away his time."

"I'm sure I go to school, grandma!"

"Yes, but surely one hour's work on Saturday will not injure you, and that is all the work you have to do that day," said the old lady, kindly. Then, as the General's face still looked sullen, she continued: "My dear, do you think that you would be perfectly happy if you had a Saturday all to yourself—without doing a single chore?"

"Rather guess I would!" emphatically.

"Then I will give you next Saturday, upon one condition—that, as you are to do nothing for any one, no one is to do anything for you. Do you agree?"

"Of course. But can I really do just what I want, and go where I please?"

"Yes, provided you do nothing absolutely rash."

"Goody!" And the General turned a somersault and uttered a war-whoop that made his grandma's ears ring.

The next saturday dawned bright and clear. But Scott didn't rise very early. He lay a long time in his little white bed, making plans for the day's enjoyment.

"Grandma said I might do just as I please, so I'll go over to see Jack as long as I want to. How jolly, not to hear Hannah yell out, 'Scott!' get up!'"

After awhile, however, the pangs of hunger began to be felt, and he arose and dressed himself.

"We must always have muffins, ham and eggs on Saturday," he said, as he went down-stairs, smacking his lips in anticipation. Entering the dining-room, what was his surprise to find the breakfast things cleared away, and the table covered with its customary Turkey red's cread. Going out on the porch, he found his grandmother sewing.

"Good-morning!" she said, pleasantly.

"Good-mornin'. Where's breakfast, grandma?"

"Breakfast? O, we had that long ago."

"But is it all cleared away?"

"I presume so. I heard Hannah washing the dishes a little while ago."

"But can't I have anything to eat?" in aggrieved tones.

"Yes!"

"Then I'll have Hannah fix me something on the kitchen table—do. I'll have her bring it out on the piazza. It'll be so much more pleasant," said the General, starting for the kitchen. But his grandmother called him back, saying:

"No, you must remember that you're not to ask my one to do anything for you to-day."

The little lad looked crestfallen.

"Well," he said, striving to speak unconcernedly, "O! that's so. But then I can fix something for myself easy enough," and he departed for the kitchen, pondering the question as to what he should prepare for breakfast. Now, his great-grandmother was a French lady, and perhaps it was from her that he inherited the taste for omelets. And on this particular morning he determined to regale himself with that dish. But how to make it he knew not. He had always seen them come on the table light and flaky, and tinted a delicious golden-brown. He studied the receipt-book, and, feeling confident that he had mastered its mysteries, he marshaled the flour, eggs and milk, and proceeded to jumble them together in what he considered a very professional manner. He turned the yellow mess into the frying-pan and waited the results. The fire was brisk, and pretty soon there was a suspicious smell of something burning. The General thought that perhaps he had better turn the omelette, and he endeavored to do this with the dexterous flop that Hannah always practiced, but, sad to say, the batter stuck to the iron, and the little boy found that he had made a grave mistake in not greasing the frying-pan before he had poured the mixture into it. Part of the omelette was burnt, part uncooked, and the General found Hannah giggle as he dished up the unsavory mess. He then proceeded to scroll a piece of beefsteak. He had pounded it wisely, and had left it for a moment, while he attended to his coffee, which was boiling over, when suddenly Lady Jane Grey, the Maltese kitten, jumped on the table and leaped out of the window—the piece of steak in her mouth!

"Mysterious monkey!" cried the General, angrily. He always said that when greatly excited. Somehow it seemed to him to be an awful improvement.

Well, he toasted some bread, and with that, the coffee and "omelette," managed to make out a breakfast. Having finished, he grabbed his hat and was about to bound out of the door, when Hannah called around, gruffly saying, "Your grandma said that you was to clean up your breakfast things—and be quick about it, too!" Scott stood aghast. The numerous dishes with yellow batter dried on, the frying pan with the burnt stuff adhering thereto, did, indeed, present a formidable array. Nevertheless, puckering his lips together, he began to whistle "Captain Jinks," and set startedly to work at dish-washing. It was a whole hour before he started for the woods again. McEvoy, his schoolmate accompanied him. Both boys were brim full of plans for a day of delight. They were going to play "Ingin." This consisted of building a wigwam of hemlock boughs, and then setting fire to the structure in the ashes. The most warlike feature of this savage life consisted in catching and roasting a few lizard, which darted in the brook, or in tiring stones at stray squirrels and chipmunks. A day thus spent was always one of much joy to Scott, but on this occasion he didn't feel so happy as usual. Billy McEvoy wanted his own way about everything, and they had had two quarrels. Then Scott burned his fingers when building the fire, and, added to this, the hemlock bough he had picked down out of the sticks hurt his head. Later, when they had the fire nicely burning, and their dinner really cooking in the ashes, the sky suddenly clouded and the rain came pouring down. The boys had to run home in haste. Reaching it they made plans for the afternoon's enjoyment. Scott asked his grandpa to put up a swing. Mr. Kent said grandpa "You're the boy that can get along without favors from any one, so don't bother me with your nonsense!"

They didn't have much fun after that, and pretty soon Mr. McEvoy's hired man came over to take Billy home. It an hour the sun came out bright and clear. Grandma and grandpa started for a ride over to the village, to buy their weekly groceries. Then General wanted to go along, for he had five cents, with which to buy fire-crackers; but he didn't dare ask grandpa, for fear of getting another rebuff. So he lolled around the house, wishing that he had some work to do, but ashamed to ask. He bursted a button from off his jacket, and tried to sew it on. He made hanging work of it, and grandma smiled when she came home and saw him with the cloudiest side. He cut his finger and had to bind it up. He had to part his hair himself, and finally made up his mind that other folks would look himself were of use in the world. He was glad when night came, and he could go to bed. As he took his lamp and started to leave the room, his grandma gave him a quizzical, yet kindly look from over her spectacles, saying:

"Have you had a pleasant day?"

"Meanest day ever was!" quoth the General.

"Let no man live unto himself!" said grandma, and, kissing him tenderly, she bade him good-night.

And now comes the strangest part of my story. Monday morning, when Hannah arose for her weekly washing, she found her tub filled with fresh rain-water. "Massy me! Who could have been so obligin'?" she muttered. Then she added, in tones of intense surprise, as she glanced out of the back-door: "And I'm do believe it's the General! And if he ain't chopping away at that air wood-pile too!"—Mary E. Quackenbush, in Christian at Work.

KINDERED HERRING.—Put the herrings in a basin; pour over enough boiling water to cover them; take them out immediately and put them skin downward in a frying pan. Put two herrings pat half an ounce of butter and a tablespoonful of hot water into the pan, and baste them frequently with it for ten minutes, taking care the fire is not strong enough to boil the fish; indeed, the slower the cooking proceeds the better. When placed on a hot dish, spread a small piece of butter over the fish, sprinkle lightly with pepper, and serve very hot.

APPLE CHARLOTTE.—Butter a deep baking bowl; line it with thin slices of wheaten bread which have been soaked in sweet cream; fill the bowl with the grated lemon or orange peel; cover the apples with thin slices of bread soaked in cream; cover the bowl closely with an ordinary earthenware pie dish, in which place water to prevent its cracking; bake in a rather brisk oven from one hour to one and one-half hour, according to the size of the charlotte.

It is nearly all solids ashes are beneficial. Their action is twofold; they supply to plants inorganic constituents which they require, and they act chemically as a solvent upon other salts in the soil, or they neutralize acids, etc. They are more beneficial on clay. For plants that contain a large percentage of potash and phosphoric acid, as potatoes, turnips, potatoes and cabbages, ashes are essential manure.

MR. H. R. STEVENS:
DEAR SIR:—I have much pleasure in informing you of the wonderful cures effected by your Vegetine in my family. My wife had been troubled for many years with Scrofula, and had a bad sore on her leg, which resisted all treatment, and baffled the skill of the most eminent physicians. She was induced to try Vegetine, and after using a few bottles the sore commenced to heal, and she is now entirely cured. Our son was afflicted with Scrofula in the form of Erysipelas, and was entirely cured by the use of Vegetine. I feel confident in recommending it to all sufferers.
Yours truly,
H. J. CAMPBELL,

Capt. Clifford's Perilous March to Whitemarker.

To the Sentinel:

You left me, I believe, at Cedar Creek. From there to Elk Rapids was a long, tedious drive. The road was very good, and we made the distance in about 3½ hours. Arriving at the Rapids we found the Lake House full, and were obliged to go to the Bay View House, where we were kindly received by Mr. Bates, the proprietor. We found here Company E, and Private Arrowsmith, of Company C, who had been left behind sick. Company E, and Private Arrowsmith, of Company C, who had been left behind sick. NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

IN the Senate on the 27th the House bill to authorize and equip an expedition to the Arctic seas, to establish a temporary station for the scientific observation of Lady Franklin Bay, etc., was passed. The Naval Appropriation bill was reported, without amendments. The Kellogg resolutions were temporarily laid aside, and the Indian Appropriation bill was taken up and debated. A resolution was adopted in the House calling on the President for copies of all correspondence relating to the alleged interference of relating to the alleged interference with American fishermen in Fortune Bay. Mr. Davis, W. Va., presented a report of the Select Committee to investigate the accounts of the Treasury Department, and Mr. Rusk presented a report of the minority, the former said the committee found numerous and serious discrepancies in the Treasury accounts, and he later found that new discrepancies existed, and said all alterations of the accounts were fully explained by changes in the system of book-keeping. A bill was introduced by Mr. Morgan to enforce the observance of the Constitution in regard to the election of President and Vice-President. The Indian Appropriation bill was again taken up, and an amendment was agreed to for erecting a wing to the House for the chamber and the Indian Commission, and inserting an appropriation of $20,000 for the expenses of the Commission. In the House Mr. Hiss, from the committee on Foreign Affairs, made a report upon the resolutions of the Legislatures of Maine and Massachusetts relating to the fisheries, and submitted a resolution that the President be requested to take such measures as will secure indemnity for our citizens for the damages sustained by them, if unlawful violence against them by the authorities of Newfoundland, and the protection from any repetition of such violence, and procure the early adoption or reclamation of the articles of the treaty of 1871 relating to fisheries. A bill was reported by Mr. Thomas, from the Select Committee on Pensions, to provide for the pensions of the widows of soldiers of the war of the revolution.

IN the Senate on the 28th ult. the joint resolution authorizing the President to call an international sanitary conference at Washington, and the Indian Appropriation bill, amended by striking out the clause abolishing the Indian Commission, were passed. Davis, Edmunds and Hoar opposed the latter clause. The Senate bill to amend the act to provide for the better security of seamen by means of life-saving apparatus, was passed. Some of the Senate amendments to the Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill were, and others were not, concurred in.

An Appeal for Aid.

ST. LOUIS, April 27.

The Merchants' Exchange Relief Committee have received so many reports of the terrible destruction and distress occasioned by the recent tornadoes in this State, and have official advices from so many relief committees and prominent gentlemen in the devastated district of the urgent need of assistance for the sufferers, that they will issue the following to-morrow morning, and ask place and it in the hands of every newspaper:

To the Charitably-Disposed People of the United States.

The recital of scenes which passed over the western portion of the State of Missouri have been heart-rending and cause to numbers of families, and many more throughout the land, have sent telegrams of inquiry as to the extent of the disaster. Many thousands of dollars in the shape of provisions, clothing and money have been received by this Committee since the destruction to homes fourteen days ago, upon picture. Mark E. Nichols, President of the Merchants' Exchange, and Wayman Crow, C. Shaler Smith, Civil Engineer, who have just returned from the scene of the storm, have covered the entire line of the two townships most devastated, Marmaduke and Cedar, in this County, say that the path has been about thirty-five miles west of Springfield, and about twenty miles wide, and the storm continued for about seven hours. Houses, cattle, sheep and hogs were in a similar destruction. Many families and entire households were instantly killed, but many were left without a shelter, without food, without clothing. Implements were reduced to scrap-iron and kindling-wood, and all crops destroyed. Not a single live stock could be found within the limits of the storm, and farmers are entirely without means to put in their crops. Many of the residents of the south during the last few days have sent in their contributions, and the responsible men on the ground have made requisitions upon this Committee for supplies. This Committee will furnish information to any part of the country desiring to forward to points needing assistance, and will receive and disburse any money or supplies sent them for this purpose.

The Macon (Miss.) Tornado.

MERIDIAN, Miss., April 28.

Appeal from Macon, Miss., says:

Last night at half-past eight o'clock one of the most fearful and terrific storms that ever swept the northern part of this county, resulting in a loss of life and property that will amount to hundreds of thousands of dollars, visited this city. At the time above mentioned the heavens were overcast with dense clouds, and the wind, which had been blowing a gentle breeze from the south, suddenly changed to the west, and in a few moments increased to a perfect hurricane, accompanied with heavy rain and hail. Men and women were found inside decapitated, and the bodies of children, their heads and others were mutilated, a quarter of a mile from their homes. Cattle and sheep were killed in the vicinity. Bed-goods from a dozen stores found their way into the streets and were destroyed.

A negro woman was found dead in a field some distance from her home, grasping her child in her clothing.

It rained nearly all the morning and most of the night, but a noble business women, true to the principles of her profession, "Woman left at the Cross and first at the tomb," are doing all that human hands can do in administering to the wounded and dying.

Only in the two places remaining intact are filled with the dead and wounded. The ages of the dead and wounded range from the infant and dying make up a picture that will fill long sorrowful years to memory.

Up to this time ninety-seven persons from Macon, Miss., a town 100 miles south of Corinth on the Mobile & Ohio railroad.

A Cincinnati Family's Fight With Fire.

The Cincinnati Gazette of a recent date says:

About half past three o'clock yesterday afternoon an alarm was rung in for a fire that soon assumed alarming proportions. The fire broke out in the basement of the five-story and Keen was in the basement of his store, and that assistance was being rendered. Keen had left the store about three minutes before the fire was discovered. Mrs. Keen, hearing the cry of fire, ran down stairs, and, seeing the flames, ran back to the rear of the building, and, seizing her two children, ran out into the yard. Her husband, who was in the basement, ran out the front door

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

SALTS of lemon will remove stains from the ivory handles of knives.

A SMALL piece of paper or linen moistened with turpentine is a preventive against moths.

KEROSENE will soften boots or shoes which have been hardened by water and render them as pliable as new.

A TEASPOONFUL of pulverized alum, mixed with stove polish, will give your stove a fine lustre, which will be quite permanent.

USE white oil cloth, bound with red, for wall protectors back of the kitchen table, and under the hooks where pans, etc., are hung.

HAM BALLS.—Chop the cold cooked ham; add an egg for each person and a little flour, knead together and make into balls; fry brown in hot butter.

COOKS make the mistake of boiling things too much. After reaching the boiling point meats should simmer. The toughest meats can be made tender by so doing.

TO DESTROY ANTS.—Take of corrosive sublimate, one ounce; prussiate of soda, two ounces; water, one pint; dip a brush in this solution, and draw a line around the shelf or place to be protected.

SALLY'S BISCUITS.—Three pared-sized potatoes boiled and mashed fine, one tablespoon sugar, one-half pint boiling water. When cool add one cup yeast, let it rise till light, then add one quart water and flour to knead; knead half an hour and set it to rise light again before baking.

TEA BALLS.—One quart of flour, one teaspoonful of saleratus, two teaspoonfuls of cream tartar, moisten with milk or water as for soda biscuits; roll to one-half inch in thickness; s, read with butter; sprinkle sugar and roll it up as you would jelly cake; cut the slices one inch thick and bake.

TO WATERPROOF CLOTH.—In a bucket of soft water put one-half pound sugar of lead, and one-half pound powdered alum; stir this at intervals until it becomes clear, then pour it off into another bucket and stir cloth therein, and let it remain twenty-four hours, putting a weight on it to keep it under water, then hang it up to dry, without wringing.

SOUTHERN MODE OF COOLING RICE.—Pick over the rice and wash it in cold water; to one pint stew put three quarts boiling water and half teaspoon salt; boil it just seventeen minutes from the time it begins to boil; strain off all the water, set it over a moderate fire with the cover off to steam fifteen minutes. Take care and be accurate. The rice when first poured off is good to stiffen muslins.

FRUIT CAKE.—One pound butter, one pound brown sugar, two pounds raisins, two pounds currants, ten eggs; beat yolks and whites separately; one pound flour, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, cloves, mace and nutmeg, one large tablespoonful syrup, one heaping teaspoonful baking powder, one-half pound citron, one coffeecup milk; dredge fruit well with flour and bake in a moderate oven about three hours.

BAKING PILLOWS.—Not every one can afford to have all the chambers supplied with goose feather pillows, while all desire the hens' feathers to so closely resemble the former, that none can tell the difference. A good beating with the hands each morning when the beds are made, will do a great deal toward making them lively, and when they become somewhat worn and heavy, the cost of steam renovating will not be regretted. Still, the beating must not be neglected.

CRIMES IN DARK WEATHER.—To comb the hair take a little gum-arabic and put it into just enough boiling water to dissolve it. When dissolved add enough alcohol to make it somewhat thin. Let this stand all night, and then bottle it to prevent the alcohol from evaporating. When wishing to "do" the hair for the night damp it with this mixture, and the result will be next day, stiffly crimped or curled hair, which will not "come out" on damp or hot days, as is usual with hair crimped or curled in the ordinary manner.

Necessity of Water for Stock.

A WRITER in the Country Gentleman on the above subject says:

"Water is one of the first necessities of farming. Eighty per cent. of all flesh is water, and even in what are called dry, solid substances a large proportion if the animal is to be kept in good health. It is generally better to give food somewhat moist, for the purpose, making it more palatable, and therefore more digestible. With our northern ice-bound winters a good supply of water for domestic animals becomes a very important consideration. Very often in cold weather stock will prefer to remain under shelter rather than go to the spring or brook where only ice-cold water awaits them. It is very easy to cause animals to lose from want of water all that they gain by feeding grain. Lack of water is one reason why it is so difficult to keep up a flow of milk in winter. The food is not succulent and the water is generally so cold that if a cow drinks all that she requires the chill to the stomach will impair digestion. Usually the animal will not drink enough, while the coldness of the water keeps the food from doing as much good as it should. In all basement barns (and all barns intended for stock feeding should have a basement under their entire extent) the matter of providing water can be settled with comparatively little expense. If the water is not too far distant from the barn, it may be brought close to the feeding trough in pipes. If there be not a supply sufficient for this purpose can be built on one side of the basement, and the heat from fattening stock will prevent freezing to such an extent as to injure the walls. A hogshead by ninety feet will require a cistern building one hundred and twenty barrels, and this size will usually accommodate all the animals that need be fed under such a barn. To save room it is better to make the cistern just outside the basement wall and have the top covered deeply enough to prevent freezing. The cistern will be filled previous to the winter with the warm summer rains, and it will be for late winter before the temperature approaches the freezing point. When roots are fed less water is needed, and it is a curious fact that a fattened animal generally drinks less in proportion than one in only store condition. There is less water in the flesh of a fat animal than in that of a poor one. It is probable this fact has led farmers to believe that fattening stock do not need regular drink. But the moderate amount they require must be given regularly, or the disquiet and rough appearance of the coat will show that something is wrong. If water is kept by them all the time there will be no danger that they will drink more than is for their good. We shall not decrease the proportion of water in their flesh by furnishing less of that, but rather by giving more of fat and flesh forming elements.

Field Beans.

IT is stated that few of the Western States produce a supply of white beans sufficient for home consumption, and the amount eaten is far smaller than it should be. An vegetable food contains a larger amount of nutriment than beans. In the formation of muscles they are nearly equal to any food of plant. Beans form a staple article of diet in all countries noted for their thrift. The institution of baked beans has had much to do with the prosperity of the New England States. Eaten rarely if ever oceurs in countries where beans form a leading article of food. Scarcely any crop can be produced from a given amount of land that will supply as many persons with food as a crop of beans. Common field beans are easily and cheaply raised. The seed costs very little, and the labor of cultivation is small. A very fair crop of beans may be raised by sowing them broadcast in sod turned under in May. If sowed in this manner no cultivation is required. It is usual to plant them in drills on old land and to tend the crop with a hoe and cultivator. The drills may be as near to each other as will allow the running of a cultivator between them. Little cultivation is required except to keep down the weeds and grass. The plants should never be disturbed while they are wet with dew or rain, as the best touch will cause the leaves to rust. The land on which beans are planted should be of nearly uniform character, so that they may all ripen at about the same time. A very rich soil is not necessary for the production of a good crop of beans. It is necessary, however, that the land be dry. No crop will do as well on sandy hills and knolls accommon white beans.—Scioto Times.

How to Boil and Stew.

TO do either properly, the food must be immersed at the beginning in actually boiling water, and the water must be allowed to reach the boiling point again immediately, and to boil for about five minutes. The action of the boiling water upon the surface of either meat or vegetables is to harden it slightly, but enough to prevent the escape of either juices or mineral salts. After the pot containing the food has begun to boil the second time, it should be removed to the side of the fire, and allowed to simmer until the food is done. This simmering, or stewing, extracts all the nutritious qualities of either meat or vegetables; the pot should be kept closely covered unless for a moment when it is necessary to raise the cover in order to remove the scum. The steam will condense upon the inside of the cover, and fall back into the pot in drops of moisture, if the boiling is slow. Do not think that rapid boiling cooks faster than the gentle process I recommend. After the pot once boils you cannot make its contents cook any faster if you have fire enough under it to run a steam engine. So save your fuel, and add it to the fire little by little, to keep the pot boiling. Remember if you boil meat hard and fast it will be tough and tasteless, and most of its goodness will go up the chimney, or out of the window with the steam.—Exchange.

How to Clean Soiled dresses.

THE following directions for cleaning soiled dresses has been well tested, and will be found excellent: Dissolve one tablespoonful of borax in eight quarts of soft water. Have it quite as hot as can be borne by the hands. Place the garment, previously brushed, and ripped, if necessary (a garment plainly soiled need not be ripped), in this solution, and let it lie until the water is quite cool, lifting and airing it occasionally. If the garment is very much soiled, some rubbing with the hands may be necessary. Grease spots filled with dust should be rubbed in a stronger solution of borax previous to putting the garment to soak. Wring dry and expose to the open air when still a little damp press on the wrong side.

This proportion of borax and water is excellent for cleaning black or dark colors, whatever the material, as borax is a neutral salt, so fears need be entertained of its injuring the most delicate fabric.

Reducing the Average.

AN exchange little Frenchman was complaining about his bad luck as a stock speculator. "I cannot at all get zee rendest profit into zee business. Long time ago one friend say to me sat Lady Bryan is good speculation. I buy feefty shares of see Lady for one dollar zee share. She go down to feefty cent. I say to my friends: 'Now what shall I do?' You see zee Lady have retrograded backward—like zee what you call craw-fish."

"My friend said to me: 'You must reduce your average.'

"How is zat ting shall reduce zee average," say I to him, for I am impecunious and what he mean by 'reduce zee average.'

"He say: 'You see, to reduce your average you must go buy feefty shares more, or feefty cent less zan zose you not-stand in you second money.'

"I go buy feefty share more—I reduce zee average, you see."

"My friend say to me: 'Now you all right to take advantage of zee market; you have your average reduce.'

"Well, pretty soon, what you sink? Zee Lady she go down to twenty-five cent. I go to my friend and say to him: 'You see how it is wiz zee Lady, she have trembles!'

"I see,' said my friend; 'it is bad, but zee only way to get even is to again reduce zee average. Zen you will be in one fine position to take advantage of zee market.'

"'Right!' says I: 'but you see, my friend, zee market all time take advantage of me.' But I go get two hundred share more of zee Lady at twenty-five cent.

"Pretty soon bang she go down to zee ten cent zee share. I go to my friend.

"'What shall I now do?' say I.

"'You only ting to get even zat is possible to do is to again reduce zee average.'

"'Hang zee average!' I retoark, for you see I am begin to become inflame against zee average. But my friend persuade me it is zee only way to get into position to take advantage of zat market wiz zee Lady. So I buy me four hundred more share at ten per cent, and say now I am ready for zee rise of zee market.

"'Just now, what you sink? One assessment of feefty cent is bevil. I rush away to my friend and say: 'What now mis' I do?'

"'It is bad,' he say. 'I am afraid we have pay too much attention to zee plan of reducing zee average. We have leave zee assessment out of zee account.'

"I cannot pay him, so I let him go, for as will allow the running of a cultivator between them. Little cultivation is required except to keep down the weeds and grass. The plants should never be disturbed while they are wet with dew or rain, as the best touch will cause the leaves to rust. The land on which beans are planted should be of nearly uniform character, so that they may all ripen at about the same time. Our Young Readers.

THE ARMY OF SPRING.

TENS OF THOUSANDS, and ten times ten,
Clad in yellow, and purple, and pinks—
Little folks marching like stalwart men,
Up from the dark to the day-time's drink!

Can it be dark where such colors are made?
Search the home by the light must be
That colored these uniforms shade by shade,
And fashioned the tints the rainbow's?

Who orders the rising—can any one say—
Of hosts that trek from their realm of night,
Letting no Richmond lay in the way,
Bursting upon us with joy delight?

Tens of thousands, and ten times ten,
Armed in velvet, blue and gold—
Little Folks marching like stalwart men,
Up through the window's imperiled mould.

Come they to tell us that down below,
There where the baby has hid in flowers,
Down in the hollow, under the snow,
Is a better world than this world of ours?

Tens of thousands, and ten times ten,
Bright in scarlet and green and white—
Little folks marching like stalwart men,
Bolder before us as sunlight grows!

Gentle as Beauty and flags outspread,
Lily bells ringing and censers a-swing,
Sweet with the breath of a well ordered treat,
The sweetest clover-bade ever sang.

What is their mission? Which of us knows,
Save that these tokens to cheer us come?
Swallows to scatter the seed that grows?
And blossoms to make us more heaven?

—Mary H. Hodges, in Wide Awake.

"WANTED—A BOY!"

WANTED—A boy to BEN URHANIE AND make himself generally useful.

Mr. Peppergrass came out, with his cap in the back of his head and his spectacles pushed high up on his forehead, to water this written notice on the side of his store. And while minutes afterward (it might have been less, or it might have been more) a crowd of super little folks assembled around it, standing on tip-toe to read every word.

Reading Jarvis had been just discharged from his place as cash boy in a dry-goods store because business was dull and customers few.

He was a fine, tall boy of twelve, with bright black eyes and a laughing mouth, but he didn't at all like having nothing to do.

Charlie Warner wanted a situation because there was a baby, named Mary Warner, and nothing to feed them with since their father died.

Louis Brown had been out of regular employment ever since the china factory closed in the fall.

For these little fellows belonged to the innumerable army of boys who cannot play and enjoy the bright hours as they go by, but must work and drudge, and count every day lost that does not bring in its corresponding wages.

Children, did you ever think how hard the world was on their poor little hearts?

It was not long before Mr. Peppergrass' store was full of boys who wanted to "run errands and make themselves generally useful."

Big boys and little boys, tall boys and short boys, well-dressed boys and shabby boys—boys who loomed up against the flour and potato barrels, as if they had left their backbones at home; boys who stood straight up—boys who took off their caps, and boys who kept them on. And still they kept coming.

"Hold on!" said Mr. Peppergrass. "This will do."

So he took down the notice and bolted the shutters.

"Now, I will proceed to business," said Mr. Peppergrass, rumpling up his hair and adjusting his spectacles so as to make his keen, gray eyes sharper than ever.

A few penetrating glances, half a dozen questions, and the number of boys was speedily reduced to one three little fragments—Johnny Jarvis, Charlie Warner and Louis Brown.

They were all three willing and anxious to work; all three brought good recommendations, had honest faces, wanted to enter on the situation at once, and wrote neat, round hands.

"Humph! humph!" said Mr. Peppergrass, with his hands locked under his coat-tails behind. "There's three of you, and I can't find work for three boys!"

The little lads said never a word, but looked eagerly at the grocer, each one hoping that he might be the boy selected "to run errands and make himself generally useful."

Mr. Peppergrass stared hard at the spice-boxes and preserve-bottles in the window, frowned at the crackers-boxes, and finally made up his mind.

"Brown!" said he.

"Sir!" said Louis Brown.

"If you can a few cents. I want to buy to understand the first principles of being useful."

"I am good at figures, sir!" cried Louis.

"Are you?" said Mr. Peppergrass. "Very well; I'll give you a trial."

He wrote down a labyrinth of figures on a slate, and then opened the door of a little room which communicated with the store.

"Sit down here, Brown, and work out these sums," said he. "I'll come to you in a few minutes."

Johnny Jarvis and Charlie Warner looked blankly at each other, then at the grocer.

"Please, sir, what are we to do?" said they.

"You are to wait," said Mr. Peppergrass, shortly. "Your turns will come in due time."

The sums were not especially hard, and Louis Brown was quick at figures. He soon dispatched his task and began to look around.

It was a stuffy, close-smelling little room, with one window close up to the ceiling, and a curious, old-fashioned book-case or desk, with glass doors, lined with faded red silk, in the corner.

"I do wonder what Mr. Peppergrass keeps there?" said Louis, to himself; and after he had wondered a little while, he got up and went quietly toward the desk. "The key is in the lock," said he; "there can't be any harm in looking. Perhaps there are story-books—or maybe curious shells and stones—"

As these thoughts crossed his mind he opened the sliding door. Heaps—heaps of—not fawn beautiful pearl-colored dows.

Louis stood aghast. In vain were his efforts to combine the little creature. It fluttered from the top of the book-case to a pile of boxes beyond, and thence to the top molding of the window, and I'll take you by the neck, slam you around and break you out of the yard. I'm the lady's protector and the hero of the hour, you see. I'll be very modest and close off, but I'll tell her I've a few words to say and a quarter to buy food. She'll hand it over, and I'll join you around the corner and divide. See?"

"Magnificent!" replied No. 2. "You ought to be in the United States Senate! Well, here I go."

He passed down the street and selected a house, and the programme was carefully followed out (until he reached the point where he said he was dispossessed. At that instant the ball door was pulled wide open, and a six-foot bruiser, called with the greatest politeness, "Now, Pearlie," and he to the little dove, who perched on his shoulder at once, "you may go back to your nest. You have helped me out of the difficulty this time."

Softly let the little creature fly out into the yard, where it belonged.

Charlie Warner was the next one ushered into the study, smelling rooms. He, too, was dismissed in a minute, and began to look around him for something to occupy his attention.

"Now, Pearlie," said he, "you're a boy of boxes," said he, "filled up one above another, like a Tower of Babel! What can Mr. Peppergrass keep in them?"

Charlie listened. No advancing footsteps were near. He looked cautiously and then, but he saw nothing. Then he rose from his chair, and crept toward the mysterious pile of boxes. They were all shapes, rather small, and fitted with loose, wooden covers.

Charlie lifted the lid of one. It was full of—of—of—sealskin!

"Hello!" thought Charlie. "I'm in luck, I'll bet! Peppergrass will never miss two or three of these," and he pocketed a handful.

The next box was full of beautiful Malaga raisins. Charlie slipped two or three bloomy, wrinkled fellows off the stem, and ate them. He was fond of raisins.

"What next?" he said, tugging at the covers of the third box, which seemed to fit a little closer.

All of a sudden, however, it flew off with a jerk, filling the air with Cayenne pepper, and setting poor Charlie to sneezing as if he meant to sneeze his head off.

Mr. Peppergrass trotted in.

"Ah!" said he, "I see! But you needn't have been in such a hurry to examine my stock, young man. I haven't engaged you yet, and I don't intend to."

And poor Charlie sneaked away through the back door, which Mr. Peppergrass held politely open for him, feeling that his curiosity had ruined his cause.

It was some time before the Cayenne pepper was sufficiently cleared from the atmosphere for Johnny Jarvis to take his turn at the same in decimal fractions, but he was more successful than out, and then sat looking around him, as the others had done. But he was too honorable to dream of meddling. He, too, wondered what was in the boxes, but he didn't do anything more than wonder. His head a mysterious rustling behind the faded silk doors of the old book-case, where Mr. Peppergrass had shut up his pet kitten, but he kept thoughts of opening it to see what it all meant.

He saw a glass jar of mixed candies on the counter (oh! Mr. Peppergrass had counted every one, besides covering it with a dusty lid, so that the most fingerscath would have been quite visible), but he sat there quite still until Mr. Peppergrass bounced into the room.

The old grocer looked at the candy jar, he glanced at the unmoistened pen, and—(

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, MAY 11th, 1880.

"Cora" Bennett and Mrs. Jeanne Smith the unsavory pair who occupied so much of the public eye last year during their two trials for the murder of the latter's husband, refuse to sink into their appropriate obscurity, even after a second weary jury has pronounced them not guilty, and thus stopped the curtain upon their ghoulish drama. Last week Mrs. Smith's name reappeared in all the papers in connection with an account of the death of her mother, who at that time joined the innumerable caravan who have endeavored to kindle the kitchen fire with kerosene, and whose success has so far exceeded their wildest hopes that they have suddenly found themselves in the bright beyond. That was bad enough, but now we are threatened with a "feature" by Bennett on the subject of how a man feels under the shadow of the gallows, or words to that effect. This powerful effort has already been launched upon an audience in Jersey City, the scene of the murder and trials, and while it is feared that Bennett will go on a "starring" tour with it. It is lost enough to commit a crime, but then for a man to commit a lecture about it rather transcends anything in crime that the past has developed.

With all the newspapers published in the United States, nearly nine thousand now, I believe, one would suppose that every possible field of journalism must have long ago been covered. This, however, is not quite true. Occasionally, though of course at constantly increasing intervals, a paper will come to the light and secure immediate recognition as something needed and previously lacked. Of this nature is the new "Bradstreets," a semi-weekly journal founded last year by the well known Bradstreet Company of this city. This paper covers a high, broad and yet well defined ground which no other American publication occupies. It is what it aims to be, and is coming to be, authority on the commercial and economic state of the country. It gives no price lists but deals with the fundamental conditions of which prices are only the symtoms. With an army of correspondents covering every important point in the land, "Bradstreet's" collects and twice each week presents, in a well digested form, the condition of every market and every leading commodity or industry, with such editorial comment as enables the average business man to follow the course of things generally and in particular, intelligently, and in the least possible time. Besides this, every industrial and financial problem that presents itself receives able attention in its columns, which also contain a list of all the business changes of any consequence which occur through the Union. Whether a man be practically or only theoretically concerned with business matters he needs to read "Bradstreet's." If his case be the former he obtains from its information important to the success of his own movements, in complete and condensed shape; while if he regard the fluctuations of national commerce with the eye of the economist, its pages will both broaden and correct his basis of thought, and in the aggregate will form a work of reference second to none for sources of similar information.

The way of the transgressor is not only hard but ingenious. Shoplifting for instance has developed into a fine art in large cities like New York. Professional shoplifters very often wear great cloaks, and they can put away a great deal under them. By raising their folded arms under these cloaks they conceal the added size the stolen articles give them. They often have a pocket made in the front of their dresses, big enough to hold a number of large packages. One of the proprietors of one of the large dry goods houses in this city says, that they estimate the losses of his house from shoplifting at $10,000 a year. Customers and clerks alike must be watched. The hands of an experienced shoplifter work faster than the eyes of an observer. A detective, connected with the Central Police office in this city, stood one day in the store of the firm referred to above and saw a woman pass a way silk handkerchiefs. She would hold one up as if to examine it and then she would suddenly pass it under her other hand and then into a big front pocket, with such lightning like rapidity that the detective could not tell what she was doing, but he thought she was putting them back on the counter. He made a study of the subject and afterwards caught her.

The vigilance which must necessarily be exercised against these offenders sometimes causes dealers to get into trouble by "barking up the wrong tree" and accusing innocent persons of stealing their goods. At least two prominent dry goods houses here have had to pay irate husbands very handsome sums of money as damages for barking up unoffending wives as suspected shoplifters.

Murray Hill residents are amused over a contest between two millionaires whose residences adjoin. In constructing the buildings, the architect arranged windows of similar size on the side of each house. The occupants were not satisfied with the arrangements by which their privacy was invaded. One dark night mechanics were smuggled into the space between the houses, and on the following morning had finished the work of attaching insidence from shutters to his neighbors windows, shutting off all light. In a few nights the opposite party employed a number of workmen to demolish the fixtures and erect a barricade on the man's house, which was shortly afterward knocked down by his neighbor. As soon as each made any improvement it would be destroyed by the opposite party, and this condition of affairs has lasted since, and is likely to become a matter of bitter jealousy. Both parties have already spent a few thousand dollars, and are determined to close the windows by some device which will shield their rooms from all danger of prying eyes and at the same time admit light to his own rooms. They will not listen to any compromising device.

Many years ago a Boston gentleman discovered a process for making watch oil. It was a difficult operation, requiring a thorough knowledge of the chemical properties of the ingredients used, and great patience to get them to assimilate. Having finally perfected it by destroying all the acids and their gummy qualities, it was placed upon the market. Watchmakers are suspicious of things of this kind, and only took samples for trial.

Disheartened by his failure to sell the stuff, the inventor committed suicide. His efforts were tested. The limpid oil found its way to London, and in fitting up some ships' chronometer for the arctic regions this oil was used as a lubricator. The vessels were gone several years, having been caught in an ice pack, and during all that time the chronometers gave the most complete satisfaction.

On the return of the ships to England, the watchmakers were astonished at the results obtained, the oil being apparently as fresh as when first used. About the same time the oil was used on the chronometers of ships bound for India and other tropical climates, and the results were fully as satisfactory as with those that sailed to the North. The London manufacturers undertook to obtain more of it, but the manufacturer being dead, the secret of its manufacture was buried with him.

There were but two portions left. One was retained by the owner, and the other was recently purchased by a watch company of this city. There is about one quart of it, and for the small quantity the fabulous sum of two hundred dollars was paid, a greater sum than was ever before paid for a single quart of oil.

There is a squabble over the appointment of a committee to arrange the World's Fair to be held in this city in 1883. Judge Hilton had been selected as chairman by a number of gentlemen having the object in view, but his manageship is opposed by others who have made application to the House of Representatives to incorporate a commission to conduct the exposition. The bill was drawn to entirely avoid that dual organization which was found to make such trouble at Philadelphia during the exposition of 1876. It is sincerely hoped that some amicable arrangement will be soon effected as this internal fighting tends to demoralize the merchants who are expected to contribute toward the success of the exhibition.

RAZIE.

It is predicted by some that Robert Lincoln is the coming man in Chicago politics. He is 37 years of age, and is said to resemble his illustrious father in character.

Senator Cameron, of Pennsylvania, expresses the confident opinion that the entire vote of the Pennsylvania delegation will be cast solid for Grant, and that Grant will be nominated at the Chicago Convention on the first ballot.

An ex-Confederate soldier, Mr. Theo. Noel, now living in Chicago, in a letter to The Inter Ocean lately, says: "Anything to beat Grant" sounds to my ears as a sure indication that both rebel and doughface skulks, North and South, are about to get another infernal, everlasting, and never-to-be-forgotten thrashing" Noel can rely on that infliction.

Mass everything against Grant. Combine your forces with Pemberton and call in troops from every minor point.

It was done, but the silent, resistless conqueror went on, and combinations crumbled before him.

So it was in 1872. Liberals and Democrats, rebels and Sickers re-shovels, joined hands to beat him. But the tide swept them from their places and scattered them like chaff.

"Anything to beat Grant!" Hear the old cry going up to-day as then. "Combine everything! Blaine, Washburne, Sherman! Come up, all of you, to the manly work of disgracing your old commander." The end will be what it was in 1868 and in 1872.

It is not too much to say that in the history of this century two American names will stand out in bold relief, conspicuous above all others. And in the remote future only those names, so far as concerns the record of this country, will be familiar to the world. It is hardly necessary to mention them. Everybody knows that Lincoln and Grant will be revered the world over as long as the human heart beats in gratitude for service rendered in the cause of liberty. All others names will grow dim with age, gradually becoming indistinguishable, while time will increase the luster and halo at their memory.

It is the chief pride and glory of Illinois that it was the home of one, and still is the home of the other. With two such stars in its galaxy it has more to be proud of than even Virginia. It would be a deep disgrace to the commonwealth to put any indignity upon either. The State would be disgraced in the eyes of mankind and upon the page of history if it should place the stigma of humiliation upon the forehead of him who has done so much to honor his adopted home. The political air is filled with rumors of anti-Grant sentiment, but it hardly seems possible that the Republicans of Illinois will suffer themselves to be dragooned with any such infamy.

It is with great reluctance that The Inter Ocean speaks in censure of any Republican who has rendered good service to the country, but when there is a disposition to thrust forward a candidate named simply because Grant is the choice of the majority, duty compels the inquiry. What has any one of them ever done worthy of comparison with the services of General Grant? Must the majority surrender their convictions and sense of decency to placate a factious minority, and all because it is proposed to honor once again the foremost man of all the world? Surely, that would be asking too much. Has it come to this, that the Republican party must purchase success by such meanness? If such were indeed the case, then its mission would be at an end. No party can afford to allow that sort of minority rule.

Twenty years ago, another "favorite son" of Illinois was opposed by a factious minority of the Democracy. His party was master of the situation. He was beaten, however, and the party has never recovered. It never will recover, either, unless the Republicans play the same role in 1880 which the Democrats played in 1860. If the friends of Douglas had surrendered to the minority the defeat of the party would have been still more overwhelming. No party can afford to ecrifice the few at the expense of the many. This is a fundamental principle of politics.

Fortunately in this case the strength of the "favorite son" is not entirely partisan, as was that of Douglas. The latter had no Republican gains to compensate for his Democratic losses. General Grant is, indeed, a thorough Republican, but he is so broad and national in his views, record, and sympathies that a great many Democrats will support him, and this kind of support will be largely in proportion to the extent of the Republican opposition developed. There are relays of the Democracy, men who personally prefer him to anybody else, and who will feel proud to support him if their support is really important to the result. There is, therefore, neither justice nor policy in deferring at all to the malicious hostility of either false friends or open enemies.—Inter Ocean.

IN OPERATION.

The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented. Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor in a crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's invention washes it free from all unwholesome particles through pure water, making it a faultless inhaling instrument.

CATARRH

Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the seat of inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of high-priced "secret" nostrums.

All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis. It relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It furnishes

"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Wilson's excellent process."—Dr. Watt.

All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. Its rapid and healthy digestion where all similar preparations are rejected by the stomach, and immediately enters into the circulation, acting specifically on the lungs, and healing the ulcerous processes, is the only one that will do this. Its wonderful tonic and nutritive properties of the curative principles contained in the worts of Iceland Moss

Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach.

Is free from Disagreeable Taste.

Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.

Relieves Consumption, Scrofula, Asthma, Bronchitis, Emaciation, Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore and Weak and Sensitive Lungs.

Additional physicians use and recommend it.

As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil is remarkably efficient. Its use in Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., is strongly recommended. Its purifying power is wonderful in Consumption, depending as it frequently does upon Scrofulous taint.

It acts upon the rational theory of Stimulating Assisting Decay while it Builds Up the System, enabling it to throw off the disease.

It costs no more than ordinary oils—and wonderfully during the past seven years proved its superiority.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

A BILL was introduced in the Senate on the 4th, by Mr. Morgan, to prohibit that the President of the States shall submit to the senate and House, when assembled to count the votes for President and Vice-President, all packages purporting to contain electoral votes. The bill authorizing a Nicaragua treaty with Nicaragua was passed. The Spanish treaty treaty was taken up, and Mr. West spoke in its support. A concurrent resolution was appointed on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Indian Appropriation bill. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was reported in the House from the Senate amendments to the Indian Appropriation bill were agreed to. The river and harbor bill was then taken up, and after some discussion the House adjourned to the 5th. The Legislative Appropriation bill was reported in the House on the 5th. Mr. Morgan's bill providing for counting the electoral vote. Mr. Hayne introduced a bill to regulate the appointment and use of special deputy Marshals, providing that the pay of such officers for services of reference to any election shall be $5 for each day of actual service, and $3 more, and that they shall be appointed by the circuit Court of the United States for the district in which such Marshals are to perform their duties in each year at the term of Court next preceding any election of Representatives or delegates to Congress; but if from any cause there should be no session of the Circuit Court in the State or District where such Marshals are to be appointed, then and in that case the Justice of the District Court of the United States are hereby required to appoint such officers. Mr. Voorhees said he could not be one of the number of appearing upon appeal before Judge Marshall, who shall be assisted by such District Judges, and all officers so appointed shall be equal numbers from the different political parties, and for which known citizens of good moral character and equal standing of the two parties, persons in which those duties are to be performed

GREETING.

To SENTINEL:

Your words of greeting to your readers at the close of Vol. XI. have the true ring in them,—words full of hope, strong on the retrospective or the past, confident of having done your duty, looking forward hopefully, bravely, manfully to the coming battles, determined to fight fairly the foe, to stand and brave a voice against wrong doing, to stand above par, when to be manly requires some pull.

Men who are noble in life, demand respect and it comes to them in time.

To be independent of other opinions to stand aloof from the madding crowd, to act in behalf of one's own, requires bravery of purpose and strong heavens, to be calm, when you hear some upon you, to stand firm and be unconcerning and suspicious gossip around, and yet be unmoved. A note all to possess so an ruffled temper when some brainless wight flings mud at you, or some blatant ass (columnist) "that feels can't run a paper" there are questions presented by how many, by who has these can claim a high position among his fellows, and can lead the mind of others. He is the manful drawing other minds to him—men willingly walk with such a one, and think they are rendering their country some service.

The fishers upon a peculiar case just when over his political economy may be slow to be absorbed in the little world that constitutes his realm of thought, when he desires the good of the home or his community, and is trying to benefit the people whom he meets with, lives and works amongst, then they rally around him, discarding those things that are in the past. In town and shiny resolutions, he is ever pointing out new ways to benefit his own town, to improve their lanes, to make the whole village and county attractive to the stranger coming to pass, to point out defects in the government must "fall down, or village organization, to expose abuses, to rebuke the wrongdoing of law-breakers. These are the thrust and privilege of the Editor. If he does it without fear, or favor, men are bound to respect him, while the letter editor who is ever afraid will soon be driven to his old work hand in hand with him.

The rapid improvement of your notices in exchanges, and in the main be excellent in the newspapers, while the guide books of the G. R. & I. R. R. have brought many summer visitors, and health seekers to the north. These visitors have been charmed with the country and on going to their home have praised many favorite of their trip to their own land papers, and thus interested others, who have come up and bought lands.

What a change in six short years since we first came into Petoskey. What a change all through Antrim, Charlevoix and Emmet counties. We found Petoskey a few row lumber shanties stuck here and there, while the timbered forest seemed everywhere around us, our eyes were not to such sights. The ring of the woodsman's axe, the plaster of civilization seemed everywhere.

Five years ago we stopped in Charlevoix on a stormy, rainy week, and took a view down Pine Lake upon the seemingly unbroken forest. Last summer what a change! scarce an acre of land to be bought without paying good prices for it, while ships could be seen at any time loading cargoes for the sea-board.

Please give the newspaper Editor credit for some of this, and trusting that in the coming future, we may make the Editor our amanuensis to send abroad the names of Charlevoix county, while each and all shall labor their every moment remembering that "United we stand, divided we fall."

Trout fishing continues to be good in the streams, quite a few persons seeming to meet with the best success on the Saturday, that being the first, or not it remains to be a good precedent to follow, is the future.

DECIPHERER.

SOUTH ARM.—We spent a visit to the head of the Arm on Wednesday, and was surprised, found everything brisk, and South Arm people confident of the future of their town.

Glenn & Parsons mill is running to its full capacity and has a contract of sawing 40,000 feet of Pine for Lyon & Son. Rail cuts about 22,000 feet per day. The mill employs on both sides about 20 men, besides the logging train, and are still adding to it in wood and other available conveniences.

Jeff. Weikel is building a large addition to the Jordan River House, and expects to be in shape to accommodate a large number of tourists this summer. The house is well located.

Reis Chamberlain is also building a large addition to his boarding house, and proposes to entertain his share of summer guests.

We regard South Arm as one of the most promising villages on our inland lake.

PROBATE ORDER.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, } ss.
County of Mancelona, }

At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate office in the Village of Said Jasper, on Friday, the 31st day of March, A. D. 1880. Present, Charles E. Wright, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Michael Gallagher, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of Michael F. O'Donnell, Administrator of said estate, praying that Letters Patents be issued to him to convey the real estate of said deceased, described in said petition, pursuant to the provisions of the statute in such case made and provided.

Thereupon it is ordered that on Friday, the 30th day of May next, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that all persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the Village of Charlevoix, in said County, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted. And it is further ordered that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix SENTINEL, a newspaper circulated in said county, for four successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE circulation of the SENTINEL has increased during the last three weeks at the rate of ten per week, and new names at home and abroad, are constantly being added to our list. The SENTINEL has, with its age, reached that point in circulation and importance that it is a valuable medium for advertising. Our advertising columns bear testimony to the fact that business men consider it valuable, as our advertising patronage is steadily on the increase. To enlarge at the present high price of paper, and continue our present rate of subscription, would prove unprofitable; but an enlargement at no distant day is certain.

OUR tramp is the hero of the hour. A case of mistrial in the incidental garden could not receive more attention than the unfortunate gentleman. One kind hearted lady sent him in oyster soup Sunday.

FIRE.—Elijah Holbrom's house in South Arm took fire last Monday while the family were at dinner, and came very near burning down, but was saved with considerable damage.

SHERIFF COOPER is fitting up the wood house on the county grounds as a tramp's cage. We will confine the prisoner now in custody as soon as it is in order, and will set it up inside with iron bars, padlock, and put in a floor of the same material.

ARRESTED ON SETTLER'S ORDER.—Wm. Smith father of T. D. and Thomas Smith, of Marion, lived at the residence of the latter on Tuesday morning last, aged over 80 years. Mr. Smith was one of the first settlers of Charlevoix. He was burned Wednesday, Rev. Mr. Parmenter officiating.

P. O. BUSINESS.—The largest amount ever issued in Money Orders in one week at Charlevoix Postoffice, was the week ending last Saturday, the amount being $1,742.24. The week previous the amount was $1,268.00. This is one of the most positive indications of the prosperity and growth of Charlevoix and the country tributary to it.

BRIDGE STREET.—The main business street of Charlevoix has undergone and is undergoing marked improvement. The grade is finished, and the walk on the west side is in progress, and with its completion our business street will be a credit to us.

TRUCTING.—Messrs. J. P. and Edward Woodbury, Rev. Mr Wheeler, and Messrs. Sebring and Ickes of Kalamazoo, and Hon. A. B. Turner, of Grand Rapids, have been up the Jordan. They report very good fishing.

MARINE.—The schooner Fleetwing broke her bobstays coming out Thursday. The schooner McVea was grounded in the channel, and in passing her the tug grounded and the Fleetwing ran into her with the above result.

—Clearances for the week:

" " Schr Bee, Smith, 30 cords wood, Mosier to Milwaukee.

—Now in port: Schooners C. J. Smith, Ashtabula, Rob. Roy, Willard A. Smith and Fleetwing.

—The light on the south pier at the entrance of Charlevoix harbor is a private affair, and not kept at expense to the government. Vessels and tugs are requested to call on the bridge tender and contribute their share toward keeping it up. His a great benefit to our shipping and none interested should hold back.

—The tug Wilson Bros., of Sheboygan, Wis., of which P. S. Brown, of this place is engineer, arrived in town Sunday and proposes to remain. This makes four tugs in Charlevoix harbor.

—The schooner Gallatin, of Hamilton, Ont., is in the harbor loading square timber, located in Antrim county.

—Capt. Smokris, of the large schooner McVea, was confined to his room, when the vessel left port Saturday, and the mate took her out.

—The Clara Belle arrived in port Saturday from Traverse City with a large quantity of sidewalk lumber for bridge street, besides other freight.

—The schooner McVea has a contract with the Iron Company to bring 1,000 tons of ore from Escanaba.

—The tug Monitor Warren will be launched Wednesday.

—Capt. T. D. Smith has purchased the schooner Sea Gem in Chicago, and left with her last evening for this port.

A WICKED TRAMP!

Assaults With Intent to Kill—Arrested and Imprisoned.

Tries to Burn Himself Into Freedom and Nearly Gains that Freedom Which is Eternal.

The County Jail Burned to the Ground.

The timber had assembled our works and gained a temporary relation, to agriculture, but the enemy is on our hands.

On Tuesday one of many fraternity came into Boyne Falls and made a call on the premises of Mr. Branch. Mrs. Branch was in, of whom he demanded, in violent language, a square meal. Mrs. Branch bravely took fright and vacated the house, whereupon the tramp seized an axe and went into the back yard where he met Mr. Branch, whom he attempted to kill with the axe. Mr. B. escaped however.

He was arrested and committed to the county jail, on a charge of assault with intent to kill, arriving in this village late in the evening in charge of two officers. His viciousness was exhibited freely after arrest, and continued to display itself every time an opportunity offered, even after he was in jail. He was provided with supper and bed, uttering curses upon his captors.

On Wednesday morning about seven o'clock, smoke was seen issuing from the jail, and an alarm given. W. C. Newman was always the first in the ground, and, accompanied by one of the officers, entered the building. They found the inner cell filled with smoke, and the prisoner was not there. Search soon revealed the fact that the roof was ablaze and the smoke blinding.

Investigation revealed the fact that the tramp had piled up bedding and stools against the door, and with straw and feathers, and matches which he undoubtedly had about his person, fervently set them to his prison house, and then retreated to a cell. Two minutes more and he would have been dead, as the smoke had smothered most without dressing.

He being brought out he was placed upon the grass and the air at extinct stock of the fanned into a flame by Jim Jones and Lewis. In the meantime a quick effort was made to save the jail, but without effect and it was soon in ashes. The almost lifeless incendiary was carried to the opposite shop of S. J. Hodge, on Antrim street, where he remained almost unconscious during most of the day. The exercise of an unbounded spirit of Christian humanity brought the poor wretch to a condition of probable recovery, and as we write he is rapidly gaining and is guarded by hired attendants, under the oversight of Sheriff Cooper.

The tramp is quite reticent, and refuses to be interviewed on the subject of the desperate offense, but gave the name as Frank Towne, and claimed to have come from Pennsylvania.

He has a desperate, ugly look, and is undoubtedly a vagrant tramp, without either pride, honor, decency or any trait of manliness.

G. C. MASON, of Ann Arbor, has leased a part of W. J. Bradley's house, and will bring his family here for the summer.

The law firm of Wisner & Mason has dissolved, O. F. Wisner continuing the business at the same office.

THE SENTINEL news stand has opened up for the season, and will during the summer and fall supply the trade public with the leading periodicals.

DR. GEO. W. CROUTER has a new advertisement on this page. Read it over carefully and then call at his store and see if what he tells you is not true.

A petition is being circulated asking that the road running through the Resort grounds be taken up and located on the west and south side of the grounds.

We call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of Chas. Wendel, jeweler, in this issue. Mr. Wendel is a manufacturing jeweler, and is therefore the only worthy party of his business. He is located at Lewis & Ackett's drug store.

COMMON COUNCIL.—The village council Saturday evening ordered eight foot crossings built on both sides of Bridge street from on the east side to be of two inch plank, and those on the west side to be of three inch plank.

M. Carpenter was granted permission to put the posts of his veranda two feet over the line of the side walk.

The South Arm and Boyne Falls State Road will soon be quite a great benefit to the section of country through which it will pass, but it brings South Arm and Boyne Falls into direct communication with the railroad, the distance being but twelve miles and thereby comparatively level country. Heretofore their outlets to the railroad were by way of Charlevoix or Boyne. When completed, this road will be of great value to the Head of South Arm, which, surrounded as it is by an excellent agricultural region and possessed of good commercial facilities must develop into a good town.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

CLEANING CISTERNS AND BARRELS.—Wash well with soda and set in the sun to dry; rinse them well and do not let the barks get wet.

GOOD RISES.—One pint of milk, one teacup of yeast; mix it thin; when light add twelve ounces of brown sugar, two ounces of butter, four eggs, flour sufficient to make stiff as bread; when risen again, mold and spread it on tins.

TO GLOSS STIFF BOSOMS.—Take two ounces of powdered gum arabic, pour in a pint or more of water, and thoroughly covered it, but let stand all night. In the morning pour it carefully from the dregs into a clean bottle, cork and keep it for use; add a teaspoonful of this gum water to a pint of starch made in the usual way.

CLEANING WOOLEN STUFFS.—Take one pint of hot water, and slice into it two ounces of shaving soap. Add to it two ounces of spirits of ammonia, and one teaspoonful of powdered saltpeter. Put into a bottle and shake until thoroughly dissolved. To use it, pour a little into a saucer, dip in a sponge, and rub the material vigorously.

SPONGE CAKE.—Four eggs, and cup sugar, one cup flour, one-half teaspoonful baking powder, one teaspoonful extract of orange; beat the yolks and sugar together ten minutes; add the flour with powder sifted in, and the extract last; add the eggs (whites) beaten to a froth; bake in a well-buttered tin in a steady oven, thirty minutes.

TIP-TOP CAKE.—One egg, one tablespoonful of butter, a small cup of sweet milk, one and a half cupfuls of flour, one teaspoonful and a half of baking powder, one teaspoonful of lemon extract; beat the egg, butter and sugar together till light; add the milk; sift the flour and powder together and add to the rest; last, put in your extract.

BROILED SHAD.—Split and wash the shad and afterwards dry in a cloth; season with salt and pepper; have ready a bed of clear, bright coals; grease the gridiron well, and as soon as it is hot lay the shad upon it; broil quarter of an hour or more, according to the thickness; butter well and send to table; it can be served with melted butter.

TEA BISCUIT.—One half cup of butter, two cups sugar, two pints flour, two teaspoonfuls of baking powder, one teaspoonful extract nutmeg. Sift the flour, sugar and powder together; rub in the butter cold and add enough sweet milk to make a soft dough—add the extract last; roll out half an inch thick and cut out with a biscuit cutter; wash over with milk and bake twenty minutes.

HAM SALAD.—Take your fragment of cold boiled ham left after slicing, remove all dark and dry portions, also all the fat; mince evenly and fine; take enough rich, sweet cream to set the mince, a salt spoon of strong ground mustard, the same of fine sugar and a good pinch of cayenne pepper; mix thoroughly with the ham; garnish with sprigs of parsley, and you have a nice dish for tea.

CRULLERS.—One cup of white sugar, two-thirds of a cup of sweet milk, two tablespoonfuls melted butter, one egg, three small teaspoonfuls of baking powder; season with nutmeg. Have the cakes all rolled out before you begin frying; have the lard very hot and plenty of it. Turn them over almost constantly while cooking, and you cannot fail to have cakes light, tender and free from grease.

TOMATO SOUP.—Six tomatoes peeled and sliced; pour over them one quart of boiling water, half teaspoonful of soda; when it stops foaming add one pint of sweet milk and season as for oysters, with butter, pepper, salt and a little rolled cracker. Serve as soon as it boils. Canned tomatoes can be used just as well. This is very delicious and nice for a person who is just getting able to eat after a fit of sickness.

EGG CAKE.—Mix together any kind of cold meat, (chopped fine) with an equal quantity of bread crumbs; use pepper, salt, a bit of butter and a little milk; fill some buttered pan-pans with the mixture, then carefully break an egg on the top of each; season with pepper and salt, and sprinkle some very fine cracker crumbs on top; bake eight minutes; a little grated cheese may be added to the cracker, if desired.

CRUDE PETROLEUM is an excellent preservative of pine shingles, causing them to become of the character of cedar or cypress. But the petroleum will flavor the water that runs from a roof so prepared for more than a year. To steep the shingles in lime water renders the vegetable albumen insoluble, and so makes them more durable. The lime water is soon washed out, and after that the water is unchanged.

PRESERVED STRAWBERRIES.—For every pound of berries use one pound of white sugar and half a pint of water; pick carefully over the berries; boil sugar and water until it thickens, and then pour the strawberries into it gently, and let them boil slowly for fifteen minutes and no more; put it all away now in a preserving pan, and let it get cool; when cold, strain off syrup, avoiding handling the berries, let the syrup now to boil alone, skimming it perfectly, when in a good boil put in the strawberries, and let the fruit be in not more than five minutes; then remove and put in pots or jars when perfectly cold.

CURRANTS is sometimes a trickle learned by opportunity, and is sometimes brought on by inexactness, resulting from indigestion, or by irritation of the teeth gums. In the one case it must be unlearned, and in the other may be cured. To prevent it, procure a crib bring muzzle, which is made with two bows across the mouth from front to back, so placed that the horse cannot take hold of anything with his teeth to crib on and yet may be able to take his feed. If the horse suffers from indigestion give daily in the food two tea-spoonfuls of salt, one of prepared charcoal, and one of powdered gentian root.

DRESSING CLOTHS.—These cups for protecting the hair says a lady correspondent, are much less commonly worn than they should be. They are prettier when made of shining cambric and gay ribbons. I have lately make one for real use, and chose plain dark calico, using an oval piece twenty-two inches long and eighteen inches wide; this was bound with gray plaid, and another strip half an inch wide was put on an inch from the edge. Under this last I ran rubber cord, and finished with a knot of ribbon in front. I wear it while doing all my morning work, for it not only protects my hair from every particle of dust, but hides its ever-lengthening form at early and inopportune callers. Besides this, it is very easily drawn down over my temples while standing in a sudden draught of air, for I have learned that neuralgic nerves are very sensitive.

How Michigan Fights Curculio.

THERE is no fruit of our Northern States more delicious than the plum, none more scarce, none more profitable to raise. Yet the curculio has almost banished plum culture from our country. Notwithstanding the ravages of the "Little Turk," however, several Michigan orchardists secure this crop annually, with scarce a failure. A few years since one of our alumni, immediately upon graduation, engaged to labor for a orchardist of Northern Ohio. Some fine plum trees attracted his attention. He asked if they raised plums. "Oh, no!" was the response. "The trees bloom full every year, but the plums all drop off." He gained consent to fight the curculio, and also gained a large and profitable crop of this delicious fruit. The curculio hibernates, and if confined will live for years when properly fed and cared for. It is nocturnal, and early in the season hides under chips, boards, etc., by day, but later remains in the trees in the day time, as well as after nightfall. It stings the plums from the time they set till ripening are ripe. In stinging, it makes a crescent-shaped cut about the puncture where the egg is put. Upon hatching the larva eats into the fruit, causing it to fall prematurely. It also attacks cherries, peaches, pears and apples, but none of these last fall from the tree as the result of attack.

Early in the season, if there are no weeds, grass or rubbish beneath the plum, peach or cherry trees (the damage to apples and pears will hardly warrant effort to rid them of this enemy), it will pay to lay pieces of board or bark or chips beneath the trees. The beetles will hide beneath these trees by day, and can be easily gathered up and destroyed. Mr. A. S. Dyckman, of South Haven, Mich., whose plum orchard has been immensely profitable, states that this method saves him three hundred dollars annually over the old method of exclusive jarring. Mr. Dyckman uses oak bark, places two small pieces beneath each tree, on opposite sides near the trunk, with smooth surface down. He employs boys to gather the insects, and pay a token according to the number they find. This insures close examination. The curculios are placed in an open bottle, closed by the thumb of the one who is gathering them.

Often the character of the orchard precludes this method, and ever where practiced it needs to be supplemented, as in the season, by the jarring or sheet process. This is not expensive, and often brings a tremendous profit. To practice this we have only to put a sheet—a white sheet is best—beneath the tree and give the limbs a sudden jar. The little beetles, looking like dried buds, fall to the sheet, where they can be caught and killed. For a few trees the sheets can be tacked or sewed to a cheap rectangular frame, with a narrow slit on one side, so that the trunk of the tree can be brought to the center of the sheet's surface. With but a few trees, two persons can carry this sheeted frame from tree to tree. In large orchards it can be placed on one or two wheels, where one person can easily manipulate it. The mallet should be of rubber, or else of hickwood, so that in striking the branches they may not be injured. A sudden jar is what is needed to fell the insects. From several years' experience, I know that with caution no damage need be done.

The trees should be jarred very early in the morning, or just before dark. While the weevils are mostly in the trees. The jarring should begin as soon as the fruit sets, and continue as long as the insects are caught. The frequency of jarring, whether once or twice daily, or less, will be indicated by the success in catching the beetles. Let all remember that these little weevils are very small, and when they curl up to fall, look like dried buds, so that the inexperienced eye hardly sees them. Look very carefully, or you will be deceived in thinking that you are free from the pest, when, indeed, your trees are fairly overrun. A brother of mine commenced a few years ago to raise plums exclusively for the curculio. Not thinking this profitable, he bought three years ago to use the sheet, and now he has plums "to sell and to loan."—Prof. A. J. Cook, Michigan Agricultural College, in N. Y. Tribune.

LOST.

PAPA has lost his baby!
Where can his baby be?
A ship went sailing away;
Has she been smuggled on?

Papa has lost his baby!
Where can his baby be?
Perhaps some wind has caught her
And whisked her away a tree.

Papa has lost his baby,
His baby's pretty laugh,
And all that broken prattle,
He no'erlook but half.

What has become of baby?
Has anybody know?
What could this beloved her
To take her so?

Why, she's become a baby,
A lady very grand!
With all the airs an I graces
Of any in the land.

She don't care to any longer
To sit in papa's lap;
Why, she has washed a fortnight,
And not with no mishap.

She don't want any riding,
To-day, on papa's knee;
To see her feign importance,
You'd think her some grandee.

So papa's lost his baby,
He feels it every hour;
But then I know it's certain
The bud must grow a flower.

Then's what's become of baby,
Of papa's baby dear;
She's grown to be a lady,
And, anyway, very near.

—Hon. W. W. Hallowell, Jr., in N. Y. Independent.

Play Gently, Boys!

WHILE waiting for a lady on whom I called the other day, to come in, I looked through a photograph-album which was lying upon the table.

The face of a young lad was so bright and happy, I looked at it a long time. The pure brow attracted his attention. He asked if they raised plums. "Oh, no!" was the response. "The trees bloom full every year, but the plums all drop off." He gained consent to fight the curculio, and also gained a large and profitable crop of this delicious fruit. The curculio hibernates, and if confined will live for years when properly fed and cared for. Look after it has fallen over a great rock.

Just as Tommy touched the cradle the Chief Hasty Pudding Stirrer to the Great King of Bedmai's Land made another wild dash into the something, and in an instant it—well, it "slopped over."

"I don't see why a fellow can't be let alone. Don't want to be rocking babies and doing things all the time."

Another turn by the Chief Hasty Pudding Stirrer, and then another "slop over."

"I won't stand it. I'll run away! I've had enough of rocking babies, and bringing in wood and coal, and doing things, and I'll go away from them!" And so the Chief Hasty Pudding Stirrer to the Great King of Badman's Land continued to stir the "something" in Tommy Tingle, and the "something" continued to "slop over" until there was a pretty mess of it.

At last the baby was fast asleep, and Tommy Tingle grasped his hat and—ran away. He rushed down the street like a wind-spirit, taking no notice of anything or anybody, until suddenly he found himself in a crowd gathered about the Opera House.

"Hullo! what's this?"

"See that pony strutting across the street!" said a street urchin at Tommy's elbow. "Yes," replied Tommy. "Well, the man that shoots trained birds in the Opera House to-night's goin' to give us a free show here in a minute." "Going to walk that rope?" asked Tommy.

"No, sir. Big bird goin' to wheel little bird 'cross the street on that rope in that little cart you see up there. There's the beauty."

Up from the crowd a long pole appeared, on which a little bird was raised to a perch that was underneath and attached to the cart. Down went the pole, and soon it was seen again bearing a larger bird, which stepped clumsily and unsure on to the rope. Taking a step or two, the large bird stretched its neck, and, taking hold of the "cart" with its beak, proceeded to push the tiny vehicle across the street on the rope-track. Half way across, and the little bird seemed to lose his temper. Surely, something did not go smoothly, for the bird made a queer bounce, and away it "slopped over;" perhaps—the cart tipped, and there was seen dangling from the rope wrong side up, the little pole again and took everything back to the starting point, and the second trial was successful. The crowd moved away, and in a few moments Tommy found himself at the gate of his own home again.

"Why, see here, Tommy Tingle!" said he to himself, "what are you here for? You've run away. Forget all about it, thinkin' of that bird-show. Guess I'll wait and see Mother Tingle. It's most night, and I haven't time to find a place to stay, anyway."

A few hours later Tommy Tingle was in dreamland. He was running away. He did not know where he would go, or what he would do, and cared not to care much, if he could only find a place where boys are not asked to rock babies, or to bring in wood and coal, or to "do things." Away he went as fast as he could run, and the next thing he really did know he was being dragged through a crowd by a nurse girl, carrying a long pole, and a moment later he was caught in the "pole at the collar of his coat, and raised in a rope to the street which crosses the street. There he stood on the rope, leaning against the building.

"Hullo! it's you, is it?" The voice came from a sort of wheelbarrow that rested on the rope before him, and peering into his face were the saucy eyes of a street urchin.

"Do you know what you're up here for?" asked the urchin.

"No. I don't," said Tommy.

"You've got to wheel me across the street."

"Oh, I never can do it! I can't walk a rope."

"You've got to. Old Foley's your master now."

"Start, youngster!" came from the man with the pole.

"Oh, sir, I can't do it!" sobbed Tommy.

"Yes, you can do it. Start, I say."

And Tommy started. He walked a few feet, and then the crowd yelled and hooted, the band played. "When child I was a shepherd boy," and Tommy's tears blinded Him so that he missed his footing, and—there he lay, with snake in his warm bed at home.

"I'm glad it's over. I'm glad that was just a dream. I guess I've run away enough."

And Tommy Tingle turned over for another nap.—William N. Burr, in S. S. Times.

A Paragraph of the Future.

TIME, A. D. 1900.

"The necessity for church going and church collecting is now almost done away with. Rev. Dr. Turgid, from the central office of the Sacred Telephone, preaches every Sunday to [illegible] families of his persuasion in the privacy of their homes. The musical adjuncts to the service, vocal and instrumental, are also dispensed by telephone, and are wafted to the 5,000 homes by electricity each family joins in the hymn. The average attention to sermons is much greater now than a quarter of a century since, as the ladies have not each other's dresses and bonnets to look at."—N. Y. Graphic.

Another evil spirit came along, and I think he must have been Chief Hasty Pudding Stirrer to the Great King of Badman's Land, for as Tommy turned into the house he knew something about him which ought to be calm and collected was getting into a fearfully ruffled condition. How that "something" did boil and bubble and rage and dash and tear about, just like an angry little

ABOUT two months ago an industrious young man living in the south part of Fall River took to himself a wife. The wedded pair shared the home of the bride's mother. At the end of the week the mother demanded the custody of her son-in-law's earnings, which were immediately surrendered to her by the young man. This continued for a few weeks, when the son-in-law began to think the mother's exactions were unreasonable. Trouble in the family was the result. The young husband hired a tenement near the centre of the city, where he has resided for about three weeks, keeping bachelor's hall, as the bride will not leave her mother.—Providence Journal.

SICILIAN brigands recently carried away a son from his father, at Valle della Vita, promising to restore him on payment of 5,000 francs. The father gave information to the police, and by their activity the brigands were discovered, and a cave near Caltabellotta was named as the place where the boy was to be found. The father and the soldiers, on entering the cave, found the bones of the lad lying about, the flesh having been eaten away by dogs and vultures. The boy had been murdered by the brigands in revenge for the supposed treachery of the father in giving information to the police.

THE best place to keep eggs intended for hatching is to wrap them in paper and put them down cellar in a covered box or basket. Don't turn the eggs after they have been kept this way for four weeks before being set. If they have been kept that long best time turn them once every day or every other day. But set the eggs as soon as a hen can be had to take them.—Exchange.

AN ingenious American inventor has recently devised a machine for working up saw-dust into a pulp and compressing it in various shapes, such as moldings, picture frames, etc. It is said that articles of furniture made in this way are in certain respects preferable to those made of ordinary wood, the pulp becoming perfectly hard and impervious to water.

THOSE who desire to make their own duplicating paper may do so by rubbing into a suitable tissue a mixture of six parts of lard, one part of beeswax, and sufficient fine black to give it a good color. The mixture should be warm and not applied to excess.

IN no other land than ours is there such profusion and variety of food, and certainly there is no other where there is so much waste caused by indifference to economical habits and gross ignorance of the principles which ought to govern the preparation of food.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, MAY 24th, 1880.

I heard a dog BARK the other day which seemed to me curious enough to be worth recording. A little Skye terrier called 'Jersey,' belonging to the chief engineer of a great factory over in Jersey City, was of a very inquiring turn of mind as regards machinery, and used to make his way, carefully but curiously, around the great engine, snuffing at every part within his reach. The intelligent retriever is to be told in the words of the engineer himself: "At about 9 o'clock one morning, nearly three years ago, I saw him dozing under my desk there. I went out of the room on a moment, and when I returned I missed Jersey. I looked for him, but could not find him. Then I whistled and called. I heard a plaintive wail coming from among the machinery. It was so faint that I supposed Jersey might have fallen down the flywheel race into the cellar. I lit a lantern and gossped among the machinery in the cellar, but vainly. Occasionally I heard the wail repeated, each time less distinctly. At 12 o'clock the machinery was stopped. The last revolution of the fly-wheel threw a little fluffy object at the feet of one of the firemen in the cellar. He picked it up and running to the light saw that it was poor Jersey. He did not appear to breathe and his body was cold. The fireman called me and I said that it was all over with the dog. But the fireman felt warmth in the tip of his right ear, and we set to work to resuscitate him. In half an hour he got up, shook himself as though he wanted to find out whether he was all there, and began to frisk around me. Well, he had been in the fly-wheel for fully two hours and a half, revolving at the rate of about fifty revolutions to the minute. He was probably making a little private examination of the working of the wheel, when he lost his balance and fell into one of the spokes of the wheel. The rapid motion kept him in place until the machinery was stopped. He was snug enough where he was, but the breath was almost out of his body when the wheel stopped. He lived, apparently in good health, until some time ago. Then he died."

And speaking of dogs, it may be of interest to state, that the Fourth Annual Bench Show of dogs which has just closed at the Hotel Gilmore's Garden, was the largest similar exhibition ever held, surpassing in size and quality even the English dog shows. The prizes awarded amounted to thousands of dollars in value, while the aggregate value of the dogs themselves, if we accept the estimates of their owners, would be some where among the millions.

The coaching season is fairly opened again and the young bloods who make "show" drives to Philadelphia and back and run regular trips over shorter routes about the city are once more happy. That is they were happy up to a few days ago, since when their feelings have been damaged and their somewhat snobbish exclusiveness severely sat upon, by the appearance in the street of a gorgeous four-in-hand drag, which resembles the [illegible] enterprising soap man for advertising purposes. Two dignified darkies in drab coats with bright brass buttons and high hats with gold bands sit on the box, and two other colored brothers sit on the rear seat and persistently blow long brass horns to attract attention. The upper crust do not enjoy the travesty, but the rest of the city seems to appreciate it hugely.

Another humorous advertising dodge creates considerable amusement on our great thorough-fares. It is the opposite attraction of a rival soap manufacturer. Each day through the busiest streets strut two tall darkies arrayed in expensive garments. They wear snuby spring suits of light fabric, sport gold headed canes in their hands, which are covered with canary colored kid gloves. They incessantly smoke fine segars and, apparently engage in the most confidential and earnest conversation, promenade up and down all day long. Their high white hats are almost entirely covered with a crape band upon the front of which is pasted in white letters TRY IT, while the back is adorned with the name of the soap advertised. A laughing crowd follows them wherever they go.

To attract the attention of the public, many devices are arranged, and "enterprising" merchants with more avarice than scruples, sometimes resort to heartless methods. One of the most detestable practices is to enclose a circular in an envelope, representing a telegraph dispatch, and having it delivered by uniformed boys at private residences. It, of course, commands attention, which a card or circular would not ordinarily receive; and it also represents suffering, sometimes amounting to torture, before the hoax is understood, and in several cases, where relatives have been absent, it has caused excitement that has been attended by dangerous consequences. Of course no legitimate business man will resort to such a trick, but there are thousands of quacks in the city who will practice any device to add to their notoriety.

While riding down town in an elevated railroad car a few nights ago, I was startled by a shriek, and looking in the direction from whence it came, saw the form of a woman hang for a moment in midair from the upper window of a tall building, then swiftly fall to the pavement below with a sickening thud. A laborer had returned home after a hard day's work and found his wife lying upon the floor in a drunken stupor. After some words he struck her. She attempted to escape from the room and was prevented by her brute of a husband, who was heard to say, "I'll throw you out of the window." They lived in the fourth story of a tenement house. The woman when picked up from the flag stones, was dead. The husband is held by the authorities on the charge of murder.

The weather hereabouts is not doing the fair thing by us in this neighborhood. Unseasonable cold alternates with unseasonable heat, which is raising havoc among the young vegetation. Rain enough to lay the dust has not fallen in more than two weeks and the ground is dry as tinder. Forest fires continue to rage in Pennsylvania and New Jersey to such an extent that our sun has once or twice been entirely obscured by the smoke. The superstitious are inclined to attribute this and the usual amount of sickness this spring to the peculiar conjunction of planets now existing for the first time in 2,500 years.

RADIX.

Gas has been entirely turned off from the Boston postoffice, and all night work has stopped; and gas has been partly turned off from the New York postoffice, and most night work has stopped. This, because the Democratic majority in congress has neglected and refused, after repeated warnings, to pass the necessary appropriation bill. Twice since the Democratic party obtained power in congress has this disgraceful thing occurred. Business men may lose largely, and the whole country must suffer inconvenience, through a partial stoppage in mail facilities, and also through the suspension of the courts of justice, because of Democratic neglect to pass the proper appropriation bills. There is no possible excuse for this. The national treasury is full to overflowing of money. The revenues of the Government are ample. The taxpayers have provided the money, and they are entitled to have every public service promptly provided which they have already paid for in advance. The reason is simply the dilatoriness of congress, caused partly by the Democratic determination to cripple the government as much as possible, and partly by a desire to compel the President to allow himself to be dictated to for the benefit of the Democratic party. The Democratic congressmen, while they thus deprive the people of postoffice accommodations and courts who pay their own salaries regularly. The people will do well not to forget these things immediately, but remember them when they go to the polls to elect congressman next fall. Detroit Post & Tribune.

In Gallipolis, O., Philip Waggoner was sent to to get his uncle, Adam Waggoner, provoked, and when the old fellow swore, would haul him up before a justice who, for years, fined him regularly until the other day, thinking the prosecutions had gone into persecution, he refused to continue them. Then Philip, maddened by the decision, shot his uncle dead in the court room.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!
CARBOLINE.
A DEODORIZED EXTRACT OF PETROLEUM.
The only Article that will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.
WHAT THE WORLD HAS BEEN WANTING FOR CENTURIES.
The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is thatwhich, as stated previously, from Petroleum and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative and, while it does not create a new skin of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The failing out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the arrangement to do this under the study to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and like many other wonderful discoveries it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was to far-off Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a rich luxuriant head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The manes and even the tails of horses, which had fallen off, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could partake the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of our own chemists has overcome the difficulty, and, by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as daintily as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments made with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications where the hair was thin and falling gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid, in searching in its "state, seems to penetrate to the roots at once and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and by some mysterious operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful tight-brown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well entertained to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling assured that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburg Commercial of October 23, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of Carbolined Who are using it with most gratifying and encouraging results:

MR. GIOVANNI P. BADIA, of the Ostes Opera Troupe writes: "After using CARBOLINE one month, I am pleased to state that my hair has entirely left off coming out, and is producing a wonderful growth of half which I had none for years."

N. MCCLUSKEY, Sixth Avenue Pharmacy, Pittsburg, Pa., says: "The good effects from the use of CARBOLINE are brought to my notice every day in such an extent as to justify me in recommending it to my most intimate friends."

CARBOLINE Gives the utmost satisfaction as a Hair Renewer.
CARBOLINE Has a magical effect on gray hair.
CARBOLINE Is free from irritating and poisonous chemicals.
CARBOLINE Is the natural nourishment for the hair.
CARBOLINE Has been indorsed by the highest medical authority.
CARBOLINE Gives weak and sickly hair the gloss and vigor of youth.
CARBOLINE Restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.
CARBOLINE In but a few—restores the hair naturally.
CARBOLINE Cures all Diseases of the Scalp.
CARBOLINE Keeps the hair moist and the head cool.
CARBOLINE Makes the hair look natural and beautiful.
CARBOLINE Delightful, fragrant, and cures at the same time.

CARBOLINE
Is now presented to the public without fear of contradiction as the best known and most beautifier of the hair the world has ever produced.
Price ONE DOLLAR per bottle.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

THE Senate on the 11th concurred in the House amendment to the joint resolution authorizing the President to call an International Monetary Conference; the amendment includes in the conference troops sent against the Indians, those at present in service. Mr. Hill spoke for over two hours on the Kellogg-Spofford contempt case, advocating President's claim to the seat. In the House the three civil bills were reported from the Ways and Means Committee and read from it. Butler on the bankrupt law; Hiscock regulating certain duties on sugar, and to repeal certain articles from the internal revenue list. Carlisle introduced a bill to amend the Pennsylvania contested election law. Randall from the Committee on Appropriations reported a joint resolution declaring that the Secretary of War has no authority to expend money for the improvement of the Mississippi River at Keokuk, Iowa, and directing the Secretary of War to cause the work to be suspended. In the House the three civil bills, Mr. Eaton stated that the Senate proposition to refer the Kellogg-Spofford contempt case to the Committee on Privileges and Elections was agreed to. Mr. Kellogg objected to the reference of the case to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, on the ground that the Senate had no power to refer a matter of that character to a committee of the House. Mr. Eaton stated that the Senate had agreed to the House proposition to refer the case to the Committee on Privileges and Elections, and that the Senate had also passed a resolution declaring that the Senate had no power to refer the case to a committee of the House. Pending the question of reference, the House adjourned.

SENATE bills were reported in the Senate on the 12th in many more than the Rose-bottom appropriation bill. Mr. Hill concluded his remarks on the Spofford-Kellogg case, and read a number of alleged translations of papers originating in an Mr. Kellogg's office, to show the real aspects of the contest, at great length. After the bill introduced in the House was come, by Mr. Hooker, abolishing the Indian Commission, and Mr. Wood, from itself to increase on Railways and Canals, appropriating $5,000,000 for the improvement of the water route to facilitate transportation between the Lakes and the Atlantic seaboard by the Welland and Ohio rivers. The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill was further considered in Committee of the whole.

IN the Senate on the 13th Mr. Hampton spoke on the Kellogg-Spofford case, explaining the unseating of Mr. Kellogg, and argued that the Senate having once finally passed on the Louisiana contest, the question could not be reopened. Mr. Morgan then followed Mr. Hill at great length against the claims of Mr. Spofford. On motion of Mr. Blair, in behalf of the minority of the Select Committee appointed to inquire into the alleged bribery in the recent Senatorial elections, submitted a report, taking issue with the findings of the majority as presented by Senator Wallace, in favor of the alleged gerrymandering powers of the Legislature of Massachusetts and Rhode Island. The minority of the Committee also dissent from the action of Judge Hoar, and, finally, from the individual interrogatories on the part of Mr. Morgan, and from any line of inquiry not immediately connected with the election of Senator, or any person of any party. Mr. Blair gave notice that he would submit views in support of the minority report. A resolution, introduced by each of such additional interrogatories, authorizing the Committee to report to the Senate the names of all railroad corporations in the United States to whom grants of land have been made in compliance with the terms of the grants under the time specified therein; also the number of acres of unearned lands claimed by each of such railroad corporations, and the period of time when their right to claim was lapsed under the limitation contained in said grants. The bill establishing all tolls on the Louisville & Portland Canal after July 1, 1880, and authorizing the Secretary of War to close upon the Treasury for the actual expenses of operating and repairing the canal, was passed. Mr. Cobb introduced a bill in the House to appropriate $500,000 to supply deficiencies in the appropriations for the payment of pensions for the fiscal year. The Legislative, Executive and Judicial Appropriation bill was further considered, a number of verbal amendments were agreed to, and several sections and amendments were disposed of.

IN the Senate on the 14th Mr. Morgan, from the Select Committee on Counting the Electoral Vote, reported adversely on the Senate bill to fix a day for the meeting of Electors for President and Vice-President to preside for counting the Electoral vote, and for the decision of questions arising thereon from Mr. Eaton also reported, from the same committee, a concurrent resolution adopting a joint rule for counting the votes of Electors for President and Vice-President. Mr. Eaton presented the memorial of Davis Hatch, of Norwalk, Ohio, alleging that he was unlawfully arrested, tried by court martial and sentenced to death by the Government of San Domingo, on the false charge of aiding an insurrection; that his property was confiscated to expulsion from the country, but he was declared five months in prison by the connivance of American officials interested in the success of the Government. Cameron, from the Committee on Military Affairs, reported favorably the bill to remove certain articles from the list of articles exempted from duty. Morrill introduced a bill to amend the Revised Statutes in relation to the appointment of Cadets to the Military Academy at West Point. Logan introduced a bill to provide for the payment of certain claims of officers and soldiers of the late war. Bills were introduced and referred as follows: By Mr. Hoar, to provide for the payment of the claims of the Penobscot Indians; by Mr. Ingalls, to provide for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas; by Mr. Windom, to provide for the payment of the claims of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota.

SENATE bills were reported in the House on the 11th from the Committee on Ways and Means and referred to the Committee of the Whole. Among them was one to repeal the duty on quinine and other alkaloids of cinchona bark. Mr. Hill introduced a bill providing for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Chippewa Indians in Minnesota. Mr. Hill spoke in favor of the bill to provide for the payment of the claims of the Pottawatomie Indians in Kansas. THE Russian Government has directed that the great iron-clad Peter the Great be sent to the Pacific, accompanied by four other ships of war.

JAPAN has rejected the proposal of China to enter into an alliance against Russia.

SERIOUS rioting in connection with the strike occurred at Lowatt, France, on the 14th. The soldiers were forced to charge the mob.

A CABUL dispatch of the 14th says it had been learned that the Ameer had committed Afzoon Pass, and were holding it with 9,000 men to repel the British.

LATER NEWS.

THE United States Senate was not in session on the 15th. After considerable discussion in the House the concurrent resolution for final adjournment on the 19th was agreed to—121 to 91. The resolution was vigorously opposed by some of the low tariff members and by the friends of the seating Mahone and relative to the tariff. Nearly all the Republicans voted for the resolution, and many Democrats cast it against it.

A SUNKEN explosion in a London iron foundry on the 15th killed twenty-five persons and seriously injured sixty others, some of whom would probably die.

AT a caucus of Democratic Congressmen held on the night of the 15th it was resolved unanimously that Speaker Springer, that the vote by which the House agreed to adjourn on the 31st should be reconsidered, as many important matters would be pressed before Congress. It was also resolved that the Forestry Assessment bill should be called up in the House at an early day and pressed to a vote.

CONSIDERABLE amounts of money, food and clothing had reached Mitau, Pa., up to the 15th, but much more was needed. Over 600 houses were burned to the ground, and nothing saved but the smoldering ruins. Owing to many attempts of incendiaries to fire the buildings which were left standing, the Governor had been called on to send some companies of the state militia to protect the town. So far as known only one person, an old gentleman of eighty-five years, perished in the flames. The women had shoes and clothes.

A COLORED MAN was on the 13th admitted to the New York Bar by the Supreme Court of the State.

AN interview with Mr. E. B Washburne was published on the 15th at Portland, Me., where he was visiting his brother. He is reported as stating that his candidacy was not of the question; that he was for Grant first, last and all the time; that he repudiated all combinations, and that he would not be a candidate under any circumstances. He derided the charge of duplicity, and said the result in Cook County was a greater surprise to him than to anybody else.

The Pine Lake and South Arm steamer set out on trip crowded with passengers and freight from Charlevoix, and the harbor does never showed it so that they have had for this season. All can believe that Charlevoix and the Pine Lake region is on the boom.

That Excursion.—Such an opportunity is rarely offered as Hannah Lay & Co. Virginia to visit Chicago, the great city of the west. The place is in the National Republican Convention, and that results in low rates, good eating and sleeping, and leaves us the day in Chicago all for $10. The magnificent steamer City of Traverse is safely and comfort itself, and has large apartments for excursionists to enjoy themselves. She leaves Traverse City next Monday evening.

One suburban contemporary on the lake, measuring the importance of Boyne City by his own supercilious standard, and boniface, thinks we put it too modest when we said last week that Boyne City was "improving," and of course "populous." Populous against what? A town fifteen miles from Charlevoix! Has the Boniface agent ever been to Charlevoix? Why we call it Boyne City. Just a word of advice. Look over your list, that building committee of Charlevoix never have been your while you endeavor to raise structure under process of construction. If Boyne City ever reaches proportions to correspond with Clink's estimation it will be a city of fifty thousand inhabitants or upwards. And, then you, we hope it will.

Persons visitors, M. Wood, of Pavilion, went to Milwaukee on the steamer Detroit Thursday.

—Charley Hampton, of the Little Traverse Independent, made us a pleasant call Friday. Charley Hampton's locomotive will be the remotion of him yet.

—Jackson long-lost Petoskey was in town Friday and Saturday of last week visiting his old friends here.

—Capt. Walter Clifford and wife left for the west on the propeller Blake, Friday.

—Mrs. Fox and children returned home Friday.

—Mrs. Husband, nee and daughter, of Ypsilanti, and Rev. Mr. Wheeler, of Kalamazoo, are at the Resort Rambling House.

—Mrs. Samuel Sweetman nee Miss Mary Jhason, of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting at her mother's, Mrs. Elias Mason, in this village. Mr. Sweetman has recently fallen heir to a fortune in England, and Mrs. Sweetman will remain here while he is across the ocean after it. Don't look up ones while you are over there, Sam, and present our regards to Aunt Victoria and the rest of the family.

The Axe.—The county jail, which was destroyed by fire on Wednesday, was a wooden structure, about 14x18 in size, built of two thicknesses of hemlock plank, and provided with a stove and external flue. It contained two plank cells, in one each, and was a cheap common cottage, about $200. It was insured for $100, which really falls infinitesimal to the county as far as actual value is concerned, but the county and village suddenly find themselves without a place for the detainment or detention of criminals, and the view of the case makes the loss a serious one. Whether or not the county will build a new one remains matter of uncertainty. One thing is certain. A suitable places of detention must be provided, or circumstances may involve the county in an expense double that of building a jail as good as the old one. Another thing is certain. Charlevoix village, with its rapidly growing importance, must have a jail, and measures must be taken to provide one.

Census Enumerators.—The Census Enumerators for Charlevoix County have received their commissions, and are as follows.

1. Robert Miller of Charlevoix, for District comprising Charlevoix, Hayes, Marion, and Norwood.

2. Hiram H. Hoyt, of South Arm, for District comprising Boyne, South Arm and Wilson.

3. W. C. Niles, of Sunnyside, for Bear Lake, Melrose, Springvale, Eagle Valley and Hudson.

The work will commence June first.

Pennock Items.—The Ice Company have purchased a large new lighter at Manistique, and their ice will go over after her as soon as she can be spared.

—The Company purchased 200,000 shingles of a South Haven vessel Wednesday.

—The schooner McVea arrived Wednesday from St. Clair river with 240,000 brick. She drew nearly eleven feet of water and had to be lightened. They will use over one million more in the construction of their works.

We speak advisedly when we say that the Company are proving themselves in every way possible to hasten the opening of the upper river. The cause of the delay is unfinished contracts on the limits of the dredge canals. The unsettled weather of the spring so far alone would prevent a dredge coming.

—Carpenter are engaged in boxing up the Iron Company's store to receive the goods.

—The schooner Annabella arrived Thursday, and the S. S. Bay Friday, both loaded with stone from Sturgeon Bay.

Homesteads are subject to taxation at full value after five years holding. That will materially enhance the valuation in Hayes as a great many homesteads have been completed for years in the town.

At the annual town meeting last Thursday the salaries of the Annual meeting fixing the highway tax at one dollars on the hundred or valuation was repealed, and a tax of twenty per cents on the hundred levied. Also a committee of three consisting of E. H. Burgess, Chauncy Howe and A. W. Chew were appointed to select two constables, one in the southern portion and one in the Northern part of the town, consisting of two acres each, and report the names and proper locations to the annual meeting of 1881 for further action.

How is it about the Fourth of July survey? Celebrate, or not?

Mr. Carpenter is building a new veranda along his front.

General Grant is booked for a big reception at Kansas City July 3d.

Stockman has received a lot of the Economist Oil Stoves. Step in and look at them.

The Peninsula City House addition is progressing rapidly. The frame is up and roof nearly on.

The next issue of the Sentinel will be put out under the editorial management of Dr. M. L. Leach.

The Rapid Railway Company has the large mowing machine on the road, and will put on other machines as fast as they can be built. Who's next on us.

The Petoskey Record says wants to be the Chicago "dark horse." Hampton, of the Independent, would make a better one.

The farmers of this locality are enthusiastic over the prospect for fruit next fall. The trees are loaded with blossoms and buds.

Charlevoix, with the completion of walks commenced, will have about three miles of good sidewalks. Bridge street will have half a mile of walk, eight feet wide.

The Pine Lake Iron Co. received a consignment of groceries and provisions by schooner last week, and Col. McMillan is busily engaged in arranging it for customers.

The latest reports concerning harbor appropriations are that there is an effort being made among Southern Senators and Northern Democrats to kill the bill, but it may worry through yet.

We suggest that some step to be taken to prevent that dozen of horses which runs our streets from its imposing across the bridge quite as often as of late.

Senator Gordon, of Georgia, jumped off a $5000 Senatorial seat last Thursday, and two days later landed on a cushion in a railroad attorney's office which entitles its occupant to $15,000 per annum.

Col. Mannerman, so long in charge of lumbers on this shore, has been transferred to Galveston, Texas. Mr. Burk, formerly U. S. Inspector here, accompanies him in the same capacity.

The Boyne has combines in 23 States of the Union, and extends operations to Mexico.

That's nothing, the Newsboy circulates in over forty states in the Union, Canada, Great Britain, Continental Europe, Asia and Africa, taking the editor's story for it.

America vs Canada.—A sailor on the schooner Rob Roy, and one from the Canadian schooner Florida, got into an altercation in Schuler's saloon, Saturday, which resulted in the Canuck getting thrashed. The stars and stripes forever!

House Sold.—The J. Ingalls residence, on Main street, was last week bought by Rev. R. H. Whitmire, for $1,000. It looks remarkably as if the Rider was contemplating settling down among us.

Messrs Woodbury and son, recently fishing out of the same hole, simultaneously had a strong bite, and hauling up, found they had both caught the same trout, having a hook in either side of its mouth.

Last week Charlevoix postoffice issued Money orders to the amount of $1,975.00. The biggest week yet. This is principally remittances of our merchants in payment for goods, and does not fully represent their sales, as many drafts are used.

Nothing is more encouraging than to see our younger merchants increasing their business. Emrey & Co have enlarged their room and Cook, McMillan-Bros. are enlarging and improving, and both testify to increasing trade. All our dealers in fact, speak of enormous increase in their business over that of any previous year.

The way things are running at the saloon across the river, popular indignation may cause the result to be gained one of these fine mornings. The gin-slinger who runs the machine don't seem to discriminate between habitual drunkards and Indians. At times as they are too drunk to be useful to him he turns them out to make room for more. Such unprincipled whelps ought to be branded by society as nuisances.

Harbor Street, under Mr. Eaton's very editorial management is undergoing a marked transformation. Nine inches of excellent gravel is being placed two rods wide, and about fifteen rods of the eighth are completed. After a few rains and some travel it will assume a hardness equal to the boil from whence the gravel came, just north of the bridge. The cost of gravelling will not exceed, in the aggregate, $1.50 per rod.

Marine.—The schooner Florida, of Hamilton, Ont. is taking square timber for Lyon & Son.

—On Wednesday morning Capt. T. H. Smith and Capt. Wm. Lennox arrived from Chicago with the schooner Sea Gem, which Capt. Smith recently purchased. The consideration was $2,400, and judges say it was a good bargain for Smith. The vessel has a capacity for carrying about 25 cords of wood, is of fine model, has a large and well finished cabin, and although eighteen years old, is sound, having been thoroughly rebuilt five years ago. Capt. Wm. Lennox will sail her, and Sol. Hancock goes as mate. Capt. Oscar Smith will sail the schooner Flemming, and Capt. T. D. Smith, the owner of both vessels, will remain ashore to secure freights.

—Won't there be lively business among our harbor tugs in about a week, after the Commodore and Minnie get into business again? Whew!

—The Minnie Warren looks like a brun new tug.

—The tug Bob Stevenson went to Manistique Sunday night after a scow. Is expected back soon.

—The N. F. propeller St. Albans was in Saturday evening.

—The schooner Fleetwing's last trip was the quickest ever made between this port and Milwaukee, having occupied only four days.

—On Saturday Capt. Henry Aldrich, son of Capt. A. G. Aldrich, of the Clara Belle, received a telegram from H. G. Rose, informing him of his appointment to the command of the propeller Lady Washington. We congratulate Henry on his promotion.

—Clearances for the week:

May 31—Schrs. John Smith, Florida, Fleetwing, Scow supply.

Our Trade.—On Thursday Sheriff Cooper finished the temporary jail, and accompanied by Marshal H. W. Miller, entitled Mr. Town that he would be required to change his apartments. Our guest, with the opinion, informed the officers, that "if they loved him so well they might carry him." Accordingly they were forced to secure a conveyance and transport the gentleman to the new jail. The new dungeon compares very favorably with the old one, and is quite roomy, well ventilated, and comparatively secure. Sheriff Cooper, however, keeps the prisoner hand cuffed, shackled and chained to the wall, giving him chain enough to enable him to move about. He seems to be recovering from the effects of his recent self-inflicted fumigation. As court does not sit until September, he will have plenty of time to ponder over his sins in solitude.

The Boyne City Herald picks up our local reporter and lays bare to the world his gross ignorance of the statutes. Well, we are about as much of a lawyer as Clink is a marine editor, and we are about even. We should have known better than to have "talked of war when there was a Hamilton among us." We should not have talked law when we knew that Clink declares himself to be the superior in legal knowledge of any attorney in Charlevoix county. It is showing an unreasonable contempt for danger to measure lances with a warrior who placards himself by valor and carnage as a Napoleon in achievements, and a Cicero in wealth of intellect. We acknowledge it was an inexcusable temerity on our part, but we don't spell "breeding" "breading," anyhow if we were not blessed in our younger days with much parental attention. Regarding personal invective, we think it is high time to cry murder and fear for your scalp when we pass our editorial tomahawk. In our brief editorial intercourse with our neighbor we have never used a discourteous or improper word, and shall not be the one to inaugurate any such course. A candid public will record the Sentinel the greater moderation of the two, so far. As for us, we purpose to hold the Sentinel above any personal quarrels, and aim to give our readers what they want, and not what they don't want.

For Sale.—A nice little cottage, finely situated on the bluff in the best part of the village. Eaton & Fuller.

Pennock Items.—The Company are getting their lime at Petoskey, and received one hundred barrels from there last week. They will use over one thousand barrels.

—Some of the castings arrived last week.

—It is no place for brewers to leave small beer around loose on the furnace dock. So the boys think.

The Little Traverse Independent devotes about a half column to its kill here to the amateur journalists at the head of Pine Lake. Our greenback friend may get last in this controversy, but if he does it will be from sheer astonishment at discovering, as the Hindoo did, that instead of having a lion by the ears, it is an animal of altogether a different nature. He has plenty of chance to hold on, even if there is no mane, but what have you gained after you have conquered the critter? Better to get and hunt bigger game.

The Upper Channel.—Nat. Stickney was in town last week, and entered into arrangements for bringing a dredge here next week to open out the upper channel. A pile driver will also be secured, with which to do the revetting.

For Sale.—A good pair of oxen. Eaton & Fuller.

Personal.—E. L. Sprague, editorial pater, so to speak, left the Eagle in other hands and came up to Charlevoix last week, and spent a couple of days with us. We were right glad to see our old friend.

—A brother of Mr. L. Lewis, from Florida, arrived Saturday, since the latter had not seen before in eighteen years.

—Mrs. O'Neill, widow of the late Dick and O'Neill, accompanied by her daughter Mrs. Kennedy, of Detroit, arrived by Fountain City Friday.

—J. Whitcomb, of Pechenee, father of Mrs. Amos Fox and Mrs. G. W. Miller, of this place, is here visiting.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

MR. HENRY JAMES, JR., is engaged on a new novel, which will appear in serial form on both sides of the Atlantic simultaneously.

ABOUT one hundred and fifty students of Cornell University have signed a pledge asking Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll to lecture before them.

SENATOR BLAINE says that, though his student law for two years in the office of one of the most eminent practitioners in the United States, he has never been in court as an attorney, plaintiff, defendant, witness or juror.

MISS EMILY FAITHFULL, who visited this country some years ago, previous to returning to the United States in September to deliver a lecture on "Modern Extravagance—Its Cause and Cure," which has been received with favor all over England, and, it is said, has met here with good results.

MR. H. J. BYRON, the dramatic writer, is one of the uncle to which the poet Byron belonged. His father, Hon. Jy Byron, was a grandson of William, fourth Lord Byron, who was the poet's great-grandfather. Mr. H. J. Byron's grandfather, the Admiral John Byron, whose books of voyages are still popular, was the poet's grandfather.

MR. ERASTUS BROOKS, in a speech before the Committee of Ways and Means of the House of Representatives, a few days since, on the necessity of taking off the twenty per cent. duty on wood pulp, remarked, in reference to the statement that he had had forty years' experience in journalism in New York City, and during that time had seen the birth and death of one hundred and twenty-five daily papers in that city, and that there are to-day but three papers in existence there that were being published in 1837.

It is now definitely settled that the Rev. Dr. William M Rader, of Boston, is the author of "His Majesty, Myself." This is the third in the second series of the "No-Name" novels. The other two are by writers already known—"The Colonel's Opera Cloak," by Mrs. Brush, the daughter of the Rev. Dr. E. J. Gurney, and "Signor Monaldini's Nephew," by Miss Mary Agnes Tincker. The authorship of the novels in the first series is not so well known, though the names of several have already been correctly guessed.

LORD BEACONSFIELD'S humor is very keenly appreciated in England both by friends and foes. Going into his breakfast-room one morning, he found one of his guests looking for a newspaper. "What are you looking for?" he asked. "Well, I was trying to find a paper." "A paper? Oh, I don't take in any papers. Mrs. Disraeli, I believe, takes the Court Journal. But do you want to see anything in particular?" "Yes; I rather wished to—" "Well, there's my butler takes in the Daily Telegraph; it's a tremendous radical, and I dare say he likes to see his name thoroughly well abused."

MISS LOUISA M. ALCOTT when nearly sixteen years of age went to Boston to teach. She was successful, and much liked by her scholars. Some of these she now meets frequently in the streets of Boston—staid professional men with families, who always greet her with, "Hallo, Miss Ollie!" just as they did when they were rosy-cheeked urchins. But she gave up teaching and took to story-writing, in which she has been equally successful. At one time she came very near going on the stage, and had secretly made the arrangements for her first appearance, intending to surprise her friends, but an untimely discovery frustrated her purpose.

Stories From the Mines.

MANY stories are told of the manner in which the first discoveries of gold in California were turned to account by ingenious speculators, and among them are the following: In one district the gold-dust was mixed with large quantities of fine black sand, which the miners—most of whom were raw hands—blew off from the gold in their anxiety to arrive at the ore itself. A keen old man turned their impatience to account by skimming tameness, and presenting that in the weakly state he was not equal to the toil of mining, and was thus compelled to resort to the poor and profitless branch of gathering the black sand, which he sold as a substitute for emery. He used to go about on an average with a large bag and a tin tray, requesting the miners to blow their black sand upon it, and returning with it unto her. By dint of quite a silver he was able to extract the gold, double in quantity to that which was obtained by the hardest-working miner at the washings.

Tricks of every kind were played upon new-comers in search of the gold-dust treasures. One story is told of some American associates who had been working at an unprofitable spot, picking up a paltry dust their "valuable site" was for sale, as they were going elsewhere. Some Germans who had just arrived offered themselves as purchasers. The price asked was exorbitant, as the proprietors stated that the "diggings" returned a large amount of gold, and the following day was appointed for the Germans to come and see what could be produced in the course of a few hours' working. The sellers went during the night and several of the gold-dust in the banks, so that it would come to light, as a natural deposit, when the earth was turned up. The following morning the poor Germans were so delighted with the apparent richness of the place that they gave a large sum of money and two valuable gold watches for the property. The Germans were laughed at; but they went to work, and actually succeeded in raising a large amount of gold beneath the spot where the others had left off. The Americans were thus outwitted in turn, and endeavored to get possession of the place by force; but another company of Germans arriving, they were obliged to desist.

AN old miner relates this story: While working on Rock Creek, the weather being very hot, we always had most as a can of water, and close to it we put a teacup to hold the particles of gold as we collected them. One morning as we were at work a thirsty digger came by, who asked permission to take a draught of water, which being granted, he filled up the cup, and quaffed off the costly drink, without either drinking our health or leaving the least sediment at the bottom. I suspected at first that some trick had been played upon me, and he had removed the gold; but from the evident distress of the man, and the earnest manner in which he promised to repay me when he got work, I finally believe that he had swallowed the gold, not having noticed it in the cup."

NEARLY twenty-three years have elapsed since the gold yield in California has become an undoubted fact, and within that period many millions of dollars' worth of gold-dust has been added to the wealth of the world. But even these results have been eclipsed by the wonderful discoveries of gold in Australia. So extensively are the gold deposits distributed throughout that great country, that Melbourne, the capital, has been said to be paved with the rich metal, the broken quartz rocks which have been used to make the streets being found to contain gold.—Harper's Young People.

A Dreamer's Senses.

IN a strong light he held before the sleeper's eyes he is almost sure to wake, but at the very moment he may have a dream of some tremendous fire, perhaps that his house is in flames. The ear of the dreamer is generally on the alert, and proves a gong to the mysterious spirit to make its airy rounds. To some sleepers the sound of a flute fills the air with music, or they dream of a delightful concert. A loud noise will produce terrific thunder and crashings unutterable, and at the same time awake the sleeper. According to Dr. Abercrombie, a gentleman who had been a soldier dreamed that he heard a signal-gun, saw preparations for displaying the signals, heard the bustle of the streets, the assembling of troops, etc. Just then he was roused by his wife who had dreamed precisely the same dream, with this addition, that she saw the enemy land, and a friend of her husband killed; and she awoke in a fright. This occurred at Edinburgh at the time when a French invasion was feared, and it had been decided to fire a signal-gun at the first approach of the foe. This dream was caused, it appears, by the fall of a pair of tongs in the room above, and the excited state of the public mind was quite sufficient to account for both dreams turning on the same subject. An old lady, a friend of the writer, relates a similar dream which occurred to her just before the battle of Waterloo, when the fear of an invasion by Napoleon was at its height. She heard the march of troops in the streets, and the screams of the populace. They broke into her own house, ransacked it, and pursued her with bayonet. She fell on the floor and pretended to be dead. After sundry thrusts, which seemed to her "exceeding sufficit" to go quite round the soldiers remarked that she was "done for." They departed, and she escaped to consciousness. This dream was no doubt caused in the first instance by a noise in the house or street, and the pointed bayonet thrusts by some slight irritation, such as a bairpin or other adjunct to dress. Whispering in a sleeper's ear will often produce a dream; and there are cases on record in which people who sleep with their ears open have been led through dreadful agonies at the will of their wakeful tormentors. The vivid description given of a young officer as treated by his comrades is both interesting and suggestive. In changing our position, as we constantly do in sleep, we touch the bedclothes, etc., perhaps the nose gets tickled or the sole of the foot, and dreams painful or pleasant are the consequence. These may seem trivial causes, but it must be remembered that the mind is ready to fly into the realms of fancy at the slightest intimation. People have often dreamed of spending the severest winters in Greenland, and of joining the expeditions to the North Pole, simply because the bedclothes have been thrown off during sleep. It is said that a moderate heat applied to the soles of the feet will generate dreams of volcanoes, burning lands, etc. Dr. Gregory dreamed of walking up the crater of Mount Etna, and that he felt the earth warm under his feet. He had placed a hot-water bottle at his feet on going to bed. The memory of a visit he had once paid to Mount Vesuvius supplied the mental picture. Persons suffering from toothache imagine that the operator is tugging at the faulty tooth, and somehow cannot extract it; or, as in Dr. Gregory's case, he draws out the wrong one, and leaves the aching tooth in statu quo. A blister applied to the head is highly suggestive of being scalped by Indians, especially if Mayne Reid's ghastly details are at all fresh in the memory.—Temple Bar.

THE angler's theory that a fish does not suffer much physical pain from a hook in his gills, or general agony either, for that matter, is supported by the recent experience of a Stratford, Conn., fisherman. A large trout tore two hooks in quick succession from the line, and was finally pulled up on the third, with the first two in his stomach.

IN Mrs. Bakewell was proud of anything, that thing was her cooking, especially her cake. I've told Mrs. Talkwell time and time again that them that wants rich cake can have it for all of me. Just give me a piece of common, cheap stuff; it's good enough for my body, I say!"—Boston Transcript.

MISS LEVENIA VICTORIA SMITH, a young lady residing on King street, has just completed a panel for a door. She took the panel out of the door and painted a long-legged crane standing upon it. During the progress of the work the drawing table was quite sufficient for the panel should have been caused her three sisters to catch the pneumonia. One is already dead, and the others hope to be. On putting the panel back she discovered that it was painted on the wrong side. The picture is much admired by people who pass the house.—Carson City Appeal.

Feats of Engineering.

NEW YORK must have quicker communication with its suburbs. The thousands of business men and women who work all day in its stores and offices must be able to reach their homes in Harlem, Brooklyn, or Jersey City in thirty minutes from Broadway. To meet the wants of the upper part of New York, the elevated railroads were constructed. They are the perfection of railway traveling—for the passenger—running free from noise and dust, besides their wonderful rapidity of transit. Within a year it is expected the East River Bridge will be open to the passage of the great army of people who spend their days in New York and their nights in Brooklyn. The latter city has been fully called "a lodging-house for New York." Four hundred men are at work on the approaches to this bridge. They are massive granite arches, supporting the road-bed, rising gradually, till it crosses at a dizzy height the river below; the bridge is so high that most ships may pass under it with top-gallant masts standing. It would not do that the finest harbor in the world should be obstructed by a bridge at the water level. Governor Cornell has signed a bill appropriating two million two hundred thousand dollars to finish the most wonderful and speaks bridge the world has yet seen.

The third means of communication now being pushed rapidly forward is a tunnel for trains under the Hudson River to Jersey City. There are two tunnels for that part which lies under the river's bed, and, they unite in one at each end. This double tunnel is lined with iron plates, and faced with brick three feet thick. The clay excavated from the tunnel is used to make the bricks to line it, of which more than two thousand are required for each running foot of wall. The interior will be painted white, and lighted with gas. The estimated expense of this work is ten million of dollars. The work goes on day and night; three gangs of men being employed, eight hours each, thus accomplishing three days work every twenty four hours. All the work is done by the electric light, and that one great invention helps another. The total length of the work will be two and a half miles, including the approaches, though only about a mile of this distance is under the bed of the river. When it is done four hundred trains per day can pass safely, delivering passengers and freight in the very heart of New York.—Youth's Companion.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

OAT STRAW, as a rule, is superior to wheat straw as stock food, inasmuch as it contains a larger per cent. of fat-forming and heat-producing ingredients.

TO KEEP bugs off melon and squash vines, plant a tomato plant in each hill. By doing this the bugs did not bother them for me; while across the fence, where there were no tomatoes they were all killed by the bugs.—Cor. Exchange.

FEW realize the necessity of manuring orchards. When once planted, trees are to remain in the same soil thirty or forty years, at least. There is a few years's transit this food in the soil that they are most fond of, and then they will cease to be productive and thrifty unless properly fed.

THE man who never sows a seed of any kind of grain before it has been soaked in liquid manure diluted with water, and has begun to germinate; and experience has taught him that this operation not only tends to promote the growth and development of the plant, but also to protect the seed from the insects hidden in the ground.

FRAGRANCE AND COLOR.—Plants with white blossoms have a larger proportion of fragrant species than any others; next comes red, then yellow and blue, and lastly purple. The sweetest of flowers of spring are white and highly fragrant; those of summer are red and yellow, and the fragrant flowers of autumn and winter are much darker, and with less perfume.

TOAD CARE.—Take five fresh eggs, their weight in pulverized sugar; the weight of three in flour. Beat yolks and sugar with a strong spoon, add whites to a stiff froth, and add to yolks and sugar. Sift in the flour gradually; add a teaspoonful of essence lemon, and stir only just enough to mix well; pour immediately into pans lined with buttered paper. Sprinkle over a little powdered sugar, and bake in a quick oven for twenty-five or thirty minutes.

GOOD WHEATEN BREAD.—Take six good-sized potatoes, peel and boil in two quarts of water; when done put a pint of flour into a suitable vessel, and pour the water off the potatoes on it—flour to scald it. Then rub the potatoes through a colander and add to the flour. Add cold water enough to wet when bread you want to bake at one time; when cool, add a pint of good yeast and a handful of salt; let it rise over night. In the morning mix stiff in the bread tray and let it rise again. When light, put into pans and let it rise again; bake in a moderate oven one hour.

STRAWBERRY SHORT-CAKE.—Make a crust sufficient to cover the bottom of two pie-dishes, rolled thin, of the ingredients which would make raised biscuits; bake both at once; have two boxes of two quarts each of berries carefully cleansed, and well sweetened; as soon as the paste is baked, while hot, split the paste and butter liberally; put half of the berries, sprinkling more sugar on top; cover with the other half of the biscuit, butter and put the other half of the berries, with more sugar, and wrap well with a clean napkin and cover with a blanket, to remain to steam until cold.

A WRITER in the Farmers' Journal, in speaking of ducks, pronounces the Aylesbury and Pekin the best varieties, the former being noted for its large white eggs and delicately-flavored flesh, and the latter for the richness of its eggs, good constitution and rapid fattening. The Rouen is pronounced only slightly inferior in flavor and in quality of eggs to the above, matures earlier and is hardier. The Aylesbury and Pekin commence laying in February, and continue for five months, with two or three brief intermissions. When the duck wants to sit she should have from twelve to fifteen eggs, and should sit in a separate division of the duck-house kept for this purpose. The door should always be open during the day, and she should have sufficient water near by to bathe in. The time of incubation is twenty-eight days. After the ducklings are all hatched they should not be disturbed for twenty-four hours, when they are ready for food, which should consist of hard-boiled eggs well mixed with oatmeal. When three or four days old they may have oatmeal stirred with milk and a little grain. The ducklings should not have access to water, except to drink, until they receive their feathers, when they can swim without injury.

Use of the Harrow.

We are inclined to attach far greater importance to the harrow and its particular office in farm practice than is usually given it. No farmer should regard his set of implements as at all approaching completeness unless he has at least three, four would be better, harrows, cultivators, horse hoes, or similar implements of securing fine tillage; and no farmer should be content with a single or even with two harrowings previous to putting seed of any kind into the ground. Time spent in harrowing is well employed, as it is impossible that soil can be too finely or well prepared as a seed bed. As to the implements themselves, it is curious to observe the improvements, modifications and adaptations to uses which the harrow has undergone from the days of the old A shaped and square harrow of twenty years ago, to the pulverizing, coulter and smoothing harrows of the present. The only objection we have to them is that which obtains in reference to many classes of our farm implements: that in many instances they have been multiplied beyond the actual necessities of the case, so that frequently farmers have really more implements of one kind than they actually need, or are unnecessarily bewildered in their choice when making purchases. But it is as true now as it was in the time of Lord Kames, that no one harrow, whatever its construction may be, can be suitable for every sort of soil, or adapted for tilling the land for, or leaving it after every kind of crop. There must be different implements of after-culture (we mean those which follow the plow) for the various crops and uses, and for this reason a number of harrows are needed on every farm of considerable size. Farmers must be careful not to be forsaking and pulverizing; medium ones for preparation of the soil, for covering manure and grass seed, and lighter harrows for finishing off the surface, or as in case of some, for actually weeding the crop. This last operation was formerly performed with the primitive "bush harrow," made it half an hour from a large tree and a heliborne small white birch bushes—a very common kind of smoothing harrow years ago, but now almost entirely superseded by some form of leveling, smoothing or weeding harrow. This last implement seems to be one of far greater usefulness than would at first appear. For weeding growing corn, or dressing a fallow, there is no implement so well fitted for the work as this; and so far as we can learn from those who have used it, every one speaks in the most favorable expressed in its behalf when first introduced.—N. E. Farmer.

Toads.

FRENCH industry and sagacity take the lead of the world in little things, if nothing more. Toad culture is a regular business here, and enormous profits from the demand for toads is great and increasing. The useful little animals are employed to insect destroyers, not only in the gardens of that country, but thousands of them are packed down in baskets of damp moss, and sent to the other countries to be sold to gardeners. The most observing horticulturists and horticulturists who have long been aware of their value as insect destroyers, and have utilized them in a greater or less extent. And it is not much to the credit of American gardeners and farmers that they have never recognized the services of toads, and encouraged their increase. Nature conducts her operation by reciprocal means, and if she gives us the bird that insects to eat up our crops, she also gives us the birds, toads, etc., to eat up the insects. The farmer should keep a close eye on nature, and seek to make her manifold operations helpful, instead of casting hindrance in the way. Let toads alone, by all means. The successful farmer has great need to be good economic naturalist. Many things, as loathsome looking as toads, are the farmer's friends.—Rural Messenger.

Water for Cows in Pasture.

FOR milch cows it is very necessary that the water for them is pure, otherwise the quality of the milk and from this to other good butter our cheese can be made. Where there is not abundance of clear, running water in yard or pasture, it should be supplied from wells or cisterns. If drunk from standing pools or small ponds, the water is always more or less foul, or so stagnant as to be unpalatable, and at times even unhealthful. In order to obtain a full flow of milk cows must have all the good water they will naturally drink at morning, noon and night, otherwise they will not give full messes of milk, nor will it be of as good a quality. But a running stream, more especially when at pasture, where they can go and drink at pleasure, is still better than that drawn from wells for them three times per day, at regular intervals. Naturally, however, often compels the latter course. Some dairymen, in order to increase the flow of milk, stimulate their cows to drink an extra quantity of water, by giving extra salting their food or stirring a small quantity of bran or meal in it. But this is objectionable, inasmuch as it tends to lessen the richness of the milk. This also fills up the stomach so much as to dilute the gastric juice and thus injure digestion, and more or less of the food is consequently voided whole. If there be a gain in milk, then a loss in food followed by stimulating to an excess of drink.—Rural New Yorker.

Production and Keeping of Eggs.

OPPORTUNITY is a matter of importance to keep eggs for a time. When prices rule low, they may be preserved in comparative freshness for several weeks, even in July and August, if care be taken to place them on end as soon as brought in from the nest. One not accustomed to handling and care of eggs can form no idea of the shortness of time required for the yolk of an egg to settle on one side, where it adheres to the shell and quickly spoils in warm weather. If you place the egg on the big end. I have tried both ends, and have decided in favor of the former position. Eggs should be gathered from the nest every day, and where there are many hens kept, twice a day. It matters not for what purpose we desire eggs, the hens that produce them should always be young and healthy. Eggs that are to be kept for any length of time should always be those from young hens, or if two years old, only from those in perfect health. If this rule is closely observed by the breeders who export eggs for hatching, from one locality to another, there will be better satisfaction given. It is of much importance that the eggs have perfect shells, and a hen not in perfect health may drop her eggs regularly, yet the shells may possess imperfections that render them unfit either for keeping or hatching.—Country Gentleman.

Pulque—The Mexican National Drink.

IN a letter from Mexico to the New York Sun, the writer says: This liquid is distilled from the maguey plant. It has a disagreeable smell and taste, but no description can possibly convey an adequate idea of its hurtful effects upon the prosperity of the country. In the first place, the most fertile and productive lands of the upper plain of Mexico are altogether given up to the production of the maguey plant. When it is remembered that a maguey takes often ten years to come to perfection, and that very little attention is required in the mean time, it will be evident that the employment this species of agriculture gives to the laboring class is far below that required for the cultivation of any kind of grain. Yet it is by this very class of persons that pulque is most drunk, and consequently the reals of the working man find their way into the pockets of the rich proprietors of haciendas who spend their profits in Paris or Brussels, while the working people receive almost no substantial benefit from the principal agricultural pursuit of their country. Besides, the effect of pulque drinking is horribly enervating and demoralizing. Taken in moderation, it is an excellent tonic to the stomach, and Queen Victoria is said to be in the habit of drinking it for this reason; but taken in excess the effect is fearful, as it produces the very worst kind of intoxication. I have never seen so many drunken people as in the city of Mexico, where the pulque-rias are more frequent than gin palaces in London or gin mills in the Bowery. Pulque is a thick drink, for almost twenty-four hours, and as one plant produces every day about four quarts, it is evident that for every inhabitant, and that a special train, tren de pulque, runs twice a day between Apam, a village in the heart of the maguey district, and Mexico City, the freight from pulque on each train amounting to between seven hundred and eight hundred dollars! The maguey yields another liquor, which is not so deleterious in its effects upon the system, as a drink or as an object of labor as is pulque. This is the vino mescal, which is a species of brandy distilled from the juice of the maguey; but it can only be drunk as a liqueur, and is not unlike Jamaica rum. It is a favorite beverage in large quantities at Apam, where the dry and cold temperature of the great dusty Mexican plain produces the maguey in its highest perfection. At Tequila, a little town in the State of Jalisco, to the north of Guadalajara, a very superior kind of mescal is manufactured, which takes its name from the town, and is quite a very palatable beverage. But I am convinced, in spite of the wonderful usefulness of the maguey, supplying as it does fruit, drink, yam, hemp, paper, needles and brushes, that it is one of the banes of this favored land.

The Southern Contrast.

In writing of Warner's Safe Remedies, the Sentinel, Westsport, N. Y., has the following: "In this section of country where all the reputable quacks are known, it is a matter beyond dispute; when fair testimonials by the thousand from well-known citizens are published periodically for a long time, are evidences strong enough to convince the most stubborn dreamer, that they are the best medicines for diseases for which remain public, ever yet known to the public or the physician.

PIMPLES AND BLOTCHES ON THE FACE.—In writing of Warner's Safe Remedies, one of the great remedy, as it acts directly upon the cause. Where the pulque-rias are more frequent than gin palaces in London or gin mills in the Bowery. Pulque is a drink," lasts for almost twenty-four hours, and as one plant produces every day about four quarts, it is evident that for every inhabitant, and that a special train, tren de pulque, runs twice a day between Apam, a village in the heart of the maguey district, and Mexico City, the freight from pulque on each train amounting to between seven hundred and eight hundred dollars! The maguey yields another liquor, which is not so deleterious in its effects upon the system, as a drink or as an object of labor as is pulque. This is the vino mescal, which is a species of brandy distilled from the juice of the maguey; but it can only be drunk as a liqueur, and is not unlike Jamaica rum. It is a favorite beverage in large quantities at Apam, where the dry and cold temperature of the great dusty Mexican plain produces the maguey in its highest perfection. At Tequila, a little town in the State of Jalisco, to the north of Guadalajara, a very superior kind of mescal is manufactured, which takes its name from the town, and is quite a very palatable beverage. But I am convinced, in spite of the wonderful usefulness of the maguey, supplying as it does fruit, drink, yam, hemp, paper, needles and brushes, that it is one of the banes of this favored land.

THE poet Tennyson is worth $1,000,000, and we don't see what use there was in his writing. "Come not when I am dead." They'll be on hand, every one of them, when they will be opened.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

THE London Economist says that in 1879-80 England will have paid $100,000,000 more for American cotton, tobacco and food than in 1878-9. Europe, the Economist thinks, will pay $50,000,000 more this year than last.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JUNE 1st, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT IN 1880.

ULYSSES S. GRANT.

FOR GOVERNOR.

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

The greatest boom in Michigan politics just now seems to be for Hon. Edward Cahill, for Attorney General. Quite a number of the leading papers of Northern and Central Michigan have declared a preference for him, and he seems to be looked upon as the "coming man" for that position. From what we know of Mr. Cahill, we can heartily endorse what our contemporaries say about him.

The M. E. general conference at Cincinnati has resolved in favor of a Methodist ecumenical council at London in August, 1881, with 200 delegates from the United States and Bishop Simpson as chairman.

The New Hampshire state convention although sending delegates to Chicago favoring Mr. Blaine for the nomination, paid Gen. Grant this high compliment by resolution: "That we congratulate Ulysses S. Grant, the most renowned and illustrious citizen of the republic, on his safe return from his tour of the world, and we fervently wish that the afternoon of his remarkable life may be made serene by exemption from strife, and a happy in the respect and affection of a grateful country, whose unity he did so much to preserve, and whose great destiny he did more than any of his compatriots to advance."

Inquiry among those attending the Republican State Convention at Detroit developed the fact that ex-Gov. Bagley will be ardently supported for U. S. Senator next winter from all parts of the State. And he deserves it, more particularly from Northern Michigan. The people will not soon forget that he was the Governor who had the courage to recommend and subsequently to approve the measure for the taxation of railroad lands; that he employed eminent counsel and defended the law against the assaults of the Railroad Companies clear through to the Supreme Court of the United States, giving the matter his personal attention until the highest legal tribunal on the American Continent had declared the law valid, and decided that land grant Railroad Corporations must pay their taxes the same as other folks.

The Globe-Democrat, of St. Louis, Mo., recently published what purported to be a correspondence from Chicago, asserting that E. B. Washburne was "playing double." On seeing the publication, Gen. Grant immediately telegraphed a personal friend in Chicago, as follows: "I regret very much hearing of the attack of the Globe-Democrat on Mr. Washburne. Mr. Washburne is and has always been my friend, and that, too, when his friendship was of intestimable value to me. I could never forget it or be ungrateful for it." No man in the United States knows Mr. Washburne better than Gen. Grant does, and no man has more implicit confidence in his honor, his manhood or his ability. The supporters of competing candidates for the nomination will not be able to get up a quarrel nor to impair the friendship between Gen. Grant and Mr. Washburne.

The Michigan Homestead of last Thursday says the latest reports relative to the condition of wheat crop in this State are conflicting and on the whole not so favorable as a week or two ago. The secretary of the State Grange, who has traveled through fifteen counties in central and western Michigan, and who observed the Winter wheat very closely, estimates that the yield per acre will fall short of that of last year from 10 to 15 per cent, or enough to balance the greater breadth sown. In this opinion poorly drained, flat, mucky soils suffered most by freezing and thawing of the open winter, and that more thorough underdraining must be practiced on such soils to be sure of a crop of wheat. Another gentleman, having within the past two weeks visited a large portion of Northern Michigan situated on the lines of the Flint & Pere Marquette, the Detroit, Grand Haven & Milwaukee and the Detroit, Lansing & Northern Railroads, reports that from present appearances, the crop, under the most favorable circumstances, will not yield more than two-thirds as much as that of last year.

Mr. Newberry's Opinion.

Chicago Inter-Ocean Special.

WASHINGTON, May 18.—Congressman Newberry sent your correspondent this afternoon, and was asked what he thought of the political future. "Well, wait until after the Illinois convention," he replied, "and I will tell you positively. I can only give you an opinion now that Grant will be nominated, but the convention at Springfield to-morrow will settle the matter finally. If Grant gets that delegation there, as so was to prevent his nomination, and he will be the President of the United States for the next four years. That is a very important convention at Springfield to-morrow. I wonder if they realize over there how important it is? It is the crisis of the campaign."

"How many of your Michigan delegation are for Grant?"

"We are Blaine men up our way; our state is all for Blaine."

"But you think Grant will be nominated?"

"Yes, I do. I think he will be nominated and elected. The Blaine men here do, nearly all, concede that the contest will be virtually settled by the convention in Illinois."

An Anecdote of Grant.

He was one day busy in his tent with his military plans when he heard his orderly engaged in a conversation to which the latter gave a strong foreign accent. "Is the Shcneral in de tent?" said the voice.

"Yes, sir," replied the orderly, "but he is busy with his maps and can't see you."

"Oh, den he is going to advance. My goodness gracious, by vricd, I must see Shcneral shust for a few little momcnts."

"Can't be done, sir. I have orders to admit no one."

"But is he going to advance?"

"How should I know? General Grant does not generally tell his orderlies of his plans."

"But if he vood advance, vare vood he go? Into the cotton region, vood he not?"

"How should I know?"

"My vriend, I haf a most important proposal to make the Shcneral—a proposal mind you, my young vriend."

"Can't hear your proposals, sir. Please step out and on."

"Stop one minute, my young vriend, stop one little minute, will you? Please say to Shcneral Grant I had one great object for him, von rich speculation on de cotton, do you see?"

Grant, who had heard the conversation through the thin walls of his tent, and recognizing the voice of the speaker as one of the vampires who hung about his army, suddenly rose from his seat, and going to the door of the tent, seized the Jew by the collar, and lifting him from the ground, hurled him headlong into a mud-puddle. Before the orderly could recover from his surprise, or the Jew resume what had taken place, Grant had returned to his chair in the tent, and was again busily engaged with his maps, as though nothing had happened.—General Bridon.

The headquarters of the Michigan delegation to the Republican National Convention in Chicago, will be at the Grand Pacific Hotel.

Our contemporaries throughout the State and country are busily engaged prophesying upon the "dark horse" at the coming Chicago republican national convention. It will not be a dark horse, gentlemen. It will be either Grant upon the first ballot or Blaine upon the second, with the present outlook in favor of the former.

The Cincinnati Inquirer made a postal card canvass of the late Methodist General Conference on the question of Presidential preferences, receiving 117 answers to its inquiries. The Grant column, headed by Bishop Simpson, footed up 64. The Blaine footing was 18, Edmunds 15, Sherman 9, and Washburne 5. Bishop Bowman declared for "the nominee;" and the only Democratic vote cast was given to Gen. Hancock.

The campaign of 1880 will be a lively one. Against the usual custom, As soon as the nominations are made the two great parties will settle down to business, and all the appliances that can be brought to bear will be called into use. Not a stone will be left unturned on either side, the turning of which is likely to influence a single vote. The result, of course, will depend largely upon the candidates placed in nomination, but our own party has greatly the advantage in many respects, and if the Republican nominee is reasonably satisfactory to the party we are sure to win.

Two sea lions, landed in Chicago from San Francisco on the 11th, and placed in the zoological department at Lincoln park, after taking a bath in their pool and eating supper, crawled over the wire fence around their new home, and started out to see the city, or to visit Coup's circus. One of them, with a bellow and roar, dropped in at an old lady's ice cream parlors, when her customers left unceremoniously. The managers and keepers were notified, and with a posse of men, ropes, lanterns and a supply of fish, coaxed and dragged the beasts back to their quarters.

McDonald, one of the old whiskey ring snubbed by Gen. Grant at Chicago last fall, proclaimed that he had papers showing Grant's damning connection with the whiskey thieves, but the Cincinnati Commercial, intensely anti-Grant, says these papers have been examined, and amount to nothing.

A writer in the June Scribner who seems to speak by authority says that the only known contribution to the Kansas exodus relief fund by any man engaged in politics was $100 sent by Vice president Wheeler. It is also said that not a dollar of public funds has been expended in any way for the colored immigrants in Kansas. "Not a single colored tramp was seen in Kansas all winter," says this writer, "and only one colored person was convicted of crime."

DR. BARBER'S INHALER IN OPERATION.

The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the cheapest and only perfect Inhaler ever invented.

Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor through the crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's invention vaporizes it between the lips, some particles through pure water, making it a faultless Inhaling instrument.

CATARRH

Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapors direct to the sore and inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a bunch of high-priced "secret" nostrums.

All Intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis. It relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It furnishes all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the cheapest radical and complete treatment ever known.

Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have sold agents to nearly every town, but sufferers who have been deceived by extensive advertising will please send to a reliable party for a description of this INSTRUMENT. It is a great discovery. We know all about it, come you and a postal card. Give address plainly, and name of paper you are reading this notice. Address the sole manufacturers,

1000 Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil

"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Willson's excellent process."—Dr. Watt.

All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. It is easier and readily digested where all similar preparations are refused by the stomach, and immediately checks take on wasting. The antiseptic properties of the oil are then brought into action, while the active curative properties of the preparation complete the work of restoration.

Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach.

Is free from Unpleasant Taste.
Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.
It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Anæmia, Bronchitis, Emaciation, Coughs, Colds, Hemorrhages and all lung and constitutional complaints.

As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil is remarkably efficient. Its use in Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., is strongly recommended. Its purifying power is wonderful in Consumption, outgrowing as it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.

It acts upon the rational theory of INTERSTATE ASSIMILATION. DRAW WORK IN BLOOD TO THE SURFACE, enabling it to throw off the disease.

It costs no more than ordinary cod-liver preparations during the past seven years proves unsupported by

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

FAVORABLE reports were made from committees in the Senate on the 10th on the bills making an additional article of war prohibiting gambling, amending the act to prohibit polygamous marriages in connection and presumption only, and appropriating an additional four district to Kansas and the other bill was passed. The House resolution for a recess from adjournment May 31 was read the first time, when Mr. Conkling called attention to the fact that it was needed to pass a joint resolution, and, therefore, required the President's approval, instead of a concurrent resolution, which the two branches can adopt by themselves. Mr. Bayard endeavored to have the bill regulating the pay and appointment of Deputy Marshals taken up, insisting it was announced that he would ask its consideration in the morning hour on the 16th. Messrs. Saulsbury and Morgan spoke in favor of the bill. The Kellogg-Sheffield resolutions, the Conference Committee was appointed on the disagreeing votes of the two Houses on the Pendleton Appropriation bill. The Pension Bill was passed in the Senate and passed by the House with amendments, and introduced by Mr. Chalmers, continuing the act of March 3, 1875, entitled "An act to place certain persons who enlisted in the army on the volunteer list on other and prior to an honorable discharge so as to extend its provisions to the heirs of such soldiers in their claims for military service. The Agricultural Appropriation bill was debated by Messrs. Coke and Beck.

In the Senate on the 10th the House adjournment resolution, after some debate, was referred to the Committee on Appropriations. Mr. Butler spoke on the Spofford-Kellogg case, and moved a postponement of the meeting of Mr. Kellogg, claiming that the Senate could not the power to unseat one of its members who has been seated after a contest as to the merits of his case, and that the action of the Senate in seating Kellogg was binding and it was made to appear that such action was obtained by fraud. Mr. Morgan replied to Mr. Butler. The pay and appointment of Deputy Marshals was passed, providing penalties for preventing the attendance, testimony, persons, or other witnesses, the assembling of citizens to hold representatives, or for other unlawful purposes. Adjournments were agreed to. The Senate resumed the consideration of the bill of suffrage, etc., whose amendments were also offered and rejected. Amendments to the Deficiency bill appropriating sixteen million dollars to Canadian ten and fifteen cents, providing $125,000 for the compensation of the American fishermen who were driven away from Fortune Bay. The Agricultural Appropriation bill was amended and passed.

In the Senate on the 20th Mr. Morgan, from the select Committee on Counting the Electoral Vote, reported, with amendments, a bill introduced by him to enforce the observance of the Constitution of the United States with reference to the elections of President and Vice-President of the United States. Mr. Edmunds stated that he and Mr. Trumbull were unable to concur in the report of the majority of the committee. Mr. Morgan also reported unfavorably on the bill, introduced by Mr. Hill, providing that the President of the Senate shall, immediately on the meeting and organization of the two Houses of Congress, open all the certificates of the electoral votes from the States, and that the same be counted in the presence and under the direction of the two Houses. Mr. Hill introduced a bill imposing duties on Canadian ten and fifteen cent coin

Sabbath Resolutions.

The following Preamble and Resolutions were unanimously adopted by a viva voce vote at a fully attended association of the Methodist Episcopal Church of the Grand Traverse District, at Traverse City, May 18—20.

The Committee authorized to publish and forward them to your respectful attention, append the testimonies at the head and foot of this circular:

WHEREAS, there is a general state of Sabbath desecration in that part of northern Michigan embraced within the boarnis of Grand Traverse district; and

WHEREAS, such desecration is opposed to good morals both public and private, and is also socially degrading and injurious to the health of the community, being productive of great mental and physical deterioration; and

WHEREAS, it is a lamentable fact that the great firms of one section of country, both lumbering and transportation, permit and in some cases command the time and labor of their employes in such profanation of the day, by running their mills and boats upon it; and

WHEREAS, such command of the time of many who have assumed religious obligations is afflictive to their christian conscience, and places them in the onerous position of violating sacred vows, or sacrificing their temporal interests by losing their employment. Therefore it is

Resolved, By this association—

1. That we adhere to the Sabbath as a divine institution, a regenerator of society, and conserver of morality and health, as declared in the Bible, as guarded by statute law, and as handed down to us by our God, our forefathers and the founders of our commonwealth.

2. That we urge upon the firms who either by direct means or by implication are partners in this unjust and unwholesome transgression of the laws of God, and the "rights of man" the desirability of so regulating their demands upon the time of their conscientious employes as that said employes may be able to meet their sacred and higher obligations.

3. That we hereby assure our afflicted members of our hearty sympathy in the midst of the moral disabilities in which they are placed and call upon them to have regard to the claims of God and conscience, and in firm reliance upon a kind Providence stand for our God-given Sabbath and divinely conferred rights.

4. That as ministers we pledge our energies of thought and example and utterance, both in and out of the pulpit, in an effort to create a healthy public sentiment against this unholy disregard of the day.

Norwood Notes

A representative lot of the young and fair of Charlevoix were in Norwood during the week, namely, Miss Cora Nicholls, Miss Minnie Lewis, and Miss Essie Hunger. They came to visit Miss Nellie Meech, and other friends, and returned home Wednesday afternoon, by Steamer "City of Grand Rapids." They report a "splendid time," which we think no one will dispute.

Miss Abby Bennett, sister of D. R. Bennett and of Mrs. D. D. Wood, has arrived from Ohio, to spend the season here and at Charlevoix, much to the delight of her friends in both places.

Mr. Geo. Olney has been quite ill for some days, but is getting better rapidly under the care of Dr. Chamberlain.

Mrs. Ella Mallory, daughter of Mr. Plantgen of Banks, died of Consumption, at her father's residence, on Wednesday evening, after a brief illness.

Master Benny Pearl has gone to the location of the Pine Lake Iron Furnace, to visit his young friends at Mr. Noyes', the keeper of the boarding house.

Mr. Nourse, piano tuner from Grand Rapids was in town Wednesday and tuned Mrs. F. J. Meech's piano.

Mr. Mallory of Little Traverse, shipped some stock from here on Friday by the "City of Grand Rapids."

A pound social for the benefit of the Rev. A. M. Parmenter was held in the School house on Wednesday evening, which was quite well patronized.

On Thursday last a large quantity of merchandise was landed from the steamer Evanston City, for the following Charlevoix firms: Byron See, Mrs. R. E. Carpenter, J. E. Wood & Co., G. W. Crouter, Pick, Rose & Buttars, Emrey & Co., Fisher & Inwood, and Carpenter & Bartholomew; also a lot of fine beef cattle and fat hogs for A. J. McLeod.

IMPORTANT DECISION.—A letter from the law firm of Taggart, Stone & Earle, of Grand Rapids, to Mr. John Ward, states that the suit between the G. R. & I. railroad company and the townships of Maple, Boyne Falls, Wilson and Evangeline, growing out of the refusal of the company to pay their taxes in the town ships named, has been decided by the U. S. Court against the company.

FURNACE ITEMS.—The Pine Lake Iron Furnace Company's steam yacht Our Boys of Green Bay, has arrived, and will run between this place and the furnace during the summer.

The schooner Rob Roy is daily expected, with a cargo of block and castings for the furnace.

The schooner Lucy Graham, of Green Bay, arrived on Wednesday, with a miscellaneous cargo for the Company.

Mrs. Elizabeth Mittle, of Dearborn, died at the residence of A. J. Mudge, in this village, on Friday morning last. Mrs. Mittle came to Charlevoix a few days ago, with the hope of being benefited by a change of air, but the disease, chronic inflamation of the spleen, from which she was suffering, was too far advanced to receive even a temporary check. Mrs. Mittle was accompanied by her niece, Mrs. Schrader. Mr. Mittle and Mr. Schrader arrived, on the Sunday, on the afternoon of the day of her death. The body was taken home for interment.

The recent heavy rains have done considerable damage. In this village, the washing out of the earth at the south end of the bridge interrupted travel, and made prompt repairs necessary. At Stover's mill, the lower dam has been totally swept away, the foundations of the mill probably damaged, and a wide channel cut through the road at each end of the bridge just below the mill. The Jordan river is reported three feet higher than it was ever known to be before, and the south arm of Pine Lake is full of floating cord wood, railroad ties and sawlogs brought down by the flood.

Norwood Notes

Mr. Clarence Stafford of this vicinity is the inventor and manufacturer of a new instrument for sharpening and setting cross cut saws. He has also constructed his own machinery for the making of his saw sets. He has devoted a good deal of time and patient thought to the perfecting of his invention, and there is probably no doubt but he has an article of real value and merit. It has been tried by different persons and been pronounced a success. With this little instrument any person can sharpen and set a crosscut saw in a few minutes, and put it in perfect order. Mr. Stafford has applied for a patent. He intends to continue their manufacture, and in the fall will canvass the country in the neighboring counties for the purpose of exhibiting and introducing his invention, so desirable for everyone who has occasion to use a crosscut saw. We believe the price is about one dollar.

Miss Della Richardson is home for a few days' vacation.

Mrs. Lucia has for some time past been troubled with what is supposed to be a cancer over the roof of her tongue. Of late it has assumed a more alarming character, and we learn that Mrs. Lucia has gone to Ann Arbor with a view of probably having a surgical operation performed upon it.

Mr. John Jolliffe and his son Fitch, and Willie Knight, of Banks have gone to Wisconsin on a visit of several weeks.

The members of the Good Templars Lodge of this place, will hold a musical and literary entertainment in their Hall on Wednesday evening, June 16th. Preparations are now progressing to furnish the public with a rare treat. Everybody is invited to attend. Admission only 10 cents.

The lightning shook up some of our citizens in a lively manner, on Saturday morning. The storm came up rapidly from the southwest, between four and five o'clock, the peals of thunder following each other in quick succession, each seeming perceptibly nearer than the one preceding. Before the lady contributor is fell, not only the clouds above, but the air below appeared of a dull, muddy, yellow color. The electrical disturbance seemed to be at its height as the storm culminated above the village, and then rapidly declined, as if the electric fluid had spent its force, as but little thunder was heard in the direction opposite to that from it had come. The house at the corner of Bridge and Clinton streets, owned by Mr. Chamberlain and occupied by Mr. Levitt as a dwelling and tailor's shop, was considerably shattered. The lightning struck the top of the chimney, scattering bricks and shingles about the yard, crashed down through the roof of the building, tearing of ceiling, lath, and plaster in numerous places, and upsetting furniture, knocking down shelves, and breaking crockery within. Mr. Bal tinger and wife, who were sleeping in an upper room, received a shower of plaster in their faces, but were not harmed. Mrs. Harris and a little girl were in bed below, in a room where things were pretty generally torn up, but escaped unhurt. Mr. Levitt, who was in his shop, received a shock which knocked his cigar out of his mouth and left a mark on his scalp, but was not seriously injured. From appearances we judge that in that house there was a lively time during a small fraction of a second. The same house was struck by lightning last summer.

CARFIELD & ARTHUR!

These Are to be the Next President and Vice President of the United States.

Special despatch to the Sentinel.

On Tuesday, (8th,) the Chicago Convention nominated Gen. James A. Garfield, of Ohio, for the Presidency, on the 37th ballot, giving him 399 votes.

Gentlemen and ladies' saddles to be found at the harness shop.

Rev. James O. Peterson, State Superintendent of Fisheries, registered at the Fountain City House on Saturday, and on Monday left for Petoskey. Last week Mr. Peterson put into Boyne river 5,000,000 white fish eggs, 100,000 brook trout, 50,000 lake trout, and a few (perhaps 2,000) land locked salmon. He also placed in the same stream 700 California, or red banded, trout, (Salmo irridius.) Mr. Peterson requests that fishermen taking any of the latter will report the fact, as a matter of interest, to the State Fish Commission, and that if the fish is not hooked so deeply as to destroy its life, it be returned to the stream. The Commission have leased of Mrs. Bowers, for the term of 99 years, at Boyne Falls, land for a state hatchery. Mr. Peterson intends to retain about the last of July, and arrange a preliminary hatchery, to test the temperature of the water and other conditions practically. If the experiment proves successful, and the legislature furnishes the necessary funds, a permanent and extensive hatchery will be established at that place.

Elizabeth Wah-on-gick was buried Monday May 31st, in the Indian cemetery at Greenskyes Hill.

Mr. Mandeville lost a valuable cow last Tuesday. The cow had strayed away to Charlevoix, where Mr. Mandeville found her on Monday evening. While driving her home he noticed she drank water very frequently, and by the time he reached the residence of Moses Cooper the cow had bloated and refused to travel any further, and died the next morning in spite of the remedies administered.

A gentleman from Whitehall, Muskegon Co., passed through our town last Wednesday on a prospecting tour. He says he is a land it he don't go home and sell out and come to what he considers one of the best countries in the world. He head a lover.

There is a whisper in the air in regard to having a picnic on the Fourth of July by the four schools of this town. Why not become enthusiastic and get up a rousing old "celebrate."

Time has considered it necessary to have a placard attached to his back in order that he can be recognized by his friends, as he was mistaken for three different individuals in one day while in Petoskey lately, and considers it unsafe to run at large.

For the benefit of the patrons and pupils of our schools, we concluded to give the monthly report of the standing, deportment &c, of the schools in the town. Below is the report of Fair Grove school, taught by Miss Sara Bird for the month ending May 28th.

Attendance every day. Saml Scott, Nelson Burgess, Eugene Johnson. Deportment 100: Maud Scott, Nelson Burgess, Eliza Scruggie, Carrie Hannon, Millie Mandeville, Hannah Baker. Scholarship above 90 in classes: Nelson Burgess 97, Eliza Scruggie 96, Willis Barry 96, Horatio Murry 96.

Billy Miller, Undersheriff of Charlevoix Co. was in our town last Thursday in hot pursuit of some sons of the forest whose fingers had stuck fast to some property other than their own.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

YOU may plow and plant, but if you don't cultivate properly the crop will be short.

DON'T suffer briars, bushes and the like to grow along the highway adjoining your premises.

PLANT cabbages. If they bring a good price, sell them; if not, feed them to sheep, milch cows and pigs.

PAINT, varnish or japan may be softened or easily removed from old surfaces with a solution of caustic soda.

A LEMON eaten broiled for breakfast every day for a short time will entirely prevent the feeling of lassitude peculiar to the approach of spring.

TO WASH CHAPMAN SPONGINGS.—Put a table-spoonful of salt in a quart of water. Let the stockings soak in that for ten minutes, and then take them out, and wash in soap and water.

IN China, which has the densest population in the world, and feeds its millions without the importation of foreign food, no manure is spread to the land in a solid form; it is all liquefied.

COFFEE CREAM.—Dissolve two ounces of gelatine or of isinglass in just enough water to cover it; put to a pint and a half of cream a teacup and a half of very strong clear coffee with powdered sugar, add the dissolved isinglass, let it just boil, leave it standing till nearly cold; then pour it into a mold, and when quite set turn it out.

THE radish succeeds best in a light, rich soil, and must be grown quickly in order that they may be tender, sweet and free from the worm which frequently injures the root. The French breakfast is a rapid growing sort, and is very mild and tender. The golden yellow is a new variety of oval form, in color a deep yellow. It is early, and is adapted for both forcing and open ground culture.

STRAWBERRY PUDDING.—Cream, a cup of sugar and a tablespoonful of butter; add the beaten yolks of five eggs and two cups of fine bread-crumbs soaked in a quart of sweet milk. Flavor with lemon or vanilla. Pour into a deep pudding-dish and bake until the custard is "set." Boil a pint of ripe strawberries in powdered sugar, spread over the pudding and cover with a meringue made of the beaten whites and three tablespoonfuls of powdered sugar. Return to the oven until the top is delicately browned.

KEEPING OLD SHEEP.—The New York Tribune says: "It is folly to keep old sheep. They should be turned off to the butcher while they are in their prime. It does not take half so much to fatten them then. When they get old and thin, in order to put them in condition to slaughter the whole superstructure must be rebuilt. Four acres of lambs are all a ewe can bear; this will bring her to five years, and this is as age when, with a little extra care, she will round up to a fine carcass. Exceptions may be made when the breed is scarce, and the blood is more valuable than anything else."

PRESERVING GREEN SPRIGHTLY.—A correspondent of the Country Gentleman says: "I have practiced painting them as soon as laid. It is attended with trouble and considerable expense. I now prefer to use air-slacked lime. Just after, and while the roof is wet, or during a light fall of rain, sow a few quarts, nastily on the upper part of the roof, more a year. The expense is trifling. I am satisfied it will preserve the roof twice as long as to leave them in the weather. The quantity used depends upon the surface to preserve. Your readers must have noticed an old roof-the shingles below the chimneys. Comment is unnecessary."

SCOTCH LOAF.—One pound of flour, three quarters of a pound of butter, three-quarters of a pound of sugar, ten eggs, half a gill of rose-water, one tablespoonful of dissolved saleratus, one pound of dried currants, two teaspoonfuls of ground cinnamon. Pick, wash and dry the currants, and dredge as much flour over as will adhere to them. Beat the butter and sugar till it is smooth and light; whisk the eggs to a froth, stir them into the butter and sugar alternately with the flour; add the spice and butter, beat the whole very hard for ten minutes, lastly stir in the fruit and saleratus. Butter an earthen cake mold or iron pan, pour in the mixture, and bake for about two hours in a moderate oven.

Fruits Not Suited to Field Culture.

It is inevitable that there should be more or less disappointment in fruit-growing. Exceptionally large profits under certain conditions have led thousands to engage in the business who do not understand it, and whose soil and location are not suited to this purpose. Comparatively few men have the patience and care for details necessary to successful fruit-growing on a large scale. There are, beside, some kinds of fruits which only succeed in particular localities. The craze for fruit-growing covers from taking the profits of a few trees which happen to be in just the right places, and making these the standard for expected gains on a much larger area. Some apple, pear, plum or quince tree, standing in a rich garden, or where it gets the slops from the house, is found to yield an abundance of fine, large fruit. But it by no means follows that the same fruit, if planted largely in a field of ordinary fertility, will do as well. It is very rare that we can get a field of deep, rich soil in a sheltered position suitable for growing the quince. The same is true of the more prolific varieties of plum, as the prune. Even the apple and pear require more fertility than they find when grown largely; though for the pear, the manure should not be applied early in the season, lest it cause blight. Currants require a deep, rich and damp soil. The lower side of a garden, where they are often found, and where they receive the wash of the manure applied every year, is just the place for them. In such a location they will yield vastly more than if grown with ordinary field culture and manuring.

There are other kinds of fruit for which extensive orchards is not desirable. For peaches a warm, dry soil is better than a very rich one, especially if the latter is damp. The bulk of the peaches grown are produced on sandy soils, rather poor than otherwise. But fertility is advisable wherever it can be had without loss of dryness. There are hundreds of acres of vineyards, planted a few years ago, that have been given up as unprofitable, because planted on cold, wet and unfavorable soils. The grape does not need high manuring; in fact, too great growth of vine is the difficulty which mostly troubles inexperienced cultivators. Then comes mildew of fruit or foliage, or both, and the vineyard soon becomes nearly worthless. For most cultivators a rather poor soil, provided it is dry and warm, is best for grapevines. It will not be as troublesome for them to manage, and they will be less likely to make an entire failure. Good culture is much more important for growing grapes than great fertility. Coarse manures may be entirely dispensed with if the soil is kept loose, and some mineral fertilizers are occasionally given. The vine-dressers of France use no manures except ashes, and lose nobody from burning the annual prunings.

The habit of a tree or plant should be studied with especial reference to where it has been most successful. The low banks of streams with deep, rich deposits are the places best suited to the quince. Old fence-corners, where the fence or something else is high enough to shield from violent west winds, are also excellent. The quince is not entirely hardy, and more than any other tree needs some windbreak. Neglect in supplying this is the frequent cause of failure in growing quinces on a large scale. In places where the thermometer goes very low, quinces cannot be grown even in sheltered locations. They blossom late, and are rarely injured by spring frosts; but it is the severe cold of winter that does most harm to this fruit-tree.

The apple, pear and cherry seem in the order named most adapted to general field culture on any kind of soils. I think I would place the pear ahead of the apple as an easily-grown fruit but for the blight. As orchard of pear trees, even of standards, if the right varieties are planted, will yield a good many crops before anything can be said from apple trees planted at the same time. But the losses from pear-blight have been such that it is probable there have been more failures in attempting to grow this fruit than any other.—Wm. J. Fowler, in Rauswer and Chronicle.

Peas, and Brush or No Brush.

It costs more time and labor to stick peas than to plant and cultivate them. Market gardeners do not stick peas as a general thing. We farmers do not have an abundance of peas. We are afraid of the trouble of sticking them. Consequently the majority of farmers' families have peas about ten days, and do without the balance of the season. Our plan is to plant McLean's Little Gem as early as possible, and make plantings every ten days until in May. We make also a larger planting in April of Champion of England. It is doubtful if there is anything better. We have not yet found it. Peas should be planted from four to six inches deep in very rich ground. The rule that all kinds of seeds should be covered about four times their diameter will not do for peas. When peas are about four to six inches high, turn a furrow to them, or draw up the dirt with a hoe. This will help to keep them up and will keep them from drying up so soon. Frequent planting will extend the season. Fresh, tender, melting peas are a dish for an epicure. We pity our city friends who have to eat peas from two to ten days old. Peas, like eggs, are best when fresh. Buy your seed by the quart or pint. Remember, there are two great varieties—the wrinkled and smooth. The latter is not so likely to rot in the ground if planted early. The former is the tenderer, sweet, melting pea.—New York Express.

Repotting Potatoes on the Same Ground.

ROTATION of crops and in, hobbling office have long been popular rules, but to both there are occasionally valid exceptions. The advice is frequently given to correspondents of newspapers not to plant the same ground twice in succession with the same crop. Although this is good advice it does not follow that good crops cannot be had off the same ground twice in succession. We lately saw it stated that a good crop of potatoes could not be had from a field having been in the previous year. This is not the experience of those who have tried it, and those who desire potatoes on the same ground may continue raising them for several years and raise good crops. We have in mind one who has for six years raised potatoes on the same field, and he has had as good crops as his neighbors who have changed their ground. He manures every spring. This proves that good crops can be raised in this way, and those having no choice of ground should not be afraid to use the same land for their crop.—Christian at Work.

Mark Twain Hears a Telephonic Conversation.

I CONSIDER that a conversation by telephone—when you are simply sitting by and not taking any part in that conversation—is one of the salunnest curiosities of this modern life. Yesterday I was writing a deep article on a sublime philosophical subject, while such a conversation was going on in the room. I notice that one can always write best when any somebody is talking through a telephone close by. Well, the thing began in this way. A member of our household came in and asked me to have our house put into communication with Mr. Bagley's down-town. I have observed, in many cities, that the sky always shrink from calling up the central office themselves. I don't know why, but they do. So I touched the bell, and this talk ensued:

Central Office (gruffly)—"Hello!"

I—"Is this the Central Office?"

C. O.—"Of course it is. What do you want?"

I—"Will you switch me on to the Bagley's, please?"

C. O.—"All right. Just keep your ear to the telephone."

Then I heard k-lock, k-lock, k'lock—klock-klock-klock-lock-lock! then a number of "grinding" of teeth, and finally a piping female voice: "Y-e-s?" (Rising inflection.) "Did you wish to ring in me?"

Without answering, I handed the telephone to the applicant, and say Brown, Jones followed the quickest of all the queer things in this world—a conversation with only one end to it. You hear questions asked; you don't hear the answer. You have invitations given; you hear no thanks in return. You hear listening pauses of dead silence, followed by apparently irrelevant and unjustifiable exclamations of glad surprise, or sorrow, or dismay. You can't make head or tail of the talk, because you never hear anything but the person at the other end of the wire says. Well, I heard the following remarkable series of observations, all from the one tongue, and all shouted—for you can't even persuade the sex to speak gently into a telephone:

"Yes? Why, how did that happen?"

Pause.

"What did you say?"

Pause.

"Oh, no, I don't think it was."

Pause.

"No! Oh, no, I didn't mean that. I meant, put it in white. It is still boiling, or just before it comes to a boil."

Pause.

"Head?"

Pause.

"I turned it over with a back stitch on the selvage edge."

Pause.

"Yes, I like that way, too; but I think it's better to baste it on with Valenciennes or feminine, or something of that sort. It gives it such an air—and attracts so much notice."

Pause.

"It's forty-ninth Deuteronomy, sixty-fourth to ninety-seventh, inclusive. I think we ought all to read it often."

Pause.

"Perhaps so; I generally use a hairpin."

Pause.

"What did you say? [Aside.] Children, do be quiet!"

Pause.

"Oh! B Flat! Dear me, thought you said it was the cat!"

Pause.

"Since When?"

Pause.

"Why, I never heard of it."

Pause.

"You astound me! It seems utterly impossible!"

"Who did?"

Pause.

"Good-ness gracious!"

Pause.

"Well what is this world coming to? Was it right in church?"

Pause.

"And was her mother there?"

Pause.

"Why, Mrs. Bagley, I should have died of humiliation. What did they do?"

Long pause.

"I can't be perfectly sure, because I haven't the notes by me, but I think it goes something like this: tw-rolli-loll-loll, loll-lolly-loll-loll, O tolly-loll-loll-lo-la-la-la! And then repeat, you know."

Pause.

"Yes, I think it is very sweet—and very solemn and impressive, if you get the andantino and pianissimo right."

Pause.

"Oh, gum-drops, gum-drops! But I never allow them to eat striped candy. And of course they can't till they get their teeth, anyway."

Pause.

"What?"

Pause.

"Oh, not in the least—go right on. He's here writing—it doesn't bother him."

Pause.

"Oh, no, not at all; I like to talk—but I'm afraid I'm keeping you from your affairs."

Pause.

"Visitors?"

Pause.

"No, we never use butter on them."

Pause.

"Yes, that is a very good way, but all the cook books say they are very unhealthy when they are out of season. And he doesn't like them any way—especially canned."

Pause.

"Oh, I think that is too high for them; we have never paid over fifty cents a bunch."

Pause.

"Must you go? Well good-by."

Pause.

"Yes, I think so. Good-by."

Pause.

"Four o'clock, then I'll be ready. Good-by."

Pause.

"Thank you ever so much. Good-by."

Pause.

"Oh, not at all! just as fresh. Good-by. Oh, I'm glad to hear you say that. Good-by."

Hangs up the telephone and says, "Oh, it does drive a person's arm off!"

A man delivers a single brutal "Good-by," and that is the end of it. Not so with the gentle sex—I say I: in their prattle they ramble about with a delightful aimlessness, they cannot abide abruptness.—Atlantic Monthly.

Home Millinery.

OSTRICH FEATHERS are so easily affected by dampness, and so soon become straight and forlorn in appearance, that many a lady wearing her beautiful spring bonnet to church on an April Sunday morning goes home in anything but an enviable state of mind. Though the shower be but a slight one, and she well knows that it won't injure her bonnet permanently, though the umbrella be large enough to keep her head at least quite dry, the damp air will cause the beautiful feather to wilt and droop in most unsightly fashion. Much vexation of spirit may be saved by following these directions. First, if the feather has only been exposed to the damp air—not actually wet—you will only require a silver butter-knife to curl it with. But if it has been wet, remove it from the bonnet and hold it over a warm stove, rapidly stripping it gently sweeping the filaments will expand and curl back a little. Now draw the knife-blade gently along the under side of each filament, commencing at the point of the feather, using care, as too sharp a stroke will cut the filament, and too swift a motion will curl too tightly. When the feather has been cured, perhaps the stem will need some handling. Use a stout case-knife for this, drawing along the under side of the rib. If it is a long plume, you can hold it around a warm stove-pipe, and perhaps a warm lamp chimney will be what you want for the curl which one is disposed to fall back upon the explanation of Solomon that "Love is nothing to quarrel about, some fine bonnet some and attach along the under side of the stem with long button-hole stitches, using silk to match the feathers. To wash white feathers, use tepid water and white soap, with a little bluing in the water. Make a good lather in a dish which is quite long enough to admit of having the leather straight out, then by holding the feather to soak a few moments, gently draw it through your hand until you think it is quite clean. Now rinse it in clear water, to which, besides the bluing, add a few drops of spirits of salt (to be had at any chemists), When it is rinsed enough draw the feather through your hand to get rid of as much water as possible. Shake it, taking care not to break the stem, and, laying it on a table or board, brush it each side of the rib with a clean brush. When it is dry hold it over the stove and curl it. For ornamenting ruffs the blue and old coffee in the rinse water. I once needed a cream tip tinted with rose-color. I first colored the white feather with coffee, and then, taking an old red rose leaf and moistening it, I tinted the edges of the feather very prettily. Aniline, which comes in five-cent packages, put up for coloring Easter eggs, dyes feathers beautifully. They come in six colors. By blending them one can make nearly all the fashionable colors. The tints can be regulated by the amount of water used and the length of time the feather is left in the bath, which should be hot. Gray feathers with white dashes can be made of old white plumes by first covering the parts to be left white with thick paper, and then spattering either with India ink or brown aniline. Feathers for evening bonnets are beautiful with Roman pearls attached to the stem of every third or fourth filament near the point. Feathers that have been quite broken up can be made pretty by adding a sash of tassel made of the chenille now used in fringe. The finely feathers of a goose can in this way be made passable on ostrich tips are pretty. I promised in my last to tell you how to clean white kid gloves. The way is to thinly cover it with flour and lay it away for a day or two, then shake and press in a book.—Cor. Andrews' Bazar.

IN the backwoods of Presque Isle County, Wisconsin, is a town, that has just elected its first Justice of the Peace. Like the rest of the residents, he is a rough lumberman. The first case brought before him was that of an assault committed by a notorious brawler. The Court had no difficulty in pronouncing him guilty, but how to punish him was a harder question, for he had no money with which to pay a fine, and there was no jail in which to imprison him. After mature thought the magistrate said: "The complainant's got to pay you two dollars 'costs' a sentence the prisoner to be whipped, and, as a peace officer I'm going to do the punishing myself. Time to roll up his sleeves and thrashed the culprit.

THE new "compromise" metals, of which so much was heard a few months ago, are to have a trial at the mint. The Director of the Mint is to have coined four hundred specimens each of the "cents," the merrie silver dollar, and the "gobdi" dollar. These are specimens of a reform coinage recommended by Alexander H. Stephens and invented by Dr. Hebbel, of Philadelphia.

What They Knew 4,000 Years Ago.

FROM one of those books, compiled after the manner of our modern encyclopædias, and the compilation of which is known to have been made more than 2,000 years B. C., it has been ascertained, what has long been supposed, that Chaldea was the parent-land of astronomy; for it is found, from this compilation and from other bricks, that the Babylonians catalogued the stars, and distinguished and named the constellations; that they arranged the twelve constellations that form our present zodiac to show the course of the sun's path in the Heavens; divided time into weeks, months and years; that they divided the week, as we now have it, into seven days, six being days of labor and the seventh a day of rest, to which they gave a name from which we have derived our word "Sabbath," and which day, as a day of rest from all labor of every kind they observed as strictly as the Jew or the Puritan. The motion of the heavenly bodies and the phenomena of the weather were noted down, and a connection, as I have before stated, detected, as M. de Perville claims to have discovered, between the weather and the changes of the moon. Bee, invented the sun-dial to mark the movements of the heavenly bodies, the water-clock to measure time, and they speak in this work of the spots on the sun, a fact they could only have known by the aid of telescopes, which it is supposed they possessed, from which it follows that they have noted down the rising of Venus, and the fact that Layard found a crystal lens in the ruins of Nineveh. Those "days" which fell on account of the deluge, substantially the same as the narrative in the Bible, except that the names are different. They disclose that houses and land were then sold, leased and mortgaged, that money was lent at interest, and that the market-gardeners, to use an American phrase, "worked on shares" that the under side of each filament, commencing at the point of the feather, using care, as too sharp a stroke will cut the filament, and too swift a motion will curl too tightly. When the feather has been cured, perhaps the stem will need some handling. Use a stout case-knife for this, drawing along the under side of the rib. If it is a long plume, you can hold it around a warm stove-pipe, and perhaps a warm lamp chimney will be what you want for the curl which one is disposed to fall back upon the explanation of Solomon that "Love is nothing to quarrel about, some fine bonnet some and attach along the under side of the stem with long button-hole stitches, using silk to match the feathers. To wash white feathers, use tepid water and white soap, with a little bluing in the water. Make a good lather in a dish which is quite long enough to admit of having the leather straight out, then by holding the feather to soak a few moments, gently draw it through your hand until you think it is quite clean. Now rinse it in clear water, to which, besides the bluing, add a few drops of spirits of salt (to be had at any chemists). When it is rinsed enough draw the feather through your hand to get rid of as much water as possible. Shake it, taking care not to break the stem, and, laying it on a table or board, brush it each side of the rib with a clean brush. When it is dry hold it over the stove and curl it. For ornamenting ruffs the blue and old coffee in the rinse water. I once needed a cream tip tinted with rose-color. I first colored the white feather with coffee, and then, taking an old red rose leaf and moistening it, I tinted the edges of the feather very prettily. Aniline, which comes in five-cent packages, put up for coloring Easter eggs, dyes feathers beautifully. They come in six colors. By blending them one can make nearly all the fashionable colors. The tints can be regulated by the amount of water used and the length of time the feather is left in the bath, which should be hot. Gray feathers with white dashes can be made of old white plumes by first covering the parts to be left white with thick paper, and then spattering either with India ink or brown aniline. Feathers for evening bonnets are beautiful with Roman pearls attached to the stem of every third or fourth filament near the point. Feathers that have been quite broken up can be made pretty by adding a sash of tassel made of the chenille now used in fringe. The finely feathers of a goose can in this way be made passable ostrich tips are pretty. I promised in my last to tell you how to clean white kid gloves. The way is to thinly cover it with flour and lay it away for a day or two, then shake and press in a book.—Cor. Andrews' Bazar.

GENERAL DEBILITY.

PASSPORT, Ill., Sept 27, 1878.

H. R. STEVENS, BOSTON:

Dear Sir—I have been using your valuable medicine, Vegetine, for the past year, and I find it to be just as it is represented. I was troubled with a general debility, and could get nothing to help me until I got the Vegetine. I have taken but a few bottles, and it has done me more good than all the doctors and other medicines I have taken. I am now in the best of health, and heavier than I ever was before. I cheerfully recommend it to all who are afflicted as I was. Yours truly, J. H. FOSTER.

TUESDAY, JUNE 8, - - 1880

FOR GOVERNOR,

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

OUR NEW YORK LETTER.

NEW YORK, June 5th, 1880

How is winter position for you to maintain authorities. It was keep the thermometer up to 90° by the week together, with frosts and hailstones per day in this city, in the month of May, what will be the conditions of things by the middle of August? Try and figure it out some cool evening.

The hint here is made over to vary and somewhat changed as well. The average death rate in the city for May as 1,126, but during the past week it has run up to 1,326, while the suffering that has about to kill as it is visited among men and beasts makes her be counted now counted.

In neighboring sea side resorts despite the apparent preparations which they have to make been reported as making, were taken by surprise after all, and are not nearly now prepared for the rush of our sizzling New Yorkers who incline on invading them. The Manhattan Beach Hotel was formally opened on Thursday, and although not ready ready to receive guests in large numbers, was visited by at least twenty thousand people. In the city the free baths will open on June 1st, and not before. These institutions, of course, are a boon to mankind. They must open on stationary dates at the commencement of the season, if the thermometer stands at 100 and the sweltering poor are dying for the grateful coolness which they would afford. For coolness, they wouldn't close till seasonably late in the Fall, if the water in them was frozen two feet thick. In this respect they are a good deal like the fires in railway cars which are put on at just such a time in the Fall, and no sooner, no matter if there has been snow on the ground for a month, and are put out on a set day in the Spring, after perhaps a week of sunstroke weather, and very likely before a day when they are so much needed as at any time during the Winter. I speak feelingly on this railroad matter for I live out of the city and get the full benefit of their inside systems.

As a result all the sources of relief and comfort during a heated term are being early and heavily drawn upon. The "custom made" lemonade men are working early and late and will soon be in the front rank of capitalists. These gentlemen are comparatively new characters in our midst so far as my observating goes. Of course there is and long has been the fine brand of punch bowl office and floating lemon peel on the shady corner of the street ready to be dipped out with a cocoanut shell ladle for the thirsty purchaser. But these are not cool, which is now the correct caste, is for the vendor to make every man's glass of the refreshing beverage to order. He has his pile of the golden fruit, a lemon squeezer, a young mountain of powdered sugar and a supply of ice water, and puts up each drink as it were a prescription.

One of the most noticeable, outgoing features of metropolitan fashion is the rage of decoration. The parasols of our fair ladies are embellished with all the splendor of blended colors, and the appearance of the gay promenade of Fifth avenue on the afternoon is simply gorgeous. As far as the eye can reach there is a bobbing, bobbing of highly tinted parasols. The masculine promenaders have not adopted any uniform high color as yet, except we call the ruby colored noses of many an indication of what is to be popular in the future. The latest fashion of apparel of the latter is ridiculous. Tight pantaloons, small pointed shoes, a sassy fitting coat buttoned up within an inch of their chins, and a flat stiff hat completes their costume. They are the English swell in manners, and, being unnatural, are, of course, extremely ludicrous. A cynical friend of mine says "that to be an English swell you have only to wear a tight suit of clothes, a flat Derby hat and have your face covered with pimples. The latter is indispensable," and to tell the truth he is about right.

With the advent of the warmer weather comes an epidemic of suicide. Too daily journals chronicle each day a long list of suicides who, either weary of their struggle with fate, or some personal trouble sue rest in that great hereafter by ending death with their own hands. The great rivers that surround our city appear to attract the weary, and deliver up daily a great many bodies. When found these relics of humanity are taken to the Morgue, a dry, gruesome building, and there held for identification. Today there are forty-seven pine coffins of various sizes in the dead house. They hold the mortal remains of as many human beings, whose friends forsook or were forsaken by them, or had neither friends or homes in this great and beautiful community. Of the forty-seven occupants of the dead house thirty-two had been given up by the silent waters of the rivers. Five bodies are those of children. They, also, came from such a watery open stranded, with lacerated eye, and breasts. The had perished and had been deserted by their parents, whose poverty had not left them the means of burial. With our great charity institutions who has the audience to convert and clothe the savage shroud it does appear inhuman that the poor and crime should come and be buried right in our midst.

Many of your readers will doubtless remember Sam Patch and his leap over Niagara. It is a curious index that he is a man to reach fame through such an avenue, for both before and since the days of the redoubtable Sam, there have been those who shared it, rode a performance in this city on Thursday which a reporter describes something as follows:

Towards 1 P. M. a tall, slim young man appeared on a pier on the Hudson river, and, after leisurely stepping and donning a suit of tights, ran nimbly up the shrouds of a large schooner's mainmast and stood in the crosstrees. A minute later his white skin glistened in the sun as he dashed through the air in his descent into the water. Emerging a few seconds later, he with a few strokes gained the schooner's side and mounted to the deck. The height from which he leaped was about eighty feet.

The performer of the feat has since his boyhood practiced Sam Patch's style of leaping from a height. When a boy of 14 he leaped from the yard of a ship into the water a distance of over 100 feet. The leap would have been made from a greater distance yesterday had the facilities been afforded. The preparations to make leaps this Summer from nearly twice the height from which the leap was made yesterday. After a few minutes' rest the leap was repeated. His style is peculiar. As he launches himself into the air Thomas fairly makes a spread eagle of himself, his arms and legs waving in the air at first, but gradually getting in a heap together, and when within a few feet of the water he straightens out and goes down feet foremost. Should he fall in the water as he attains the clock would certainly kill him, but the change of position is suddenly and skillfully made.

The investigation which followed the tumbling down of Gilmore's Garden has so stirred up the Mayor that he is going for the scalp of the Superintendent of Buildings, against whom he prefers charges enough to fill a couple of columns of print, and whom he says he will decapitate just as soon as he can get through the necessary legal formalities. There is no question of Superintendent Dudley's criminal negligence, if not absolute corruption in this and a host of other instances, and it is equally certain that this city has more deathtraps in it than any one has an idea of. There are thousands of flimsy, ill-constructed buildings put up every year and the only wonder is that so few of them tumble down.

RADIX.

The grove near the depot at Petoskey, is being fitted up by the railroad company as a free pleasure park.

The Northern Tribune thinks the indications are that the Jackson, Lansing & Saginaw railroad will be extended to the straits of Mackinaw within a year, and that Cheboygan can secure it by giving the right of way and a suitable location for a depot.

It may be of interest to school teachers to learn that Traverse City has decided to have nine months school during the coming year, and that a male principal shall be employed, with such a number of female assistants as the Board may deem best.

Fifty three thousand immigrants arrived in New York during the month of May, a greater number than ever before in a single month. These immigrants come mostly from Ireland, Germany, England, and the Scandinavian nations. With the exception of the Irish, most of these are said to be mechanics, skilled working men or servants. The authorities at the immigrant depot report that the demand for labor is still greater than the supply. There is no excuse for tramps or idlers, even in the city of New York. Scandinavian women are most in demand for domestic service. An exchange says the reason of this is that they qualify themselves for the work, just as a mechanic learns a trade, and zeal in their persons, and understand their duties, and thinks our American girls might take a lesson from them.

Personal and Impersonal.

For the first time the allegations of both the plaintiff and defendant in the Christiancy divorce case have been made public. Minister Christiancy charges his wife with the grossest infidelity, and Mrs. Christiancy accuses her husband of brutal cruelty. If a fourth part of what each tells is true, both are in a bad scrape and might as well cry quits.

Stonewall Jackson's wife and daughter will unveil his monument at Winchester June 9.

No less than 1,000 copies of "Uncle Tom's Cabin" were sold last year by the publishing house of Houghton, Osgood & Co. It is doubtful if any work ever maintained such a remarkable sale during the lifetime of the author.

Mrs. John Lillie, who has contributed such entertaining papers as "Music and Musicians in England" to recent numbers of Harper's Monthly, is the wife of Mr. John Lillie, who is one of the translators of the Memoirs of Madame de Remusat.

Politic and Impolitic.

The Senate has confirmed, with little opposition, the nomination of Postmaster General Key as U. S. Judge of the eastern district of Tennessee.

The people of Montreal are agitating the question of a commercial union with the United States.

The British government is interesting itself in the war between Chili and Peru, and Sir Charles Dilke talks of mediation at the first favorable opportunity.

The supreme court of California has rendered a decision releasing Kearney from the house of correction, where he had been place by sentence of the police court. The small-bot politicians can put on their high heeled shoes, and cut a pigeon wing or two.

Southern Democratic congressmen and politicians have started a little boom for Wm. R. Morrison, of Illinois, as the Democratic candidate for President. Wm. R. can't come it—the man with a barl o' money is in the way.

Our neighbor of the Emmet County Independent says that the Republican party now "has no nobler ambition than to elect its nominees, no grander principal than to capture the spoils of office, no loyalty except the loyalty of voting for the regular nominees." It is very well for brother Hampton to indulge in lofty flights of rhetoric, and to fill his paper with fine writing; but we would modestly whisper in his ear that the great mass of voters in the Republican party, as well as in the National Greenback party to which he belongs, have a noble ambition to serve their country and protect her interests, and are thoroughly loyal to the principles of human liberty, which in our own country have cost seas of blood. Assertions to the contrary are a libel and a slander on the rank and file of the party, including his neighbors and ours.

Col. Robert J. Ingersoll is reported as saying in a lecture in Chicago recently, when asked how he would improve the world, that, as a starter, he would make health catching instead of disease. If Col. Robert J. were more teachable and less captious, he would learn that in the existing economy of the world, as established by the Creator, health is already much more catching than disease. We catch health from the glowing sunlight, from the cooling breeze, from the grateful perfume of flowers, from the joyous song of birds, from the cheerful countenance of friends, from the soothing sympathy of human kindness, from all the sweet influences and inspirations of nature that quicken the intellect, stir the emotions, and gladden the heart. It comes to us in the wild tornado that makes the earth tremble, as well as in the gently falling shower that refreshes the thirsty fields and clothes them in a garb of green. The influences that produce health are all around us. How does Col. Ingersoll know that there would be any catching diseases in the world, or any disease at all, if all men's lives were conformed to the requirements of nature, which are but the requirements of nature's God?

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

CARBOLINE.

A DECODORIZED EXTRACT OF PETROLEUM.

The only Article that will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

WHAT THE WORLD HAS BEEN WANTING FOR CENTURIES.

The greatest discovery of our day, no fact as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from Petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, whether the hair comes in dimples of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It is also a speedy restorative, and, while its use secures a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the using. The falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest those causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical tones, and the change must begin under the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and like many other wonderful discoveries it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was by far-of Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a Government officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a wonderful crop of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil emitted on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The mane and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our own chemists has overcome the difficulty, and, by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as delicately as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments made with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were attended with the most astonishing results. A few applications where the hair was thin and falling gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid, so nourishing in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once and stay a further change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and by some mysterious operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful light-brown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburg Commercial of October 31, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of thousands who are using it with most gratifying and encouraging results:

MR. CHRISTOPHER T. HAAS, of the Union Depot Grocery writes: "After six weeks' use am convinced, as are also my comrades, that your CARBOLINE has and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had none for years."

N. MOSES, 44 & 46 Ninth Avenue Pharmacy, New York City, writes: "Sales of CARBOLINE from date of completion are beyond all precedent every day to such an extent as to justify me in recommending it to my most intimate friends."

CARBOLINE Gives the utmost satisfaction as a Hair Renewer.
CARBOLINE Is not a dye—a magical effect on gray hairs.
CARBOLINE Is free from irritating and poisonous chemicals.
CARBOLINE Is the natural nourishment for the hair.
CARBOLINE Has been indorsed by the highest medical authority.
CARBOLINE Gives weak and sickly hair the gloss and vigor of youth.
CARBOLINE Restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.
CARBOLINE Is not a dye—restores the hair naturally.
CARBOLINE Cures all Diseases of the Scalp.
CARBOLINE Keeps the hair moist and the head cool.
CARBOLINE Delightful, fragrant, and cures all in one.

CARBOLINE

Is now presented to the public without hesitation as the best Restorative and Dressing for the Hair the world has ever produced.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

A LARGE number of pension bills were passed in the Senate on the 25th. A bill was also passed providing that section 4,716 of the Revised Statutes, which now restricts the rate of pensions which may be allowed to naval officers and their widows, etc., prior to June 30, 1865, and that such pensions shall be restored to the rates from which they were reduced under the provisions of said section. Mr. Hoar's bill providing for the appointment of Supervisors of Elections was discussed at considerable length. The session of the House was mainly devoted to the consideration, in Committee of the Whole, of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and several amendments disposed of.

EX-GOVERNOR BROWN took the usual oath and his seat as senator from Georgia, on the 26th, and then took his seat as senator from the full term of Governor, resigned. The Pensions Reference Appropriation bill and the bill of Mr. Hayard regulating the duties of Supervisors of Elections were discussed, the latter by a party vote—27 to 14. In the House the conference report on the Legislative Appropriation bill was submitted, and, with the amendments of Mr. Cutler, the bill was agreed to. The amendments to the House bill appropriating $5,000 for Bureau now in regard to political rights were concurred in. The Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was taken up, and the committee of the Whole, and, on motion of Mr. Kenna (W.), Va., the reading of the report was dispensed with—by a vote of 93 to 21—in order that he may have an opportunity to offer the substitute, to pay the sums appropriated for the payment of lawful silver coin.

MR. PENDLETON submitted a resolution in the senate on the 27th requesting the President to communicate to the Senate whether any supervisor or supervisors of the Census, appointed by and with the advice of the Senate, and now in office, have resigned or his, or with his consent, and whether a successor to fill the vacancy caused by such resignation has been appointed by him, or with his consent. The agricultural Appropriation bill was passed, with amendments, one of which increases the salary of the Commissioner of Agriculture to $5,000. In the House the consideration of the joint resolution for the Committee on the Judiciary to report a bill providing for the counting of the votes for President was then resumed. The morning hour was dispensed with, and the pending question of the day was the previous question on the joint resolution of the Committee on the Judiciary to report a bill providing for the counting of the votes for President

XLVIth Congress.

A LARGE number of pension bills were passed in the Senate on the 25th. A bill was also passed providing that section 3 of the act increasing the pensions of widows and orphans, approved July 25, 1866, and section 13 of the act of March 3, 1865, and section 4 of the act of March 3, 1879, shall not operate to increase the rate of pensions which had been allowed to naval officers and their widows, children, or heirs, but that the rate of pension shall be computed according to the rate from which they were reduced by the act of 1866, in force at the date of such reduction. Mr. Hayard's bill relating to the appointment of Supervisors of Elections was discussed at considerable length.

The session of the House was mainly devoted to the consideration of the Committee of Whole, of the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill, and several unimportant private bills passed.

EX-GOVERNOR BROWN took the medal-lified oath in the Senate on the 26th, and then took his seat as Senator from Georgia, in place of Gordon, resigned. The Pension Appropriation bill and the bill of Mr. Hayard providing for the appointment of Supervisors of Elections were passed, the latter by a party vote of 31 to 11. In the House the Conference report on the Military Academy Appropriation bill was agreed to, and many unimportant bills passed. The Senate amendments to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill were concurred in. The Deficiency Civil Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole, and, on motion of Mr. Dorsey (Ark.), it was agreed that the Treasury was authorized—by a vote of 175 to 5—to order that no more new accommodations for the storage of cash to pay the pensions be provided for by the Sub-Treasurer at Cincinnati.

MR. PENDLETON submitted a resolution in the Senate on the 27th requesting the President of the United States to the Senate whether any Supervisors of Supervisors of the census, appointed by and with the advice of the Senate, had been removed from office by him, or with his consent, and whether a successor to fill the vacancy caused by such removal had been appointed by him, or with his consent, during the recess of the Senate; and if any had been so removed, with circumstances, one of which is believed to be the action of the Democratic majority in Congress in the Supervisors in Kansas, etc., to inform the Senate how many and which of such Supervisors have been removed, and the cause of such removal, and whether any successor to any such Supervisor has been appointed by the President during the recess of the Senate, and if so, the name of such successor, and the cause of such removal. Agreed to. The Deficiency Appropriation bill was then taken up, and Mr. Pendleton moved to strike out the clause appropriating $100,000 for the payment of the Fitz-John Porter judgment. Mr. Hoar opposed the motion, and Mr. Pendleton withdrew it. The bill was then passed. The House Committee of the Whole on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was considered, and the Senate amendments were reported from committee, and the previous question was ordered. Adjourned to the 28th.

The President may appoint such officers during the recess of the Senate, who may hold and exercise their offices until the next session of the Senate; and it shall be the duty of the President to send in such nominations to the Senate, during the next ensuing session of the Senate; provided, that no person who has held the office of Chief Supervisor of Elections shall be reappointed.

MR. CHRISTIANCY'S application for a divorce and Mrs. Christiancy's answer thereto were made public on the 27th. He makes specific charges against his young wife of having been unfaithful to her marriage vows, while she alleges that her health has been injured by cruel and inhuman treatment on his part. She denies the charges preferred in his bill.

THE National House of Representatives on the 27th appointed the following gentlemen members of the Board of Managers of National Soldiers' Homes: General John M. Palmer (Ill.), General William B. Franklin (Conn.), General Charles W. Roberts (Maine), General Martin McMahon (N. Y.), General Love (Ind.) and Major Fulton (Wis.).

THE municipal election at Richmond, Va., on the 27th resulted in a decided victory for the Conservative over the Readjusters.

THE Supreme Court of California on the 27th released Denis Kearney from prison on a writ of habeas corpus.

THE Superior Court of San Francisco on the 27th sustained the demurrer to Mayor Kalloch to the impeachment proceedings, and have fixed the case against him.

THE Mississippi Democratic State Convention met at Jackson on the 27th and chose unin-structed delegates to the Cincinnati Convention. The majority are reported to favor the nomination of Bayard.

THE Minnesota Greenbackers met in State Convention on the 27th and elected delegates to the Chicago Convention. Resolutions were adopted formally indorsing Donnelly and Benis Kearney.

THE Wisconsin State Greenback Convention met at Watertown on the 27th and chose an unin-structed delegation to the National Convention.

THE United States Senate has confirmed the nomination of Postmaster-General Key as United States District Judge for Eastern Tennessee. The nomination of Horace Maynard, Minister to Turkey, to succeed Key as Postmaster-General, and of General Longstreet, to take Maynard's place at Constantinople, were laid over on the 27th.

THE Baptist Publication Society, in session at Saratoga, N. Y., on the 28th, elected the following officers for the coming year: President, Heorge T. Bigg, N. Y.; Vice-Presidents, Samuel A. Crozer, Pennsylvania; J. Warren Merrill, Massachusetts; E. L. Hodgdon, New York, and Edward Goodman, Illinois; Secretary, Reuben J. Ferris; Recording Secretary, J. Howard Goodell, Pennsylvania; Treasurer, William S. Perkin.

THE Methodist Episcopal General Conference adjourned late on the 27th after a four weeks' session in Cincinnati. New York, Boston, Philadelphia, Syracuse, Cincinnati, Chicago, St. Louis, Des Moines, Atlanta, Denver, St. Paul, Washington and Chattanooga were selected as Episcopal residences.

THE Newada Democratic State Convention on the 27th elected six delegates to the Cincinnati Convention, and, in a vote of 6 to 3, declared Tilden to be the preference do the party for President.

A CALCUTTA telegram

Editorial Correspondence.

OTSEGO LAKE, June 2, 1880.

Our passage to Traverse City on the Chas. Hebbe Sunday was pleasant and expeditious arriving just at dusk. Benning found quarters and at that model hostelry, Park Place, which shines in flame and mirth, under the management of Col. Billings.

Monday came cloudy and wet, but brightened up in general so to look about, which we did. The Herald and Eagle offices first received our attention, and there we were excellently entertained, as expected. We say enough when we declare them the best in Grand Traverse.

In the afternoon we accompanied Judge Hatch in a pleasant drive through town and to several prominent points of interest outside the village. The fair fenced, well farm of Judge Ramsdell was taken in, the Judge accompanying us through the fields of bearing trees, laden with young fruit, and bounded in the exuberance of their deep green foliage. The Judge has about forty acres of land exclusively devoted to pomology. He has nearly 4000 fruit trees of all kinds, 700 of which are plum, an equal number of peach, and the rest apple, pear, quince, and choice grape vineyard. The Judge expects to have about 600 bushels of choice-sized 200 of peaches. So much has been said of the peculiar adaptability of this farm for fruit raising, that we need not describe it. Its elevated position makes it exempt from frosts, and during the fifteen or twenty years in which the Judge has owned it he never had the best vine has never troubled him. The Judge's wife cellar contains apples from and bushels as when they were taken from the tree. We wish that time and space would permit us to dwell upon the sights which this visit afforded us.

Our Judicial event next week is to the forty acre apple orchard of Hon. Perry Hannah, about two miles from town. A level field of that area, with roseight rows of thrifty bearing apple trees, of uniform size, is a sight worth going ten miles to see.

We returned in time for tea, and seven o'clock found us afloat upon the bay in the palace steamer, City of Traverse, and as I write hand has disappeared from our vision. Only about eighty passengers are aboard, of whom there is a sufficient number of newspaper men aboard to lend dignity and respectability to the occasion. Among the guild of ers on board, besides ourself, are the following:

Hon. E. O. Rice, Rapids Pioneer Magnet.

Ben. Davis, Elk Rapids Progress.

L. A. Clark, Little Traverse Republican.

Mr. Gibson, Petoskey Record.

Mr. Chapin, Cadillac News.

E. B. Dennis, Kalkaska Leader.

Among the distinguished gentlemen in the party, are Hon. S. E. Moffatt, Hon. F. B. Williams, Hon. Geo. E. Nicols, and Hon. J. H. Haviland, A. Bagley and A. B. Upright, of Charlevoix, all among us, and are behaving themselves well, even subduing the company they are in, for a more unseemly enjoyable crowd I never struck. This morning Tom. Bates found a dandy at his state-room door, placed there by the stately ex-Senator Moffatt. It is say fortunate to be a room-mate with Mr. Bates, and W. S. Johnson, and our room "No. 14," is "headquarters." This morning I learned Johnson's work screw over our shoes, and Jim Haviland suggested that I correspond with the remote "In the Stone Times." Fred. Morsh sticks his head in occasionally, but I can vouch for his usefulness and as for Hunters and small, our regulations will suffice for testimony.

This afternoon a very pleasant meeting of the newspaper gentlemen was held in the cabin, with Hon. E. O. Rice, President of the Northeastern Michigan Press Association, in the chair.

The City of Traverse, with a cabin over 170 feet long beautifully finished, the superior cuisine of the tables, her gentlemanly officers, and remarkable steadiness, make her a peer of her kind.

Six o'clock tomorrow morning will find us in the midst of the wrangling, turbulent crowd of the great city, amid the thousands drawn thither by the momentous questions of the American Presidency. May harmony and wise counsels prevail.

I send lies at first opportunity after landing, but are it reaches you, the telegraph will advise you of the result of the National Republican Convention. W. A. S.

From Advance.

EX. SENTINEL:

A. B. Hayes is at work today, with a large crew, building the schooner.

Harvey Porter is quietly preparing to erect a very large barn mill, upon the front of which the old mill key to step into operation.

Two weeks ago today, thanks P. Call, a jeweler at the head of the lake, sold Harmon Holliday a horse afflicted with glanders. Holliday traded the horse to Joseph Drew, Holliday, on account of the disease, the horse refused to draw any more. Mr. Drew immediately returned him to Holliday, and demanded his money. Mr. Holliday received the horse, and returned him to Call. Call put on an indorsement countersee, and a trade was a trade, and he wouldn't take him back. Holliday repaired to lawyer Clink, and he undertook him that Call was in the wrong, and must take the horse, pay the damage, or go to jail in case of failure. Call, badly frightened, scurried to let the law dazzle in which path he should walk, the refer to morrow there is a lawsuit.

The potato fruits have been heavy, but as far as heard from nothing has been injured.

The ground is broken this morning for the three story barn on Mr. Hays' farm, three-fourths of a mile west of Advance, which is to be 85 by 75 feet, sollar and and sided, to cost $1,000, and to receive the coming crop.

ADVENTURE.

James E. Wood & Co. have just received a large stock of summer house clothing, lap dusters, saddles, ect., which they are selling at Milwaukee prices.

Dr. M. L. Leach, of Charlevoix, will be at the Jordan River House, at South Arm on Friday of each week. Usually he will arrive on the morning boat from Charlevoix, returning in the afternoon. Persons wishing to consult him should be on hand promptly.

On Thursday of last week, Sheriff Cooper received a dispatch from Petoskey, asking him to arrest an Indian accused of stealing a coat from a passenger on the Fountain City. Late in the evening the arrest was made, the coat recovered, and the Indian released on his promise to be in Charlevoix when the boat comes in on her return trip next Friday. "Honest Indian" that, if he keeps his promise.

Go to the harness shop for all kinds of horse covers and fly nets.

Mr. Balch of Beaconia Co. is again on the war path with Books which are Books—such as Zell's Cyclopedia. SUMMER TRAVEL.

Prospects of a General Stampede for the South.

Already indications are plain that our beautiful North country will have to entertain a greater number of summer guests this season than ever before.

The several railroads are making preparations for the largest flood, and never before has such facilities been furnished for reaching the North as will be this season. The Michigan Central and the Detroit, Lansing and Northern (Railroad) companies, moved by the prospects of travel from the East and along their own lines to the delightful resorts on the western shore, "City Notify," have made arrangements to run through sleepers up to the G. R. & I., from Detroit, every night, one from each road, both the regular G. R. & I. sleepers. On the night trains north on the G. R. & I. will have four sleepers, one to Traverse City and three to Petoskey. The G. R. & I. and the D. L. & N. companies will run Woodruff cars and the Michigan Central will use Wagner coaches. This action, as a straw, shows what travel to this section is likely to be. The through sleepers north on the night runs of the G. R. & I. will be put on the road about the 14th, and there will be four of them, Woodruff cars, two to Traverse City and two to Petoskey as heretofore. Two of the cars are now and very fine, one has already arrived and is in use. The sleepers from the M. C. and the D. L. & N. probably will put on about July 1, and will run until about October 5.

The G. R. & I. Co. will put his steamer on the route from Petoskey to Mackinac on the 21st. The boat will probably run through to Point St. Ignace daily, connecting with the south end of the Detroit, Mackinac, and Marquette road which is now in process of building.

The conflict in Michigan is approaching a crisis. All the various organizations and political prohibitionists are uniting to urge upon the coming Legislature a prohibitory amendment to the State Constitution. Liquor has appeared and thrown down the gauntlet; declares its "business" to be above party or patriotism.

A Michigan court is reported to have decided that a man "too drunk to form an intent" can not steal; that is, may take things but can not be convicted of larceny. This is certainly against the grain of court findings, that a man is answerable at the law for whatever evil conduct (though unintended) his prior voluntary act leads him into. But, if this new "Wolverine" dictum is to become law, why, having exercised the heroic, inflict twice its penalty for the intoxication? This curing drunkenness will certainly be "killing two birds with one stone." Under this ruling do Michigan people with stealable property fool glad or proof that their Legislature denied them prohibition last winter?

Dr. M. L. Leach, of Charlevoix, will be at the Jordan River House, at South Arm on Friday of each week. Usually he will arrive on the morning boat from Charlevoix, returning in the afternoon. Persons wishing to consult him should be on hand promptly.

THE UPPER RIVER.

The Dredge Here and at Work in Opening the Channel.

On Wednesday the tug W. S. Carkin took the dredge and scow in tow, arrived in the harbor. They immediately proceeded to put the machine in order for work, and Saturday the first shovelful of dirt was taken from the upper channel.

Saturday morning the yacht Our Boys took Col. McGlashan, Mr. Jackson, of the Iron Co., and several business men of this place, together with a SENTINEL reporter, to the upper channel. The object of the trip was to confer together as to the best plan of action, and the representatives of the Iron Co., who have the matter in charge, solicited the opinion of all present.

After the conference, a vote was taken, and the following plan adopted: Dig out twenty-four feet wide and fourteen feet deep will be made through the entire length of the channel, and a second and similar cut made from the upper end of the channel to the lower end of the old ship breakwater.

The matter of piling will constitute an after consideration, but will be done in time to protect the channel from filling. Three hundred piles are cut and ready for the work.

The oldest inhabitant does not remember seeing so heavy a rain fall at one time, in this country as that of June 5.

Some people do think they exhibit a great deal of sense by jumping and howling like a pack of hyenas when they pass a school house.

Talk about this being a cold country with the strawberries the first of June. The wild strawberries are abundant in Hayes, and the young Hayesites are now reveling in them.

Two prairie schooners passed through our town last week en route for the neighborhood of the Iron Furnace. They came from Wisconsin last fall and wintered near Cheboygan.

Charlie Arnold has succeeded in capturing some fine bass from Susan Lake lately, one weighing 14 pounds and several others from 3 to 6 pounds each.

D. O. Riley's lot on this sunshine of here having fallen to him under some circumstances that he was never permitted to see a large boat, and waking up his mind to see the show took in an excursion to the Idaho and City of Grand Rapids the other day to his hearts content.

One warm evening not long since Moses Cooper was aroused from the sweet visions of dreamland by some one rapping on the door and crying loudly for Moses to open the door and let him in as he was freezing. Moses ascertained that the fit low had a look of whisky aboard, and crep you could smell the boy's feet who plowed the corn from which it was made, and that he had better attempt to leave under two trips after it, so he gently advised him to roost on a stump in the rays of the moon until he began to thaw a little and then move on toward home.

The little black beasts found in the rice that you purchase for food, if planted in pots make entire house plant, Mrs. Chew has one growing real nicely, planted this spring.

We saw a stock of broom corn at Moses Cooper's the other day nearly three feet high. The seed was taken from the broom and planted in a vace. The question to solve is whether the plant will produce brooms really handier or not.

School will commence at Maple Grove the 21st. Inst., under the instruction of Mrs. E. Gibson.

We need an expounder of the law in Hayes, none of us know so much law, and some don't know enough.

FOURTH OF JULY!

Charlevoix Getting Ready for a Big Time!

Charlevoix people woke up last week to the importance of celebrating the Glorious Fourth, and the result will be a real hot celebration of that day.

About $130 has already been raised, which it is hoped to increase to $150, with which to purchase fire works, and other necessaries, and provide for prizes, etc.

Foot races, boat races, various kinds of sports, and a grand display of fire works will be the order of the day and night.

From Banks.

The freshet that occured last Saturday night and Sunday through this region was the heaviest ever known. The oldest inhabitant remembers nothing like it. It caused considerable damage to the roads and bridges throughout the township. A new mill was undermined by the water and fell, making a complete wreck. Antrim City being founded upon the sand runs very near being swept away. Walton's mill dam was damaged slightly. Considerable damage was done in several places to the growing crops. Mr. Parsons has several acres of crop several feet under water.

There is considerable improvement being made in the way of building this Spring. Mr. Stinson West is building a new barn, also Mr Henry Ingalls. Mr. Knight and Mr. Brush are putting additions to their barns. Several new houses have been built on the State Road in the Plymouth Rock neighborhood.

The Cheboygan County Conference was in session here June 8th and 10th. On the last day, Rev. Leroy Warren gave a very interesting account of the Home Missionary work in the upper Peninsula.

A very pleasing feature of the last day's session was the decoration of the room with plants and flowers mostly from the conservatory of Mrs. Knight.

Mr. Wm Kanagy has returned home from Traverse City, and will remain for a short time.

The Pioneer Sunday School Work of Charlevoix.

At the Robert Raikes celebration of the centennial of the organization of Sunday schools, by the M. E. Sunday-school of this place, a week ago, Dr Leach gave a succinct history of the early Sunday-school work in Charlevoix.

The first Sunday-school was organized by Mr. and Mrs. Dixon, in their own house, a log structure near the shore of Pine Lake, in the fall of 1859, and continued in operation with slight interruption, till some time in the summer of 1860. Mr. and Mrs. Dixon were the only teachers. The school consisted of ten pupils, representing our families. Mrs. Dixon wrote to Mr. N. T. Mason, publisher of the Missionary Herald, Boston, asking if something could not be done to assist the scholars in obtaining a library. Mr. Marvin referred her letter to the young people's missionary society of Park Street Church. The result was a donation of a ten dollar library by that society. It is a commentary, on the want of facilities for transportation and travel in this part of the country at that time, that the library was six months in reaching its destination. In the winter, as all the children lived on the shore of Pine Lake, it was convenient for them to go to Sunday-school on skates, the only drawback was that they soon learned to spend part of Sunday in skating after the school was over for the day. The children were nearly all young, and there was little teaching done except to teach them to read in the testament. Several of them first learned to read in that school.

From 1860 to 1865 there was no Sunday-school. During the summer of the latter year, Mrs. Dixon taught one in the little log schoolhouse, on the Stockman farm, not far from where the Baptist church is now located. This was followed by an interval of a year in which there was no school.

In the spring of 1867, Dr. Leach, who was a temporary resident of the place at that time, at the earnest request of several friends, organized a Sunday-school in what is now the village, though at that time it was a village only on paper. The place of meeting at first was in a fisherman's shanty, nearly on the corner of Main and Bridge streets. The village site was then almost an unbroken forest. The young men cleaned out the shanty, putting the empty barrels and worthless trunk outside, and placing the nets and other valuable articles on crossbillings or poles over head. Windows, brought on purpose from Traverse City, were put in the interstices. Logs of wood were laid upon the floor, on which rough boards were placed for seats. Singing books were ordered from Chicago, and Sunday-school papers enough were subscribed for to supply all the children. The old library donated by the Boston young folks was still in a good state of preservation, and did good service. Nearly all the young ladies and gentlemen living in the vicinity became members of the school, and were organized into a bible class, taught by Dr. Leach. There were sixteen in the class, though some who lived at a distance were necessarily somewhat irregular in attendance. Sixteen children were arranged in classes, and taught by Mrs. Ainslie, Miss Lottie Ainslie, and Mrs. Chamberlain. The latter was not in the place when the school was organized. On her arrival, a part of the children were placed under her care, and Miss Ainslie, herself not much older than some of them, was allowed to go into the bible class. Miss Fannie Dixon was secretary, Joseph Dixon librarian, and Mrs. Ainslie treasurer. For a considerable part of the summer the Sunday school was the only religious meeting in the place.

James A. Garfield

While personal preferences have been strong, and the feeling sometimes bitter in the matter of Presidential candidates, the nomination of the Chicago convention is a name whom every fraction of the party can honestly and considerably support.

It was a surprise to the nation, but so was the nomination of Abraham Lincoln, but the country knows more of Garfield, than it did of Lincoln. Garfield is one of the leading statesmen of the country. No one asks who James A. Garfield is? Everybody knows. He is a positive candidate in the strength of his own individuality and record.

Many men were disappointed that their own favorite candidates were defeated, and many regrets were expressed, but no one lamented that Mr. Garfield was substituted. No one had anything to say against him. If there is any one man, of long public experience, against whom the finger of enmity cannot be pointed, he is the man. He is a noble type of the representative American and of the Republican party. Nine successive times he has been elected to Congress from the Western Reserve of Ohio, the banner Republican district of the State, and last winter he was chosen to succeed Allen G. Thurman in the senate. During all that time he has been in the front rank in this legislation which grew out of the war, and his voice has been silent upon no leading question. He has been one of the pillars of the party, and a tower of strength in the House of Representatives during these latter years of Democratic ascendancy. No one will feel that there is anything lacking in the White House when he enters it. He will fill every niche of the Presidency. In the prime of his manhood, strong in intellect in probity, in determination, in fame and feature, he will make a whole President, and there will be no room for the cry of a strong man.

Mr. Garfield has risen to his present height through his own force of character. He was born a poor boy, at the close of the eight years in Cuyahoga County, Ohio, and educated himself thoroughly, graduating at Williams College, in 1856. He then became a teacher, and soon President of the Western Reserve College. He studied and for a short time practiced, law; but, the war breaking out, he entered the Union army as Colonel of the Forty-second Ohio. Within a year he was promoted to Brigadier General, appointed chief of staff of the Army of the Cumberland, and within another year, became a Major General. Before the close of the war, he was called to succeed Joshua R. Giddings in Congress, and since then his history is almost as familiar as household words. He has been in the van of all the important movements the Republican party has carried forward to success. He is the representative of the best element of that party. He is scholarly, honest, eloquent and earnest, not in, moreover, hallowed by a large amount of common sense. Radical in conviction, his judgment tempers his radicalism with the healthy conservatism which distinguishes the statesman from the partisan.

A very important qualification pertains to Mr. Garfield besides those mentioned,—namely he can be elected. He has no enemies within the party to detract from his strength, and there is not a purer man than he, in or out of politics, in the country. He fears the party from all embarrassment on the score of a defensive campaign. His personal character and record are unassailable. The canvass will be made an aggressive one, and with Garfield at the head, Republicans can attack the enemy's works without the fear of a reverse such as in the case of the pernicious legislation which has characterized the Democratic conduct of affairs in Congress for the last four years, Mr. Garfield has antagonized. Those issues cannot fail to come up and strengthen his candidacy. The outcome of the Chicago convention is indeed fortunate. The tangled web of trouble which looked dangerous three months ago, is cleared. The problem is solved, the discordant elements are harmonized. A load of doubt and fear is lifted off the party, and James A. Garfield will be the next President of the United States.

Sunday, the sermon of the Rev. Tom. Beecher at Elmira was taken by telephone to Williamsport, Pa., 78 miles distant, where the sermon, the prayer, the hymn, the singing and the music was as distinctly heard as in the church itself.

Col. Lafayette Beecher of Nashville, after staying in a few New York hotels as long as he could without paying, his bills, being merely dentists, vanished Tuesday. Fifteen years ago he was worth a quarter of a million, but spent it with the boys.

From Spring Vale.

Spring Vale, June 2d, 1880.

EDITOR OF THE SENTINEL.—There was a teachers' meeting held at the schoolhouse in District No. 5, commonly known as the Hall, in the township of Spring Vale, on Saturday, the 29th of May, at one o'clock P. M.

Horace Pardee, township superintendent, was elected chairman, and A. P. Hoasley secretary.

A motion that the chair appoint a committee on programme prevailed, and supervisor Niles, A. E. Hawley, and Mrs. Pardee were appointed.

The following programme was arranged and adopted: The Benefits of Education, A. E. Hawley; Duties of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Pardee; Local Geography, Mr. Pardee; School Punishments, A. P. Hoasley; How to Secure a Regular Attendance, Miss Cowles; Select Reading, Miss Mary Kent; Our Influence as Teachers Mrs. Mosley; Closing Address, supervisor Niles.

The attendance of teachers throughout the township was very good. The programme was arranged according to the preparation each had made for the meeting. Each opened the discussion of his or her subject; then the subject was open for discussion to all who wished to take part in it. It is to be regretted that there was not a better attendance of parents and school officers, as the remarks of Mr. Hawley, Mrs. Pardee, or supervisor Niles might have been of real benefit to some.

There is to be another meeting held at the same place, on the twenty-sixth day of June, at one o'clock P. M., and parents, school officers, and teachers, from this and adjoining townships, are cordially united to attend and take an active part in the meeting.

IN OPERATION.
The above picture partly shows how Dr Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented.
Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor in a crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's invention washes it in Pyrozolian wholesome particles through pure water, making it a faultless Inhaling Instrument.
CATARRH
Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the sore and inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of high-priced "secret" nostrums.
All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis. It relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It forestalls all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the simplest, radical and complete treatment ever known.
Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have agents in nearly every town; but sufferers who have been deceived by delusive advertisements will please send us a postal card for full description of this treatment. It is a great discovery, to know all about it costs you only a postal card. Give address plainly, and name of paper containing this notice. Address the sole manufacturers,

There were sixteen in the class, though some who lived at a distance were necessarily somewhat irregular in attendance. Sixteen children were arranged in classes, and taught by Mrs. Alcutin, Miss Lottie Aimlie, and Mr. Chamberlain. The latter was not in the place when the school was organized. On her arrival, a part of the children were placed under her care, and Miss Aimlie, herself not much older than some of these, was allowed to go into the bible class. Miss Fannie Dixon was secretary, Joseph Dixon librarian, and Mrs. Aimlie treasurer, for a considerable part of the summer the Sunday school was the only religious meeting in the place.

James A. Garfield

While personal preferences have been strong, and the feeling sometimes bitter in the choice of Presidential candidates, the nomination of the Chicago convention is a man whom every faction of the party can honestly and cordially support.

It was a surprise to the nation, but no one the nomination of Abraham Lincoln, but the country knows more of Garfield, than it did of Lincoln. Garfield is one of the leading statesmen of the country. No one asks who James A. Garfield is? Everybody knows. He is a positive candidate in the strength of his own individuality and record.

Many men were disappointed that their own favorite candidates were defeated, and many regrets were expressed; but no one lamented that Mr. Garfield was substituted. No one had anything to say against him. If there is any one man, of long public experience, against whom the finger of calumny cannot be pointed, he is the man. He is a noble type of the representative American and of the Republican party. Nine successive times he has been elected to Congress from the Western Reserve of Ohio. Our honest Republican district of the State, and last winter he was chosen to succeed Allen G. Thurman in the senate. During all that time he has been in the front rank in that legislation which grew out of the war; and his voice has been silent upon no leading questions. He has been one of the pillars of the party, and a tower of strength in the House of Representatives during those latter years of Democratic ascendancy. No one will feel that there is anything lacking in the White House when he enters it. He will fill every niche of the Presidency in the sense of his immortal, strong in intellect, in probity, in determination, in fame and stature, he will make a whole President, and there will be no room for the cry of a strong man.

Mr. Garfield has risen to his present height through his own force of character. He was born a poor boy, a little over forty eight years ago in Cuyahoga county, Ohio, and educated himself thoroughly, graduating at Williams College, in 1856. He then became a teacher, and soon President of the Western Reserve College. He studied and he selected one practical law, but the war breaking out, he entered the Union army as Colonel of the Forty-second Ohio. Within a year he was promoted to Brigadier General, appointed chief of staff of the Army of the Cumberland, and within another year, because a Major General. Before the close of the war, he was called to succeed Joshua R. Giddings in Congress, and since then his history is almost as familiar as household words. He has been in the van of all the important movements the Republican party has carried toward to success. He is the representative of the best element of that party. He is scholarly, honest, eloquent and earnest, and is, moreover, ballasted by a large amount of common sense. Radical in conviction, his judgement tempers his radicalism with the healthy conservatism which distinguishes the statesman from the partisan.

A very important qualification pertains to Mr. Garfield besides those mentioned,—namely, he can be elected. He has no enemies within the party to obstruct from his strength, and there is not a purer man than he, in or out of politics, in the country. He fires the party from all embarrassment on the score of a defensive campaign. His personal character and record are unassailable. The canvass will be made an aggressive one, and with Garfield at the head, Republicans can attack the enemy's works without the fear of a counter-attack on our own. The pernicious legislation which has characterized the Democratic conduct of affairs in Congress for the last four years, Mr. Garfield has antagonized. These issues cannot fail to come up and strengthen his candidacy. The outcome of the Chicago convention is indeed for unity. The tangled web of trouble which looked dangerous there, stands cleared. The problem is solved, the discordant elements are harmonized. A load of doubt and fear is lifted off the party, and James A. Garfield will be the next President of the United States.

Sunday, the sermon of the Rev. Tom Beecher at Elmira was taken by telephone to Williamsport, Pa., 76 miles distant, where the sermon, the prayer, the hymn, the singing and the music was as distinctly heard as in the church itself.

Col. Lafayette Beecher of Nashville, after staving in a few New York hotels one hour as he could without paying his bills, being utterly destitute, suicided Tuesday. Fifteen years ago he was worth a quarter of a million, but spent it with the boys.

From Spring Vale.

Spring Vale, June 8d, 1880.

EDITOR OF THE SENTINEL:—There was a teachers' meeting held at the schoolhouse in District No. 5, commonly known as the Hall, in the township of Spring Vale, on Saturday, the 29th of May, at one o'clock P. M.

Horace Pardee, township superintendent, was elected chairman, and A. P. Heasley secretary.

A motion that the chair appoint a committee on programme prevailed, and supervisor Niles, A. E. Hawley, and Mrs. Pardee were appointed.

The following programme was arranged and adopted: The Benefits of Education, A. E. Hawley; Duties of Parents and Teachers, Mrs. Pardee; Local Geography, Mr. Pardee; School Punishments, A. P. Heasley; How to Secure a Regular Attendance, Miss Cowles; Select Reading, Miss Mary Kent; Our Influence as Teachers Mrs. Mosley; Closing Address, supervisor Niles.

The attendance of teachers throughout the township was very good. The programme was arranged according to the preparation each had made for the meeting. Each opened the discussion of his or her subject; then the subject was open for discussion to all who wished to take part in it. It is to be regretted that there was not a better attendance of parents and school officers, as the remarks of Mr. Hawley, Mrs. Pardee, or supervisor Niles, might have been of real benefit to some.

There is to be another meeting held at the same place, on the twenty-sixth day of June, at one o'clock P. M., and parents, school officers, and teachers, from this and adjoining townships, are cordially invited to attend and take an active part in the meeting.

IN OPERATION.
The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented.
Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor in a crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries the vapor from all impurities, separates particles through a pure water, making it a faultless inhaling instrument.
CATARRH
Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the seat of inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of high-priced "secret" nostrums.
All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis, it relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It furnishes all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the cheapest radical and complete treatment ever known.
Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have local agents in nearly every town; but where we have none desired, he delivers one, free, on receipt of $3.00. Send for descriptive circular, DESCRIPTION OF THIS TREATMENT. It is a great discovery, to know all about it, come you only a postal card. Give address plainly, and name of paper containing this notice. Address the sole manufacturers.

Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil
"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Wilson's excellent process."—Dr. Wells.
All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. It is easily and readily digested where all similar preparations are refused by the stomach, and immediately enters into the circulation, acting specifically upon the decaying lungs. The nutritious properties of the oil sustain and build up the system, while the active curative properties of the preparation complete the work of healing.
Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach;
Is free from Unpleasant Taste.
Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.
It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Anæmia, Bronchitis, Emulsion, Coughs, Colds, Hemorrhages and all lung and scrofulous complaints.
As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil is remarkably efficient. In the Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., is strongly recommended. Its purifying power is wonderful in Consumption,—depending as it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.
It acts upon the rational theory of IMMEDIATELY ASSAULTING DISEASE WHERE IT BUILDS UP THE SYSTEM, enabling it to throw off the disease.
It costs no more than ordinary oils—and testimonials during the past seven years prove its superiority.
WILLSON'S CARBOLATED (NORWEGIAN) COD LIVER OIL

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 1st the amendments to the Legislative, Executive, Judicial, and Agricultural Appropriation bills were considered on, and Committees of Conference were appointed. Mr. Vogen, from the Committee on Indian of Yankton from Southern to Northern Indians submitted a report of the majority, which was ordered printed with his minority report. Mr. Windom announced that he would subsequently submit the views of the minority. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was taken up and a number of amendments were disposed of. The Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up and debated in the House, in Committee of the Whole.

In the Senate on the 2d a resolution was submitted by Mr. Pendleton and adopted instructing the Committee on Judiciary to inquire whether sections 1,061 and 1,178, Revision of the Revised Statutes, are authorizing by the Constitution. Mr. Pendleton explained that those sections related to judicial powers and jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Several bills were disposed of and Harbor Appropriation bill was passed. A bill was passed to amend the statutes in relation to the issue of silver certificates. The Sundry Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole and several items referred to Mr. Townshend, providing that all Federal officers shall be paid in gold or silver, was rejected—37 to 25—and a number of other amendments were disposed of. The morning hour was then reached and the bill and amendments to the House, and the next question was on the Deficiency.

The Immediate Transportation bill, amended by the addition of a clause providing that privileges of transportation in bond shall be granted to railroads only on condition that there are not the necessary offices for the appointment of merchandise, and the number of drivers, was passed in the Senate on the 3d in the House it was made the special order for the appointment of a committee to revise the tariff. The House Committee on Ways and Means reported a resolution for the final adjournment of Congress on the 20th, which was agreed to without debate—yeas 155, nays 76. The Deficiency bill was further amended and passed. Mr. Kasson, of the Foreign Relations Committee, submitted a report concerning Mr. Aspinwall's contract for the construction of a railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, which he presented in person. Reports in favor of the Nicaragua Canal bill were also made, while he reported adversely on the Panama bill. The latter was agreed to without debate or division.

In the Senate on the 4th the bill for the relief of settlers on the Des Moines River Indian Military Reservation, Nebraska, was passed.

In the House the Senate bill for disposing of the Fort Harker Military Reservation was passed. The Conference report on the joint resolution to provide for the payment of the electoral vote of the supplement to the Revised Statutes was adopted.

Bonnesile.

The Elm Place Congregational Church in Brooklyn, N. Y., was destroyed by fire on the night of the 1st.

The revenue collected from brewers and dealers in malt liquors for the last fiscal year amounted to $10,779,297, which is $292,-366 more than received from the same source the year preceding. The total income from the internal revenue taxes exceeded by $13,000,000 the year 1875, amounting to $130,468,503.

E. G. Patterson, Assistant Librarian of the Mercantile Library at St. Louis, turned up on the 2d in a Chicago police station, badly, with an ugly hole in his head. He claims that he was assaulted by two men, one night recently, at his own gate, and that when he regained consciousness he found himself down the river in a boat, without oars, as above described.

Twenty horses were burned to death in Fahey's sale and feed stable at St. Louis on the 3d.

Miguel Otero, Vice-President of the New Mexico & Southern Pacific Railroad, has started information that the Navajoes and Utes have combined for the purpose of making war on the whites.

The brewing establishments of the country now number 2,830, which annually consume 25,000,000 bushels of barley and 33,000,000 pounds of hops.

The walls of an unfinished brick building at Minneapolis fell in on the 2d, and five workingmen employed on the structure were seriously injured.

According to the recent report of Mr. James St. Swank, Secretary of the Iron and Steel Association of the United States, the production of pig iron during last year in this country was 3,903,853 tons, by far the largest production in our history. The number of blastfurnaces in operation last year was 697, and forty-four others were in course of construction. The capacity of all when the forty-four are completed will be 6,850,000 tons. The production of steel rails for 1879 is very nearly double what it was in 1876, being 1,085,596 tons for the former year, against 566,000 tons for the latter. It is estimated that over 1,500,000 tons of steel rails will be required this year, and that the capacity of the mills will be enlarged so as to very nearly meet the increased demand.

The Methodist Protestant Conference lately in session at Pittsburgh, Pa., held its final session on the 3d. Rev. W. Baker, D. B. McElroy, S. S. Southerland, Hon. C. W. Butler, J. J. Hollenyle, and F. H. Pierpont were chosen representatives to the Ecumenical Conference, which meets in London in August, 1881.

The Millers' Association, at its session in Cincinnati on the 3d, elected the following officers for the ensuing year: President, George Bain, of St. Louis; Vice-President, Loren Fletcher, of Minneapolis, and Robert Tyson, of Baltimore; Secretary, S. H. Seamans, of Milwaukee.

Herman Lissenheim, a dealer in metals and an importer of metal, New York, failed on the 3d with liabilities of about $2,-500,000. The causes of the collapse are said to have been the heavy decline in the iron markets and the repudiation of importation contracts by customers, who were either unable or unwilling to fulfill their engagements.

Twin Cyclones—excellent vessels—were brought 3,500 passengers to Baltimore on the 4th. The great bulk of them left immediately for the West.

A son of Mr. John G. Thompson, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, was shot and seriously wounded by a fellow-student named Buck, at High-land Falls, N. Y., on the 4th. It appears that Buck and young Thompson, being candidates for admission to West Point, had been attending a preparatory school, where Buck was subjected to a mild form of hazing by the other students, and, becoming enraged at some remarks made by Thompson, broke on revolver and shot him. The young man's condition was quite critical. Buck was arrested.

Charles W. Scofield, a New York Broadway merchant who dealt heavily in iron, has suspended, his failure being attributed to the heavy decline in the prices of iron. The liabilities are placed at about $1,000,000, half of which are secured by mortgages, and the unsecured claims, if he is allowed sufficient time by his creditors that he will be able to pay in full, and states that he has $1,000,000 in Western railroad investments.

St. Louis was visited by a terrible windstorm on the morning of the 4th, which caused damages amounting to some $25,-000, the destruction of one man, and serious injury to a boat's dozen others. One of the injured parties was not expected to live. The steamer was only of a few minutes' duration, but in that time it played havoc with the roofs of several buildings and with trees and railroad cars. The wood work of the big bridge was slightly damaged.

Personal and Political.

Sherrard Clemens, for thirteen years a member of Congress from Virginia, recently died in St. Louis, a pauper.

Mrs. Christianey has been given $1,000 per month alimony and $20 counsel fees, pending the consideration of her divorce suit.

At the Female Suffragist Convention at Chicago on the 1st Mrs. Lockwood denounced as a crime the refusal of the Chicago Board of Education to employ married women as teachers.

The San Francisco Board of Supervisors have appealed from the decision of the Superior Court of that city sustaining the demurrer to the impeachment proceedings against Mayor Kalloch.

The Maine Greenback State Convention met at Bangor on the 1st, and nominated General B. H. Hallett for Governor. Delegates were chosen to the Chicago convention, who were instructed to work for the nomination of Solon Chase for President. The Democratic State Convention also met in an intelligent hall and ratified the Greenback nominations for State officers. Delegates were chosen to the Cincinnati Convention, and the selection of candidates for Electors was left with the Democratic State Committee.

The Illinois State Prohibition Convention met in Springfield on the 1st, with thirteen delegates in attendance, and adjourned, after a brief session, nor did without making any nominations.

The South Carolina State Democratic Convention met in Columbia on the 1st and selected Bayard delegates-at-large to the Cincinnati Convention.

The South Carolina Democratic State Convention has nominated Mr. Hagood as candidate for Governor and a full set of Bayard Electors.

The Woman-Suffrage Convention in Chicago adopted a short platform on the 2d, the substance of which is that they will not support any party which will not insert a plank in its platform recognizing the rights of women to vote.

The Alabama Democratic Convention held at Montgomery on the 2d renominated the present state officers.

In Executive session on the 2d the United States Senate confirmed the nomination of Horace Maynard as Postmaster-General.

The National Woman's Suffrage Association closed a three days' session at Chicago on the 3d after the Vice-President, Miss Anthony, had read a memorial to be presented to the National Republican Convention asking for a plank to secure the right of suffrage to women.

The United States Senate on the 4th confirmed the President's nomination of James H. Tatnall, of New York, as Minister to Belgium.

Ex-Governor John Wood, of Illinois, died at his home in Quincy on the 4th, aged eighty-two years.

The Associated Democratic State Convention, after a three days' session, on the 4th nominated Thomas Churchill for Governor. Thirty-nine ballots were taken. A full State ticket was nominated.

Foreign.

A Teheran (Persia) telegram of the 1st says Persia had declined to interfere in the Tekke question, and refused the proffered services of the Merv Turcomans.

A Constantinople telegram of the 3d says 950 persons had died in the provinces of Kurdistan and Armenia of starvation. It was thought that 10,000 persons would have to be supported for the next two months, if they were to be kept alive.

An Ottawa (Ont.) boy of sixteen recently eloped with two girls and married one of them at Utica, N. Y. Another lad was to have gone along and made the other girl his wife, but, for some reason, he missed the train. The girls were fourteen years old.

When the passengers on the steamer Saratoga had all landed at Havana, Cuba, after a recent voyage to that point, the Purser discovered that the specie room had been broken into and $60,000 stolen.

Mr. Jordan, Captain of the Canadian Cricketers, now playing in England, was arrested on the 3d at Leicester, for having deserted from the British Horse Guards eight years ago.

The Nicaraguan Congress has confirmed the concession recently made by the President of that Republic to the American Company for the construction of an interoceanic Ship Canal across the Isthmus.

The Empress Maria, of Russia, died on the morning of the 3d, in St. Petersburg, after a lingering illness. She was the daughter of the late Grand Duke Ludwig II. of Hesse Darmstadt, was born August 8, 1824, and married the Czar Alexander April 28, 1841.

Regis Rochefort, the exiled Parisian editor, was severely wounded on the 3d in a duel on Swiss territory with M. Rochefin, brother-in-law of the French Prefect of Police. They fought with swords, and, after a contest lasting two minutes, Rochefort's weapon slipped from his hand, and the blade of his adversary penetrated his body. The hostile meeting grew out of Rochefort's denunciation of the Prefect of Police, but the measures which that official took to preserve order during the recent Communistic demonstration in Paris.

It was rumored at Montreal, Can., on the 3d that a Chaban Billeastering excellent composed of Americans—[It that year—was on board a steamer the day before. The cargo is said to be composed of 150,000 cartridges, and a large number of rifles.

The suspected filibustering expedition to Cuba which left Montreal a few days ago, has been stopped by the Canadian civil authorities, and the ship on which it embarked brought back into port.

An Insect called the phylloxera has been discovered in the vineyards in several leading districts of France, and has done very great damage. It is estimated that 40,000 acres of the vines will be destroyed before the end of next year. The sinegreens have formed a society for the purpose of obtaining and applying scientific remedies for the destruction of the noxious intruder.

Mr. Vogen, from the Committee on Indian of Yankton from Southern to Northern Indians submitted a report of the majority, which was ordered printed with his minority report. Mr. Windom announced that he would subsequently submit the views of the minority. The River and Harbor Appropriation bill was taken up and a number of amendments were disposed of. The Deficiency Appropriation bill was taken up and debated in the House, in Committee of the Whole.

In the Senate on the 2d a resolution was submitted by Mr. Pendleton and adopted instructing the Committee on Judiciary to inquire whether sections 1,061 and 1,178, Revision of the Revised Statutes, are authorizing by the Constitution. Mr. Pendleton explained that those sections related to judicial powers and jurisdiction of the Supreme Court. Several bills were disposed of and Harbor Appropriation bill was passed. A bill was passed to amend the statutes in relation to the issue of silver certificates. The Sundry Appropriation bill was taken up in Committee of the Whole and several items referred to Mr. Townshend, providing that all Federal officers shall be paid in gold or silver, was rejected—37 to 25—and a number of other amendments were disposed of. The morning hour was then reached and the bill and amendments to the House, and the next question was on the Deficiency.

The Immediate Transportation bill, amended by the addition of a clause providing that privileges of transportation in bond shall be granted to railroads only on condition that there are not the necessary offices for the appointment of merchandise, and the number of drivers, was passed in the Senate on the 3d in the House it was made the special order for the appointment of a committee to revise the tariff. The House Committee on Ways and Means reported a resolution for the final adjournment of Congress on the 20th, which was agreed to without debate—yeas 155, nays 76. The Deficiency bill was further amended and passed. Mr. Kasson, of the Foreign Relations Committee, submitted a report concerning Mr. Aspinwall's contract for the construction of a railroad across the Isthmus of Panama, which he presented in person. Reports in favor of the Nicaragua Canal bill were also made, while he reported adversely on the Panama bill. The latter was agreed to without debate or division.

In the Senate on the 4th the bill for the relief of settlers on the Des Moines River Indian Military Reservation, Nebraska, was passed.

In the House the Senate bill for disposing of the Fort Harker Military Reservation was passed. The Conference report on the joint resolution to provide for the payment of the electoral vote of the supplement to the Revised Statutes was adopted.

According to the recent report of Mr. James St. Swank, Secretary of the Iron and Steel Association of the United States, the production of pig iron during last year in this country was 3,903,853 tons, by far the largest production in our history. The number of blastfurnaces in operation last year was 697, and forty-four others were in course of construction. The capacity of all when the forty-four are completed will be 6,850,000 tons. The production of steel rails for 1879 is very nearly double what it was in 1876, being 1,085,596 tons for the former year, against 566,000 tons for the latter. It is estimated that over 1,500,000 tons of steel rails will be required this year, and that the capacity of the mills will be enlarged so as to very nearly meet the increased demand.

The Methodist Protestant Conference lately in session at Pittsburgh, Pa., held its final session on the 3d. Rev. W. Baker, D. B. McElroy, S. S. Southerland, Hon. C. W. Butler, J. J. Hollenyle, and F. A son of Mr. John G. Thompson, Sergeant-at-Arms of the House of Representatives, was shot and seriously wounded by a fellow-student named Buck, at High-land Falls, N. Y., on the 4th. It appears that Buck and young Thompson, being candidates for admission to West Point, had been attending a preparatory school, where Buck was subjected to a mild form of hazing by the other students, and, becoming enraged at some remarks made by Thompson, broke on revolver and shot him. The young man's condition was quite critical. Buck was arrested.

Charles W. Scofield, a New York Broadway merchant who dealt heavily in iron, has suspended, his failure being attributed to the heavy decline in the prices of iron. The liabilities are placed at about $1,000,000, half of which are secured by mortgages, and the unsecured claims, if he is allowed sufficient time by his creditors that he will be able to pay in full, and states that he has $1,000,000 in Western railroad investments.

St. Louis was visited by a terrible windstorm on the morning of the 4th, which caused damages amounting to some $25,-000, the destruction of one man, and serious injury to a boat's dozen others. One of the injured parties was not expected to live. The steamer was only of a few minutes' duration, but in that time it played havoc with the roofs of several buildings and with trees and railroad cars. The wood work of the big bridge was slightly damaged.

Accounts received on the 4th report Rhodes with a loss of 1,000 Bulgarians had set in. It was impossible to remove him to his home in Geneva.

LATER NEWS.

The United States Senate on the 5th insisted on its amendments to the Legislative, Executive, Judicial, and Agricultural Appropriation bill, and a Committee of Conference was appointed. The House amendments to the bill for the immediate transportation of dutiable goods were concurred in. A message was received from the President replying to a resolution of inquiry, stating that two Superiors of Texans had been removed and successors appointed to him under the authority of the twenty-third section of the Civil Rights act, which authorizes the President of Texans, with the consent of the Senate, to remove and appoint. The Deficiency bill was further considered. Mr. Matthews moved to amend by striking out the Fourth Calvalry District, and W. J. White, First Pennsylvania District, succeeded by J. Hubley Ashton and Donald McLean.

The House convened in the Senate chamber for the purpose of counting the electoral vote. The House returned to its own chamber and the Senate remained to receive the votes of Colorado, which arrived at 12:30 o'clock. The Convention was called to order by Mr. Edmunds, President of the Senate, who announced that the Senate and House of Representatives had met in pursuance of the concurrent resolution of the two Houses, and that the Senate would now proceed to count the votes as shall appear to them. Mr. Edmunds then read the certificate of the votes of Colorado, which were three for Hayes and Wheeler, and one for Tilden and Hendricks. Mr. Edmunds then announced that the votes of Colorado had been counted, and that the whole number of votes cast for President and Vice-President of the United States was 369, of which a majority is 185, and that Rutherford B. Hayes, of the State of Ohio, and William A. Wheeler, of the State of New York, have received 185 votes for President and Vice-President of the United States, and that they have been duly elected President and Vice-President of the United States for the four years commencing with the 4th day of March, 1879. The Convention was then dissolved, and the Senate returned to its own chamber.

The House resumed its consideration of the Deficiency bill. Mr. Hiscock moved to strike out the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the payment of the Geneva award. Mr. Hiscock argued that the payment of the award was not obligatory, and that the United States had already paid more than its share of the award. Mr. Hiscock's motion was agreed to—yeas 127, nays 120. Mr. Hiscock moved to strike out the appropriation of $1,000,000 for the payment of the Halifax

PLATFORM

Of the Republican Party Adopted at the Chicago Convention.

The Republican party, in National convention assembled, at the end of twenty years since the federal government was committed to its charge, submits to the people of the United States this brief report of its administration: It suppressed a rebellion which had armed nearly a million of men to subvert the National authority. It reconstructed the Union of the States with freedom instead of slavery as its corner stone. It transformed four millions of human beings from the likeness of things to the rank of citizens. It relieved Congress from the infamous work of hunting fugitive slaves and charged it to see that slavery does not exist. It has raised the value of our paper currency from thirty-eight per cent. to the par of gold. It has given us a currency absolutely good and legal and equal in every part of our extended country. It has lifted the credit of the country from the point where six per cent. bonds sold at 86, to a point where four per cent. bonds are eagerly sought at a premium. Under its administration railroads have increased from 31,000 in 1860 to more than 82,000 in 1879. Our foreign trade has increased from $700,000,000 to $1,150,000,000 in the same time, and our exports, which were $20,000,000 less than our imports in 1860, were $264,000,000 more than our imports in 1879. Without resorting to loans, it has, since the war closed, defrayed the ordinary expenses of the government, besides the accruing interest in the public debt, and disbursed annually more than thirty millions for soldiers' pensions. It has paid $600,000,000 of the public debt, and by refunding the balance at lower rates, has reduced the amount of interest charge from nearly $151,000,000 to less than $80,000,000. All the industries of the country have revived, and throughout the entire country there is evidence of a returning prosperity, greater than we have ever enjoyed.

On this record the Republican party asks for the continued confidence and support of the people, and this convention submits for their approval the following statements of the principles and purposes which will continue to guide and inspire its efforts:

1. We affirm that the work of the last 20 years has been such as to commend itself to the favor of the nation, and that the history of his costly victories which we have achieved through immense difficulties should be preserved, that the peace and unity should be cherished; that the dissolved union now happily restored should be perpetuated, and that the liberty secured to this generation should be transmitted undiminished to future generations. That the order established and the credit acquired should never be impeached; that the pensions promised should be paid; that the debt, so much reduced, should be extinguished by the full payment of every dollar thereof; that the revenue industries should be further promoted, and that the commerce already so great should be steadily encouraged.

2. The constitution of the United States is a supreme law, and not a mere compact or legal formal out of confederate states. It made a sovereign nation.

Some powers are denied to the nation while others are denied to the states, but the boundary between the powers delegated and those reserved is to be determined by the national and not the state tribunals.

3. The work of popular education is one left to the care of the several states but it is the duty of the national government to aid the work to the end of its constitutional ability. The intelligence of the nation is but the aggregate of the intelligence of the several states, and the destiny of the nation must be guarded, not by the genius of any one state, but by the aggregate genius of all.

4. The constitution wisely forbids Congress to make any law respecting the establishment of religion, but it is idle to hope that the nation can be protected against the influence of sectarianism while each state is exposed to its domination. We therefore recommend that the constitution be so amended as to lay the same prohibition on the Legislature of each State, and to forbid the appropriation of public funds to the support of sectarian schools.

5. We reaffirm the belief avowed in 1876 that the duties levied for the purpose of revenue should so discriminate as to favor American labor; that no further grant of the public domain should be made to any railway or other corporation; that sixteen hundred persons in the states, its twin barbarity polygamy must die in the Territories; that everywhere the protection according to a citizen of American birth must be secured to citizens by adoption; that we esteem it the duty of Congress to develope and improve our water courses and harbors but that further subsidies to private persons or corporations must cease. That the obligations of the republic to the men who preserved its integrity in the day of battle are undiminished by the lapse of fifteen years since their valor, and their perpetual honor is, and shall forever be a grateful privilege and a sacred duty of the American people.

6. Since the duty to regulate immigration, between the United States and foreign nations rests with Congress and its treaty-making powers, the Republican party, regarding the unrestricted immigration of the Chinese as an evil of great magnitude, invoke the exercise of that power to restrain and limit that immigration by the enactment of such just and reasonable provisions as will produce that result.

7. That the purity and patriotism which characterized the earlier career of Rutherford B. Hayes in peace and war, and which guided the thought of our predecessors to him for a Presidential candidate, have consigned to him a place in his career as chief executive, and that history will accord to him the honor which are due to an efficient, just and courageous fulfillment of the public business, and will honor his independence between the people and purposed partisan laws.

We declare that the Democratic party, the habitual sacrificer of patriotism and principle to a supreme and insatiable lust of office and patronage, to obtain possession of the national and state government and the control of place and position, has shown itself in all efforts to promote the party ends to conserve the freedom of suffrage; they have devised fraudulent devices and resorted to them; they have labored to control lawfully elected members of Congress in order to secure at all hazards the vote of a majority of the States in the House of Representatives; they have endeavored to occupy by force and fraud the places of trust given to others by the people of Maine; they have by methods known in principle and abhorrent in practice, set their policy above legislation or bills upon the passage of which the very movement of the government depends; they have crushed the rights of the individuals; have vindicated the principles and sought the favor of rebellion against the nation, and have endeavored to obliterate the sacred memories of the war, and to overcome its inestimable good results, freedom and individual equality.

8. We affirm it to be the purpose of the Republican party to use all legitimate means to restore all the states of the union to the most perfect harmony which may be practicable, and we submit to the practical sensible people of the United States to say whether it would not be dangerous to the dearest interests of our country at this time to surrender the administration of the national government to a party which seeks by overthrow of the existing policy under which we are so prosperous, and thus bring destruction and confusion where there now is order, confidence and hope.

SKIPPED OUT!

One Genial Tramp Regains His Liberty Yesterday Morning!

Frank Town, (so called,) the tramp who some time ago burned the jail, and was re-incarcerated in the county woodhouse, escaped yesterday morning.

At that hour, parties living in the vicinity of the county grounds heard a steady and vigorous pounding, and soon after, the prisoner was seen to crawl out of an aperture in the east end, drop to the adjoining shed, and ramble up the County road at a spirited gait.

People coming to town by that road soon after reported that they did not meet him, and it is supposed that he took to the woods.

The Sheriff was notified, and immediate steps were taken for his recapture. We understand that officer will offer a reward for his recovery.

An examination of the premises showed that the shackles with which he had been fastened, were unlocked. He had pried a plank from the upper part of the building, and escaped through the hole.

He has sworn vengeance upon all who have been connected with his arrest and imprisonment and we warn those to whom this applies to be on their watch for him. He is a desperate wretch, and will do most anything that his base mind suggests.

THE FOURTH.—Charlevoix has thoroughly gone through with the routine of organization on the Fourth of July question, and people coming to Charlevoix on that day may expect to see any former celebration all here eclipsed in every feature. Rev. S. G. Blanchard of Kalamazoo, will deliver the address. Horse and foot races, boat races, and numerous games are in the programme, for all of which prizes are offered. A grand display of fire works and a torch light procession will be the order of the night. The Charlevoix Cornet Band are preparing to furnish music for the occasion.

THE TIMBER RAFT.—Very few of our people have any idea of the magnitude of the job being done on the north side of our harbor by Lyon & Son. The pine and rock elm timber which they got out at the head waters of the Boyne and Jordan last winter lies boomed in the harbor, and a force of fifteen men and a team of horses are busily engaged in making it into a number of drams or rafts for towing through to Quebec. About 2,000 cubic feet of timber will be contained in the raft, representing a value of quite $20,000. About two weeks has already been spent in the work, and it will not be completed before July 15th. About twenty tons of heavy chain is used in securing the rafts, and when completed, the heaviest sea will not break a fastening. The tug Nesgaw will do the towing, and about thirty five days will be occupied in making the passage. The timber is destined for the English markets.

MARINE.—The steamer Nellie Booth broke her shaft Thursday, and is laid up for repairs.

—The scow Lottie Mason has received her spars, and the rigging is being set up. Capt. Blair expects to take a cargo and clear soon after July 4th.

—Commencing yesterday the steamer Clara Belle will run in connection with the Grand Rapids, between Traverse City and Petoskey, going to Petoskey every Tuesday, Thursday, and Saturday; return following days. This gives us a daily steamer both ways, during the summer months.

—The City of Grand Rapids will leave Petoskey hereafter at eight o'clock a. m., on the arrival of the night train.

—The steam ferry boat Fortune, of Detroit, was in on Thursday, on her way home from Milwaukee, where she has been during the soldiers reunion, doing an excursion business. She cleared $4,500 during the week.

—Clearances for the week:

June 15—Supply, 61 cds wood, 40 cds bark, Bartholomew to G. Milwaukee.
—Hunting, 30 cds wood, 24 cds bark, T. Hamlin, to Milwaukee.
—Speedy Morrison, 35 cords bark, owner to Milwaukee.
—John Ruth, 50 cds bark, owner to Mil.
—Ida Ray, 70 cds wood, 1000 cedar posts, P. B. Weston, to Chicago.
16—Bernice Viola, 115 cds wood, Newton to Chi.
—Now in port — Hercules, Sea Gem, Ashtabula, Pride, Blue Belle and Christy.

GREENBACKERS IN COUNCIL.

Meeting of the National Greenback and the National Greenback-Labor Conventions—A Basis of Union Agreed Upon—Tickets and Nominations.

THE National Greenback Convention met at the Exposition building in Chicago at noon on the 9th, and was called to order by F. W. Bowman, Chairman of the National Committee. Rev. E. P. Ingalls, of Des Moines, Iowa, offered prayer. After a short address Mr. Bowman announced the temporary officers of the Convention as follows: Chairman, Gilbert De La Matyr, of Indiana; Secretaries, Charles A. Lotchman, of Massachusetts, and Perry B. Mason, of Kansas. These nominations were approved by the Convention. Mr. De La Matyr took the gavel and delivered a short address, suggesting unity and harmony. The roll was called, and each delegation named a member to serve each on the Committee on Permanent Organization, Rules and Order of Business, Credentials and Resolutions, and one member each for the next National Committee and one Vice President.

The following were the appointments to the National Executive Committee:

Alabama, A. Bibb; Arkansas, vacant; California, Hollis Kramer; Colorado, D. P. Hardy; Connecticut, vacant; Delaware, vacant; Florida, vacant; Georgia, vacant; Illinois, Dr. Jonathan Baldwin; Indiana, Daniel Wolfe; Iowa, Samuel Lapsley; Kansas, J. Phillips; Kentucky, Thomas Bell; Louisiana, W. H. Hire; Maine, Edward S. Stevens; Maryland, G. N. Bilger; Massachusetts, Eugene M. Stephenson; Michigan, Moses W. Field; Minnesota, James Starkey; Mississippi, Reuben Hemphill; Missouri, A. J. Kellogg; Nebraska, L. C. Bose; Nevada, vacant; New Hampshire, vacant; New Jersey, John H. Stow; New York, E. Rosewater; North Carolina, vacant; Ohio, Robert Schneider; Oregon, vacant; Pennsylvania, Peter Simon; Rhode Island, Benjamin S. Dunn; South Carolina, vacant; Tennessee, John W. Jackson; Texas, vacant; Vermont, L. B. Thompson; Virginia, Edward Daniel; West Virginia, A. B. Thompson; Wisconsin, vacant; Territories, vacant; District of Columbia and Territories, vacant.

Considerable discussion arose over a proposition to nominate certain persons which were left hanging by the Republican Convention, but the trouble was settled by the adoption of a motion to lay the whole matter over until a meeting of the National Executive Committee, Mrs. Woman's Suffrage Association, was introduced and read a memorial. Mrs. Mary A. Chandler was added to the Committee on Resolutions. After inviting Susan B. Anthony to address the Convention prevailed. At the conclusion of Miss Anthony's address a memorial was presented from a Committee from the Union Greenback-Labor National Convention lately in session at St. Louis, stating that they were ready to confer with the Convention with a view to uniting all currency, labor and suffrage reformers in the United States for political action. The Committee were invited to seats on the platform. The Convention then adjourned until 7:30 p. m. At that hour the National Executive Committee and the Vice-Presidents were announced, and the Committee on Resolutions. While awaiting the report of the committee on credentials, speeches were made by Messrs. Wallace, Weight and Kearney, and the Convention adjourned until ten o'clock on the morning of the 10th.

The Union Greenback-Labor party Convention, adjourned from St. Louis, May 6th, the 6th of March last, met at Farwell Hall in Chicago on the 9th. Henry Failing called the Convention to order, and Ralph E. Hunt, the Chairman of the St. Louis Convention, took the chair. George W. Brewster, C. H. Jackson and W. A. Nolan were chosen Secretaries. It was voted that all members of Greenback clubs in good standing be admitted as members. On motion a request was sent to the Exposition Convention suggesting the appointment of a Committee of Conference with a view to agreeing upon some terms of union. After some speeches the Convention adjourned to meet at three o'clock p. m. The Committee reassembled at that hour, and, pending a report from the Conference Committee, several speeches were made. At six o'clock p. m. the Conference Committee reported that they had agreed on what they believed to be a just basis of union. It was then half past seven, and the Convention took a recess of one hour. At half-past eight the Convention reassembled. Attended the reception to unite with the Exposition Convention, and adjourned to meet on the morning of the 10th to march in a body to the Exposition Building.

Second Day's Proceedings.

THE National-Greenback Convention reassembled on the morning of the 10th, pursuant to adjournment. The Secretary read telegrams conveying the good wishes of the Socialists of St. Louis, and advice from Indianapolis to organize the cause of woman suffrage. The reading elicited applause.

The Committee on Credentials submitted majority and minority reports, stating that 617 duly accredited delegates were present, and that 344 delegates from other organizations desired admission. The former recommended that the last-named delegates be seated with their respective State delegations, but that the vote of no State should now be increased thereby. The minority report favored the seating of regularly-accredited delegates only. A lengthy debate followed, during which the Farwell-Hall Convention was denounced as a bogus affair. During the discussion Mr. Buchanan, of Indiana, moved that the question of seating the outside delegates be relegated to the several States. The first portion of the majority report was then adopted, and that relating to the seating of irregular delegates dropped—the understanding being that the motion of Mr. Buchanan expressed the sense of the Convention.

The Committee on Permanent Organization submitted a report, recommending Hiram Trevellick as Permanent Chairman and Mr. Litchman, the Temporary secretary, as Permanent Secretary. The report was accepted and Mr. Trevellick took the chair. The Temporary Chairman was thanked for his services, and the Convention took a recess until three o'clock p. m.

At that hour the Convention reassembled. The Committee on Rules submitted a series of rules, the same being a copy of those adopted by the late National Republican Convention. Mr. Brown, of Iowa, moved the adoption of the twelfth rule in the nomination of candidates for President and Vice-President. The motion was lost. Mr. Litchman moved to amend by striking out the clause permitting the delegates present from any State to cast the vote of that State. This, too, was lost.

A memorial from the Socialistic Labor party was read, asking admission as regular delegates, and a motion for their admission resulted affirmatively, and all other outside delegates were by vote refused admission, and a committee of conference with a view to agreeing upon some terms of union. After some speeches the Convention adjourned to meet at three o'clock p. m. The Committee on Resolutions

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JUNE 22, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR GOVERNOR,
Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

Democratic campaign lie No. 1 is out, charging Gen. Garfield with complicity in the salary grab. It is strange that directly in the face and eyes of the records such falsehoods should be concocted. Instead of even wishing at the steal he was an open opponent of it. When the committee of the whole reported to the house and a vote was taken on this proposition to increase the salaries of members of Congress, Gen. Garfield voted against it. Gen. Butler, on March 1, moved to reconsider the motion by which the increase was defeated. A motion was made to lay this on the table, and on this Gen. Garfield voted "aye" with all the opponents of the increase. Mr. Sargent on the same day, moved to make the salary of congressmen $9,500, and on this Gen. Garfield voted "no". Finally the amendment for the increase was defeated in one branch of congress and adopted in the other, Mr. Garfield voting "no" on all occasions. The bill was then sent to a committee of conference between the two houses; the salary matter was only one of a large number of points upon which the senate and house had failed to agree. Gen. Garfield was one of the conferees on the part of the house.

Shortly after the passage of the bill the New York Times, which denounced it and all concerned in its passage, reviewed the conduct of each member and their votes upon the bill, and then classified them as guilty or innocent. Among the "innocent" was Gen. James A. Garfield.

Gen. Garfield was also one of the first to refuse to receive the back pay voted in the bill. He never did receive one dollar of it, as the records of the Treasury department show.

Immediately after the assembling of the new congress December 11, 1873, Gen. Garfield urged upon congress the necessity for its repeal and it was repealed with his aid both by speech and vote.

No other Republican Convention ever cast as many ballots as the last one Fremont and Grant were each nominated on a single ballot. Lincoln was nominated on the third ballot the first time, and on the first ballot the second time. Henry Clay, William Wirt, Martin Van Buren, and Gen. Harrison were nominated on the first ballot. In some of the old Whig and Democratic conventions there were regular seiges. General Scott was nominated on the fifty-third ballot, and Franklin Pierce on the forty-ninth. The Charleston Democratic convention of 1860 had fifty-seven ballots, and adjourned without making a nomination.

The Democratic National Convention will meet at Cincinnati to day to select the victims who are to enjoy the honor in American history of having been defeated by Garfield and Arthur. Only two more states are still to select their delegates to this convention—Kentucky and North Carolina. Notwithstanding all but two have made their choice the situating remains in the dark, no candidate having on the surface anything like the necessary two-thirds to secure a nomination. The following is the New York Herald's estimates of the strength of the various candidates at present. Tilden, 185; Bayard, 113; Seymour, 68; Hancock, 84; Thurman, 67; Randolph, 18; Field, 44; English, 2; Hendricks, 37; Morrison, 8; Chase, 14. Whole number of delegates 738; necessary to choice, 492. Besides the above list of candidates, there is a large and varied herd of dark horses cavorting all over the premises, including David Davis, Gen. Palmer, Gen. McClellan, Payne, Ewing, Pendleton, Potter, etc.

Sold to the End.

[New York Times]

Where were the friends of Grant? Through all stiles excitement they had remained fixed and immovable. They could not desert their best friend and the man by whom they felt that the safety of the Republic and the equality and security of all its inhabitants would be preserved, behind the shelter of a tomb. Like a solid phalanx they maintained their lines to the very end. On the first ballot they had given him 304; on the twenty-ninth after twelve hours work had been directed against them, 305, and on the thirty-sixth and last, while delegate after delegate were deserting their colors and urging them to come with them and consolidate the nominee, they responded with 306 votes for Grant. The pages of our political history contain no record of an act like this. If the votes of which they had been deprived had been restored to them on any of the 36 ballots, their candidate would have been nominated. A glance at the last ballot shows that 20 of these votes were those of the New York delegates who repudiated their obligations; 21 were cast against them by seceders in Pennsylvania; 16 were the creation of the contested seats committee in the Illinois delegation, and 21 were those of men who disobeyed instructions in Alabama, Kentucky, Missouri, South Carolina, Texas, and Virginia. Here were 80 votes which would have raised the total Grant vote on the last ballot to 386, or seven more than the number necessary for a choice.

No Differences.

[Cincinnati Herald]

There is no difference of opinion among Republicans now as to the strong claims of General Grant upon the gratitude of the people for his services in crushing the rebellion, of Secretary Sherman for his successful labors in bringing the finances of the country to their present healthy condition, and of Senator Blaine for his invaluable work in aiding to shape legislation in the interests of freedom and financial honesty. The merits of each can now be freely conceded without seeming to detract from the others, and the devoted adherents of each can ungrudgingly give their full strength to the support of General Garfield, who is the warm friend of all the candidates and their friends, and whose preference to them, not being sought for, and even stoutly fought against by him, excites no ill feeling. Not merely the party but the whole country has reason to be satisfied with the result.

The mud-slingers might as well rest, it does not stick to General Garfield.

The men who stood by General Grant in the late canvass and in the national convention are designated everywhere as the "Old Guard." They will pass into the political history of the time under that title, and they will deserve it. They never lost step in turn only from Grant to the nominee, and when the hottest of the fight comes November next the "Old Guard" will stand like a rock between the Republican party and disaster. General Garfield knowing the men, will have no uneasiness as to that part of the line.

The fact is gratifying to many persons who from conscientious scruples against a third term could not desire to have Grant again made President, that his friends staid by him to the last. They honored their fealty and made a plucky fight. It was not necessary to break their ranks in order that a majority should finally decide the contest, and they kept a firm front throughout the battle. To Grant, himself, the remembrance of it must be an extreme satisfaction. He was not deserted by his party at the supreme crisis. Once a friend, always a friend is a principle of his own nature, and it was made the watchword of his followers. It is a noble sentiment, notwithstanding, in matters of public policy it is often considered wise to sacrifice it to expediency.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Garfield has long been in public life, and always economical, yet to-day he is comparatively a poor man. This is one of the best assurances of his honesty and integrity. The freedom with which charges of corruption are made against our best public men is greatly to our discredit. Frequently they cannot be disproved until after the death of the person assailed. Governor O. P. Morton was assailed by the same character of writers who are now assailing General Garfield during all the closing years of his life, even to the day of his death. But his entire estate, carefully administered in the interest of his family, yielded at his death less than twenty-eight thousand dollars. Such facts answer more positively than any words such malignant assults.

[Post and Tribune]

Senator Conkling has engaged to speak at Cincinnati during the present campaign.

The St. Louis Republican calls Tilden the commanding figure of the political situation. Yes, "a commanding figure" is the very word.

The cry is that Garfield's selected, and if the Boston Advertiser reads the stars aright, next fall it will be the same—Garfield's elected.

The Brooklyn Union says Garfield would carry New York anyway, but with Arthur on the ticket the Empire state will give its electoral vote, as it has four times already, for a Republican President.

The Buffalo Commercial Advertiser says that the nomination of Gen. Arthur adds strength to a very strong ticket and makes New York, where the great battle of the campaign is to be fought, sure for the Republicans.

An anti-Tammany special train carrying 1,500 Democrats leaves New York Thursday for Cincinnati. If this delegation is admitted there will be no need of any others, and all those other delegations can clear out. This will ensure harmony.

The Nashville Banner has overhauled a dozen or so of the Tennessee delegates to Cincinnati, and every man of them declares that he cannot determine how he will vote until after his arrival. There is an evident expectation that more than one ballot will be on tap at that picnic.

The Boston Post, quoting Gov. Foster's remark that Providence is on the side of the Republican party, remarks that the Republican party had now better be getting on the side of Providence. What drunken talk is that? If Providence is on the side of the Republican party, are they not both already on the same side? Answer, enclosing stamp, stating where an interview can be had.

Horatio Seymour is weakening. He says that if he is nominated he can carry New York, but that he is not candidate because he thinks the nomination does not belong to New York. He floored Sam Tilden at the New York convention of 1868 with the remark that the loud call for "Seymour" was terrible; but Sam will see that Seymour is not subjected to another attack like that.

After the long and bitter political contest it is gratifying to see those foremost in the fight rallying as one man around the one banner which the majority unfurled. There was an honest difference of opinion as to the most available man, but Republicans must accept the final choice.

The dispatch that struck Gen. Garfield deepest was one which came unexpectedly from his two boys, Harry and Jamie, who at school at Exeter, N. H., having "just heard the good news, and send our congratulations."

IN OPERATION.
The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented. Other so-called inhaling Inhalers carry the vapor in a crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's invention washes it free from all unwholesome particles, through two reservoirs, making it a faultless Inhaling instrument.
CATARRH
and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs, can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the nose and inflamed surfaces, and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete investment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a bench of high-priced "secret" nostrums.
All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis. It relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and even Consumption, if taken in time. It ruthless all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the cheapest radical and complete treatment ever known.
Druggists sell Dr. Barber's Inhaler. We have local agents in nearly every town; but sufferers who have been deceived by debasing advertisements will please send us a postal card for full description of this treatment. It is a great discovery. Inclosing 50 cents it costs you only a postal card to try these powers, and name of agent containing this circular. Address the sole manufacturers,

Wilson's Carbolated
Cod Liver Oil
"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Willson's excellent process."—Dr. Watt.
All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. It is easily and readily digested where all similar preparations are refused by the stomach, and immediately enters into the circulation, acting specifically upon the drooping lungs, with the curative properties of the oil unmixed and built up into action, while the active curative properties of the preparation complete the work of healing.
Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach.
Is free from Unpleasant Taste.
Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.
It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Asthma, Bronchitis, Emulsion, Coughs, Colds, Hemorrhages and all Lung and consumptive complaints.
As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil is remarkably efficient. In use in Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., is strongly recommended. In purifying powers is wonderful in Consumption—depending as it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.
It acts upon the rational theory of Incompatibles. A diseased Liver wants all the disease it can get, combining in itself more ordinary oils—and testimonials during the past seven years prove its superiority.
WILLSON'S CARBOLATED
(NORWEGIAN) COD LIVER OIL
Is sold only in large wedge-shaped bottles, with seal in capsule with a Codfish. Remember the word "CARBOLATED" when ordering from your druggist, and insist on having the right article.

NEWS OF THE WEEK

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 8th the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was considered, and the amendment striking out the requirement to pay all sums appropriated by law as it stood when it was adopted. An amendment devoting $10,000 of the appropriation for taking the census to expenses of obtaining statistics as to the number of criminals under and by State law was adopted, offered by Messrs. Wallace and Beck, and opposed by Mr. Hoar. Bills were passed on the House—placing the rate of duty on tobacco until a specific rate can be fixed, and adopting a preamble to Mrs. Elizabeth Lyngah, of Iowa, who had stolen a march in the Capitol army during the late war.

The House concurrent resolution for adjournment on the 15th was amended in the Senate on the 9th, by making the date the 16th. Senate amendments concurred in. A conference Committee was appointed on motion of the House agreeing to disagree to the Senate amendment to the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill. The Chinese Restriction bill was reported from the Judiciary Committee without amendment, and passed. The bill was further considered and amended. A resolution was introduced in the House by Mr. Hiss looking to the appointment by the Senate conferees to confer with Great Britain. The Legislative Appropriation bill was reported by the Conference Committee, with instructions to hold to the action of the Senate relating to the salaries of foreign ministers. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was agreed to. The bill appropriates $1,300,000, about $60,000 more than was appropriated by the bill as originally passed by the House. The Conference Committee on the Agricultural Appropriation bill reported that they had agreed to agree, and a new conference was ordered. The Senate amendment to the Agricultural resolution, limiting the date on June 18, was concurred in—yeas 36, nays 26.

In the Senate on the 10th the report of the Conference Committee on the River and Harbor Appropriation bill was adopted. The House bill admitting ex-rebel naturalists free of duty was passed, with an amendment offered by Mr. Kirkwood, remitting duties paid on imported salt in curing meat for exportation. On motion of Mr. Keaton, the House joint resolution authorizing the Secretary of a State or territory to go abroad as a special agent for the Interior Department was passed. The Consular and Diplomatic Appropriation bill was further amended and passed. The Senate bill establishing a Court of Claims was reported from the Judiciary Committee without amendment. Mr. Hoar moved to take up the House bill admitting ex-rebel naturalists free of duty, and pending action the Senate went into executive session. Mr. Hoar moved to take up the House bill admitting ex-rebel naturalists free of duty, and pending action the Senate went into executive session.

About 100,000 persons witnessed the Union Veterans' procession at Milwaukee on the 10th, in which some 40,000 soldiers of the late war participated. The procession was a mile in length. Generals Sheridan and Sheridan, who rode with the procession in a carriage, were enthusiastically cheered along the whole line of march.

Walter Winden, seventeen years old, has confessed to the murder of a solicitor lady of sixty years of age, named Amelia Potter, in Johnson, R. I.

The First National Bank of Newark, N. J., closed on the 11th. A receiver was applied for. The Cashier of the bank left for Europe the previous week, and rumors of irregularities were afloat.

The Boston iron manufacturing firm of Hendricks & Ellis has suspended. The liabilities are placed at $1,000,000. The recent failures in Pennsylvania are said to have affected the standing of the firm.

Four men were hanged in Bexar County, Tex., by a mob on the 10th for cross-fence with cattle.

Charles A. Hill, a well-known lawyer of St. Louis, was arrested by the United States Marshal of that city on the 11th, for counterfeiting bank bills.

E. B. Morris, County Judge of Bayor County, Texas, was shot and killed by Silas white on the bench at the Court-House in Seymour on the 10th, by W. A. Taylor, a saloon-keeper.

A citizens' organization was formed in Leadville on the 11th, 3,000 strong, to protect working miners. They issued a proclamation stating that they were fully determined that work in the mines should be resumed, there being to their certain knowledge enough in any willing to work for the wages offered, provided the intimidation practiced under the auspices of the Miners' Union were stopped. They further stated that, on the first step being taken by any one to interfere with or intimidate miners, the leaders of the union should be held responsible with their lives.

Personal and Political.

General Burnside was on the 8th confirmed United States Senator by the South Dakota Legislature.

On the evening of the 8th the Committee to notify Messrs. Garfield and Arthur of their nomination as President and Vice President, respectively, called upon them and notified them of their selection as the standard-bearers of the Republican party during the ensuing campaign. Each responded briefly, accepting the trust, and promising to notify formally at some future time.

The report of the United States Senate Select Committee to investigate the relations of the Northern Cheyenne Indians from the Sioux reservation to the Indian Territory affirms that the Government is under no obligations with the Cheyennes, and that a policy should be adopted which will allow those Indians that we will to return full justice.

W. M. Springer has been renominated for Congress by the Democrats of the Twelfth Illinois District.

The election in Oregon on the 9th resulted in the choice of M. C. George, the Republican candidate for Congress, by about 1,000 majority over Whitaker, the present member. The Republicans also elect Supreme Court Judges, and will, in all probability, have a majority in both branches of the State Legislature.

About 60,000 persons attended the soldiers' reunion at Milwaukee on the 9th. Generals Grant and Sheridan arrived by the noon train from Chicago, and were enthusiastically welcomed. Many other distinguished soldiers were present. The address of welcome was delivered by Governor Smith.

The Indiana Democratic State Convention met held at Indianapolis on the 9th. Ex-Governor Hendricks was chosen permanent President. After one ballot for candidate for Governor, Franklin Landers receiving 344½, and J. P. Gray 508½, the name of the latter was withdrawn, and Landers was nominated by acclamation. Colonel Gray was then nominated for Lieutenant-Governor. The State ticket was completed by the renomination of the present State officers for Secretary of State, Auditor, Treasurer, Reporter and Clerk of Supreme Court.

The Grand Army of the Republic Convention, held at Dayton, completed its labors on the 9th by electing Hon. Louis Wagner, of Philadelphia, Commander-in-Chief; Gen. Swayne, of Chicago, Vice-Commander; Colonel Bowers, of Nashua, N. H., Junior Vice-Commander; Dr. Hamilton, of Bangor, Me., Surgeon-General, and Rev. Joseph F. Loring, of Worcester, Mass., Chaplain. The next session will be held at Indianapolis in June of next year.

The Illinois Democratic State Convention was held at Springfield on the 10th. The State ticket was completed by the renomination—by acclamation—of Governor Cullom, Secretary of State, ex-Senator Lyman Trumbull; Lieutenant-Governor, Lewis B. Parsons; Secretary of State, John H. Oberly; Auditor, Lewis G. Stevenson; Treasurer, Thomas Butterworth; Attorney-General, Lawrence Harmon. The platform adopted declares against a protective tariff and hold gratis to monopolies, and in favor of Civil-Service Reform and a Constitutional currency of gold and silver and of paper convertible thereon.

Among the nominations sent by President Hayes to the Senate on the 10th were those of ex-Governor Bullock, of Pennsylvania, to be collector of the Philadelphia District; Virgil B. Stockbridge, of the Iowa bar, to be Solicitor of the Treasury; Commissioner of Patents and Robert G. Dyrenforth, of Illinois, as Chief Examiner in the Patent Office.

The United States Senate on the 10th confirmed the nominations of Eugene Schuyler, of New York (Consul-General at Rome), to be Consul-General and Diplomatic Agent of the United States at Bucharest; M. M. Jackson (Consul at Hull), to be Consul-General at Constantinople; and Hiram W. Beach, to be Secretary of the Territory of New Mexico, and A. V. Davis, of Louisiana, to be Superintendent of the Mint at New Orleans.

On the 11th Senators Johnston, Robbins, Davis, Aminony, Kernan, Randolph, Eaton, Walker, White, Ransom, Butler, Hill (Ga.), and Bayard were appointed a committee to represent the United States senate at the centennial celebration of the surrender of Yorktown.

A meeting of the National Democratic Committee has been called to be held at the Grand Hotel in Cincinnati on the 22nd of June. Those engaged in national work will be permitted to remain till the 24th of August.

June 14, the anniversary of the capitulation of the Bastile, has been chosen as the French number of Decoration Day. National fete day, instead of August 15, the Bonaparte holiday.

Earl Kimberley, British Colonial Secretary, has sent instructions to the new High Commissioner and Governor-in-Chief extending British jurisdiction to South Africa, on the pleas of complications between the colonists and the native tribes, and to abstain from interference with the independent tribes.

An attempt to serve processes of ejectment on some tenants residing in Donegal, Ireland, was stubbornly resisted on the 11th. The sheriff's posse were driven off, and the police were then called in, but the tenants still remained, and a force had to be organized, during which many on both sides were wounded, some, it was believed, mortally. The district in which the trouble took place has suffered greatly during the prevailing distress of last winter and spring, and the refusal of the landlord to relet the tenants in question is denounced as heartless and wanton cruelty.

A Philadelphia dispatch of the 11th says that among the recent trip of the schooner Ethel A. Merrier from Jamaica, the vessel's crew was fired into by a schooner manned and armed by Spanish officers. The facts had been reported to the Department of State.

A London dispatch of the 11th announces the failure of Hoskier, Palmer, Stirling & Co., East India merchants, with liabilities of £70,000. The failure was caused by excessive speculation in iron.

Mr. Foster, the American Minister at St. Petersburg, was given an audience to the Emperor on the 11th.

The Khedive of Egypt proposes to grant a Constitution and a Parliament to his people.

A telegram from Yakona, in Alliance, received on the 11th, says that Indian Territory affirms that the Government is under no obligations with the Cheyennes, and that a policy should be adopted which will allow those Indians that we will to return full justice.

The suit of the book "Political Conduct of Famous" has been prohibited at all railroad stations in France at the request of the Orleans Princes.

Colonel Paschiffy, the leader of the new Evangelical movement in Russia, has, at the request of the Emperor, resigned, and the movement has become dormant.

A Late Constantinople dispatch says that the Arab revolt against Turkey has assumed large proportions.

Foreign.

A revolution has broken out in Buenos Ayres, and a state of siege has been declared.

The French Government has finally resolved to call on the Jesuits to leave France on the 30th of June. Those engaged in educational work will be permitted to remain till the 31st of August.

Resolved, That this Convention favor the re-election of the Hon. Lucius Lyon to the United States Senate, and pledge the Democratic party to vote for no candidate who cannot pledge himself to the support of Mr. Lyon.

Resolved, That the Democracy of Michigan are in favor of the election by the people of United States Senators, and instruct the Senators and Representatives in Congress from this State to use their influence to secure the passage of such a law

Greenbacks at Chicago.

That was a curious admixture—and we may say combination—of odds and ends of humanity at the Chicago Convention. Long-haired agitators, theorists and communists, labor dreamers and demagogic orators, and all the kindred grades of the varieties of National Greenback Democracy at Chicago. Only in one or two respects do the assertions seem to be misrepresented. In denouncing the power of one man—in Saturday's Tribune Dudley, and in Saturday's Inter Ocean Sanford, pooh-poohed the idea that Miss Dickey appointed him the temporary chairman of the Convention when they got beyond his control in order to be guided and ruled that control by another. Judge Black, as reported in that Tribune. Hyde and not by Weaver's Committee, was the one who drew up the platform. Weaver and not by Weaver's Committee, was the one who drew up the platform. Hyde was the one who would not allow any woman to make a speech, notwithstanding the urgent request of Belva Lockwood, backed by the weight of a resolution of the Equal Rights Association of the United States. Hyde was the one who, in the opening address of the Convention as its temporary chairman, declared that the cardinal principle of the party was the doctrine of Locke, which he defined to be "the right of labor to the whole product of labor." Hyde was the one who, in the course of which he contended to the Lord

THE VETO OF THE DEPUTY-MARSHALS BILL.

WASHINGTON, June 18.

President Hayes sent the following veto message to the Senate to-day:

After mature consideration of the bill entitled, "An act regulating the pay and appointment of Deputy Marshals," I am constrained to withhold from it my approval, and return it to the Senate, in which it originated, with my objections to its passage.

The laws now in force on the subject of the bill before me are embodied in the following sections of the Revised Statutes:

"SEC. 2427. Whenever an election at which Representatives or Delegates in Congress are to be chosen is held in any city or town of 20,000 inhabitants or upwards, the Marshal for the district in which such city or town is situated shall, on application in writing of at least two citizens residing in such city or town, of any political opinion, appoint, from the political opinion of the applicants, such number of Deputy Marshals, whose duty it shall be, subject to the control of the Circuit Court and the Supervisors of Election, to attend the various voting places in such city or town, for the election of any such Representative or Delegate, as the Supervisors of Election may have registered to vote, in pursuance of the laws and regulations governing registration for the election of such Representative or Delegate, and also as many more Deputy Marshals, of the political opinion of the majority of the Supervisors of Election, as the Supervisors of Election may request, not to exceed in number the number of Deputy Marshals appointed on the application aforesaid. The duties of the Deputy Marshals, when present at the voting places, shall be confined to keeping the peace, and to the immediate execution of the laws relating to the registration of voters and the conduct of elections, and to such duties in relation thereto as the Supervisors of Election may from time to time prescribe, not inconsistent with law. They shall not speak in public or private during the progress of the election, except to answer questions relating to their duties, when requested by the Supervisors of Election, or by the officers of the election, and shall not in any way hinder or delay the voting, except to prevent or correct violations of the laws of the United States. They shall not be armed, nor wear any badge or other indication of their office or appointment, nor carry any warrant or writ, except when actually employed in the service hereby authorized, and in writing, stating briefly the cause and authority for the service required.

"SEC. 2428. The Marshal, and his general Deputies, and such special Deputies as are hereby authorized to be appointed by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2429. Whenever any arrest is made under the preceding section, the person so arrested shall forthwith be brought before a Commissioner, Justice or Court of the United States for the examination of the offense alleged; and upon such examination, if it appears that he acted in good faith in the discharge of his duty or in the case of crime against the laws of the United States, he shall be entitled to full and immediate discharge.

"SEC. 2430. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2431. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2432. The Marshal and his general Deputies shall keep the peace and support and protect the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, preserve order at any place of registration or election, prevent the breaking or entering of any ballot-box, and prevent any violence, breach of the peace or unlawful conduct at any such election, and shall arrest any person engaged therein in violating any law of the United States, and take him forthwith before the Circuit Court, or before any Commissioner, Justice or other officer or Court of the United States arranged by section two hundred and thirty-three for the examination of offenses against the laws of the United States, and prevent the escape of such person during the pendency of such examination, and for such reasonable time thereafter as may be necessary to secure the testimony of witnesses.

"SEC. 2433. Whenever any arrest is made under the preceding section, and the person so arrested shall forthwith be brought before a Commissioner, Justice or Court of the United States for the examination of the offenses alleged; and upon such examination it appears that he acted in good faith in the discharge of his duty or in the case of crime against the laws of the United States, he shall be entitled to full and immediate discharge.

"SEC. 2434. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2435. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2436. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2437. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2438. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2439. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2440. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2441. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2442. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2443. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2444. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2445. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2446. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2447. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2448. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2449. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2450. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2451. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2452. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2453. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2454. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2455. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2456. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

"SEC. 2457. The Marshal or his general Deputies, or such special Deputies as are hereby specially authorized by him in writing, and under his hand and seal, whenever their number or any of them is necessary in executing their duties under the provisions of this subtitle, or whenever any Supervisor of Election requires the assistance of any of them, may be employed to preserve the peace at any place of registration or election within their districts, and to support the Supervisors of Election in the discharge of their duties, and to arrest and take into custody, with or without process, any person who commits or attempts or offers to commit, or who in the view of any Supervisor of Election or Deputy Marshal does any unlawful act to hinder or prevent any qualified voter from freely exercising the right of suffrage, or who commits any offense against the laws of the United States, but no person shall be arrested without process for any offense not committed in the view or presence of the Marshal or his general or special Deputies, or of some one of the Supervisors of Election, or for any offense under the laws of this State, or for the purpose of preventing any person from voting at any election for State officers, unless such arrest is necessary to prevent violence and outrage against the laws of the United States.

WILLARD A. SMITH.
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.
TUESDAY, JUNE 29, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR GOVERNOR,
Col. Wm. B. McCreery.

Wait a Minute, My Friend.

From the Grand Rapids Eagle.

Mr. Democrat, you look as if terribly grieved because, as you say, Gen. Garfield was some how "mixed" up with that credit mobilier business? Just wait a minute. How do you know that? "The newspaper said so?" What newspaper? Oh, your Democratic paper. Well, sir, do you know what the credit mobilier was? No? Then what are you howling about? Of course you think it was something terrible. A veil to hide, perhaps. Perhaps a torpedo. May be an infernal machine, to blow all our navy out of the water. Possibly a kettle of hot potash to drown young Hal in. Now wait, will you not, till you know what the terrible monster with the terrible name was, and perhaps you will not feel so bad about Garfield.

Wait a minute. Can you tell who contrived that credit mobilier? Who was the prime pile attorney that drew up the papers, or advised the chief conspirators as to how to do it, and the morality of such a business as that of the credit mobilier? Do you know? Hark! It was one Samuel J. Tilden. That was fully shown years ago. Did it prevent Gov. Tilden from being elected in 1876? Did you think it hurt him? Now, what is it that so excites your horror at Garfield? Now wait a minute and just look here:

When the credit mobilier was investigated the fact was shown by the testimony of Messrs. Bushnell, Alley, Ames and General Butler, that Samuel J. Tilden was from their organization acting as an attorney for the Union Pacific and the credit mobilier corporations—that he was consulted as to the legality of the latter company and the business—as to the legality of the credit mobilier contracts—that he advised the companies that they were legal and proper, and that he was paid for professional services something like $25,000. Wait a minute, and look at this little extract from the testimony:

Question by Mr. Hoar to Oakes Ames—Were you not informed by the council who drew the contract that this was a violation of law?

Ames—We were informed by counsel whom we consulted that the issuing of this stock (to the credit mobilier) at par ment upon the contract for building the road was in entire compliance with the law.

Question—Who were the council that gave you that advice?

Answer—Mr. Samuel J. Tilden, Mr. Grafton Tyler and Judge Allen.

Question—All of New York?

Answer—All of New York. They were the parties I was most accustomed to the use of.

Now just wait a minute will you, and before you open your mouth again in denunciation of Garfield, who was not connected with the credit mobilier, who was offered and urged to take some stock in it but declined to take it until he could learn more about it, and absolutely refused to take it when he did find out what it was, consider whether you are not in common decency estopped from that by your own act in voting for Tilden who advised that the business was legal and right. If it was right and proper, Garfield had as good a right to purchase stock in it as he would have to invest in a furniture factory. If it was wrong, then you indorsed the wrong when you voted for Tilden. And whether it was right or wrong, Mr. Garfield refused to share in it, while the man to whom you party gave a bigger and more unanimous vote than it ever gave to any other received a large fee from the company. What business have you, after voting for Tilden, to hold against Garfield on account of the credit mobilier?

Gen. Garfield's treatment of his soldiers during the war is said to have been an illustration of kind and considerate. His old servant says of him: "He used to go out among the boys, and if the board was up them needed blankets he'd order me to take those provided for himself and give them to the boys who were without. It was just the same way in other things, too. If a beef was killed the boys had to get their share first. He was the best hearted man you ever saw." Old veterans cherish such recollections, and they will make it felt in November.

President Hinsdale, of Hiram College, says: "I have known General Garfield ever since 1857. I have known him intimately. I have talked with him confidentially. I have more of his letters than any one else but, I except his wife, and I am not sure that I need except her. If General Garfield is not a man of the most absolute integrity, I have no reason to suppose that any such man exists.

A Republican meeting, called to ratify the nominations of the Chicago Convention, at Montgomery, Ala., one evening last week, was forcibly broken up by a Democratic mob. Rotten eggs and pistols were the chief arguments used by these "chivalric" friends of free speech. Thus opens the campaign in the "solid South."

The Republican papers of the United States are just now in complete unison in rejoicing over the happy results of the National Convention. All of them are satisfied, and give the candidates a cordial support. All dissensions are disappearing, "now on to victory!" is the general watchword.

The New York Telegram, which had thought that the old custom house fence would prevent the hearty acceptance of the Chicago ticket by many Republican officials, now states, on the assurance of one high in authority in the New York custom house, that Garfield and Arthur will be heartily supported by the entire force of Republicans there.

Politic and Impolitic.

George C. Gorham is going to California to stump for Garfield.

It is expected that the Connecticut delegation to Cincinnati will stick, as its chairman is Root.

The Wellsville Post thinks that it is possible to elect four Republican representatives in congress from Missouri.

Southern papers very generally agree that the Chicago nominations will be hard ones to defeat, even with nigger-shooting.

The Boston Post comes down very gracefully. It says "it is possible some disgraceful scenes may occur" at the Cincinnati riot.

Thurlow Weed says that the doctrine that a public officer is to be debarred from taking part in politics is an impossible one in this country.

A couple of soldiers at Milwaukee urged Gen. Grant to run on the Democratic ticket, but neither a tear nor a smile broke out on his face in response.

The New York Sun tries as if lighting was slow compared with the celerity with which Seymour would take the nomination if it was handed out to him.

Let them remember at Cincinnati that at Chicago nobody who was nominated for the nomination was nominated, but that the man who was nominated was not nominated.

Horatio Seymour's attitude toward the Democracy just now reminds the Buffalo Express of what the Scotch lassie says in Gilbert's comedy of "Engaged." "I'm a very nice girl, but I cannot be your bride."

The bank at Montgomery, Ala., that forbade Republican evening meetings in front of it because its walls are always covered with broken rotten eggs the next morning, has for president the railroad engineer who always hated to run over a man because it messed up the engine so.

The red-mouthed Kearney, in New York Thursday, said he was there simply to organize more thoroughly the 150,000 Greenbackers in that city. That simple move having been accomplished in a day or two, he intended to leave Saturday to grace the Cincinnati riot with his fragrant presence.

The hayseed Republican remarks that an kicker or scratcher has on unmistakable issue against the nominations of Garfield and Arthur, while actual Greenbackers and Democrats on that ticket to answer their intention to support the Republican nominees.

When a rich old rock-ribbed Democratic Judge from Illinois and Senator Thurman endorse General Garfield as an honest, upright man, the Democratic organs ought to accept the endorsement. Other people will, at all events.

A letter from that eminent Democrat and jurist, Jere Black, is produced, dated in 1873, in which he completely vindicates General Garfield from any wrong in connection with the Credit Mobilier business.

At the hour of Garfield's nomination in Chicago, an American eagle alighted upon his house in Washington and remained there several minutes.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!
CARBOLINE.
A PURIFIED EXTRACT OF PETROLEUM.
The only Article that will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.
WHAT THE WORLD HAS BEEN WANTING FOR CENTURIES.
The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is CARBOLINE, an article prepared from Petroleum, and which affects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and tends to fall out. It also, in a speedy time with such, will restore a luxuriant growth of hair, it also brings back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction to the user. The falling out of the hair, the accumulations of dandruff, and the premature change in color, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which nourish the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the change must begin under the analytic law of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and like many other wonderful discoveries it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results, but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was found Russia that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed, a discernment officer having noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when trimming the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-tainted hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a much finer head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle-plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvellous. The manes and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. These experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the promiscuous and not pray, as no one in a civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our own chemists has overcome the difficulty, and, in a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as cleanly as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments made with the deodorized liquid on the human hair were almost miraculous in their results. A few applications where the hair was thin and falling gave remarkable tone and vigor to the scalp and hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the liquid, so searching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors are made from petroleum, and by some mysterious operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a beautiful lightbrown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent as an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make its presumptuously bald and gray rejoice.
We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that the application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburg Commercial of October 23, 1877.
The article is taking its own steer in the hands of a friends who are using it with most gratifying and encouraging results:
Mr. GERTRUDE F. HAIR, of the Gaiety Opera Troupe writes: "After six weeks' use as directed, as are now my ringlets, lost in fever, CARBOLINE has and is producing a wonderful growth of hair where I had none for years."
N. MCCLARRAN, Sixth Avenue Pharmacy, Pittsburg, Pa., says: "The good effects from the use of CARBOLINE are wonderful, and I am glad to say to suffering humanity as to justify me in recommending it to my most intimate friends."
CARBOLINE Gives the utmost satisfaction as a Hair Restorer.
CARBOLINE Has a magical effect on gray hairs.
CARBOLINE Is free from irritating and poisonous chemicals.
CARBOLINE Is the natural nourishment for the hair.
CARBOLINE Has been indorsed by the highest medical authority.
CARBOLINE Gives weak and sickly hair the gloss and vigor of youth.
CARBOLINE Restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.
CARBOLINE In only a few days—restores the hair naturally.
CARBOLINE Cures all Diseases of the Scalp.
CARBOLINE Keeps the hair moist and the head cool.
CARBOLINE Makes the hair look natural and beautiful.
CARBOLINE Delightful, fragrant, and sure all the time.

From the Grand Rapids Eagle.

Mr. Democrat, you who are so terribly grieved because, as you say, Gen. Garfield was some how "mixed up with that credit mobilier business," just wait a minute. How do you know that? The newspaper said so? What newspaper? Oh, your Democratic paper. Well, sir, do you know what the credit mobilier was? No? Then what are you howling about? Of course you think it was something terrible. A nationalbank, perhaps. Perhaps terrible. May be an infernal machine, or torpedo. May be an infernal machine, to blow all our navy out of the water. Possibly a bottle of hot potash to drown young ladies in. Now wait, will you not, till you know what the terrible monster with the terrible name was, and perhaps you will not feel so lad about Garfield.

Wait a minute. Can you tell who contrived that credit mobilier? Who was the principle attorney that drew up the papers, or advised the chief conspirators as to how to do it, and the morality of such a business? Is that of the credit mobilier? Do you know? Hark! It was one Samuel J. Tilden. That was fifty-seven years ago. Did it prevent you from voting for Tilden in 1876? Did you think it hurt him? It did, what is it that so excites your horror of Garfield? Now wait a minute and just look here.

When the credit mobilier was investigated the fact was shown by the testimony of Messrs. Bushnell, Alley, Ames and General Butler, that Samuel J. Tilden was from their organization acting as an attorney for the Union Pacific and the credit mobilier corporations—that he was consulted as to the legality of the latter company and its business—as to the legality or the credit mobilier contracts—that he advised the companies that they were legal and proper, and that he was paid for professional services something like $25,000. Wait a minute, and look at this little extract from the testimony:

Question by Mr. Hooper to Oakes Ames—Were you not informed by the council who drew the contract that this was a violation of law?

Ames—We were informed by council whom we consulted that the issuing of this stock (to the credit mobilier) was proper upon the contract for building the road was in entire compliance with the law.

Question—Who were the council that gave you that advice?

Answer—Mr. Samuel J. Tilden, Mr. Charles Dewey and Judge Adams.

Question—All of New York?

Answer—All of New York. They were the parties who were known to us in the matter.

Now just wait a minute will you, and before you open your mouth again in denunciation of Garfield, who was not connected with the credit mobilier, who was offered and urged to take some stock in it but declined to take it until he could learn more about it, and absolutely refused to take it when he did find out what it was, consider whether you are not in common decency estopped from that by your own act in voting for Tilden who advised that the business was legal and right. If it was right and proper, Garfield had as good a right to purchase stock in it as he would have to invest in a furniture factory. If it was wrong, then you indorsed the wrong when you voted for Tilden. And whether it was right or wrong, Mr. Garfield refused to share in it, while the man to whom your party gave a bigger and more unanimous vote than it ever gave to any other received a large fee from the company. What business have you, after voting for Tilden, to howl against Garfield on account of the credit mobilier?

Gen. Garfield's treatment of his soldiers during the war is said to have been uniformly kind and considerate. His old servant says of him: "He used to go out among the boys, and if he found any of them needed blankets he'd order me to take those provided for himself and give them to the boys who were without. It was just the same way in other things, too. If a beef was killed the boys had to get their share first. He was the best hearted man you ever saw." Old veterans cherish such recollections, and they will make it felt in November.

President Hinsdale, of Hiram College, says: "I have known General Garfield ever since 1853. I have known him intimately. I have talked with him confidentially. I have more of his letters than any one else but, if I except his wife, and I am not sure that I need except her. If General Garfield is not a man of the most absolute integrity, I have no reason to suppose that any such man exists.

A Republican meeting called to ratify the nominations of the Chicago Convention, at Montgomery, Ala., one evening last week, was forcibly broken up by a Democratic mob. Rotten eggs and pistols were the chief arguments used by those "chivalric" friends of free speech. Thus opens the campaign in the "solid South."

The Republican papers of the United States are just now in complete unison in rejoicing over the happy results of the National Convention. All of them are satisfied, and give the candidates a cordial support. All dissensions are disappearing, "now on to victory" is the general watchword.

The New York Telegram, which had thought that the old custom house feeds would prevent the hearty acceptance of the Chicago ticket by many Republican officials, now states on the assurance of one high in authority in the New York custom house, that Garfield and Arthur will be heartily supported by the entire body of Republicans there.

It is expected that the Connecticut delegation to Cincinnati will stick, as its chairman is Burr.

The Westliche Post thinks that it is possible to elect four Republican representatives in congress from Missouri.

Southern papers very generally agree that the Chicago nominations will be hard ones to defeat, even with nigger-shooting.

The Boston Post comes down very gracefully. It says "it is possible some disgraceful scenes may occur" at the Cincinnati riot.

Thurlow Weed says that the doctrine that a public officer is to be debarred from taking part in politics is an impossible one in this country.

A couple of soldiers at Milwaukee urged Gen. Grant to run on the Democratic ticket, but neither a tear nor a smile broke out on his face in response.

The New York Sun talks as if lightning was slow compared with the celerity with which Seymour would take the nomination if it was handed out to him.

Let them remember at Cincinnati that at Chicago nobody who was mentioned for the nomination was nominated, but that the man who was nominated was not mentioned.

Horatio Seymour's attitude toward the Democracy just now reminds the Buffalo Express of what the South Bend says in Gilbert's comedy of "Engaged." "I'm a very nice girl, but I cannot be your bride."

The reincarnated Kearney, in New York Thursday, said he was there simply to organize more thoroughly the 150,000 Greenbackers in that city. That simple move having been accomplished in a day or two, he intended to leave Saturday to grace the Cincinnati riot with his fragrant presence.

The Lansing Republican remarks that an kicker or scratcher has yet manifested himself against the nominations of Garfield and Arthur, while several Greenbackers and Democrats in that vicinity have avowed their intention to support the Republican nominees.

When such old rock-ribbed Democrats as Judge Jere Black and Senator Thurman endorse General Garfield as an honest, upright man, the Democratic organs ought to accept the endorsement. Other people will, at all events.

A letter from that eminent Democrat and jurist, Jere Black is produced, dated in 1873, in which he completely vindicates General Garfield from any wrong in connection with the Credit Mobilier business.

At the hour of Garfield's nomination in Chicago, an American eagle alighted up on his house in Washington and remained there several minutes.

A WONDERFUL DISCOVERY!

CARBOLINE.

A DEODORIZED EXTRACT OF PETROLEUM.

The only Article that will Restore Hair on Bald Heads.

WHAT THE WORLD HAS BEEN WANTING FOR CENTURIES.

The greatest discovery of our day, so far as a large portion of humanity is concerned, is Carboline, an article derived from Petroleum, and which effects a complete and radical cure in case of baldness, or where the hair, owing to diseases of the scalp, has become thin and leads to fall out. It is also supposed (scientific, and, could it use secure a luxuriant growth of hair, it also keeps back the natural color, and gives the most complete satisfaction in the other. The falling out of the hair, the accumulation of dandruff, and the premature change to gray, are all evidences of a diseased condition of the scalp and the glands which supply the hair. To arrest these causes the article used must possess medical as well as chemical virtues, and the happy result begins and the scalp to be of permanent and lasting benefit. Such an article is CARBOLINE, and like many other wonderful discoveries it is found to consist of elements almost in their natural state. Petroleum oil is the article which is made to work such extraordinary results; but it is after it has been chemically treated and completely deodorized that it is in proper condition for the toilet. It was in fact found that the effect of petroleum upon the hair was first observed a discovery that offers a long noticed that a partially bald-headed servant of his, when greasing the lamps, had a habit of wiping his oil-besmeared hands in his scanty locks, and the result was in a few months a much finer head of black, glossy hair than he ever had before. The oil was tried on horses and cattle that had lost their hair from the cattle plague, and the results were as rapid as they were marvelous. The same and even the tails of horses, which had fallen out, were completely restored in a few weeks. Those experiments were heralded to the world, but the knowledge was practically useless to the prematurely bald and gray, as no one in civilized society could tolerate the use of refined petroleum as a dressing for the hair. But the skill of one of our own chemists has overcome the difficulty, and, by a process known only to himself, he has, after very elaborate and costly experiments, succeeded in deodorizing petroleum, which renders it susceptible of being handled as delightfully as the famous eau de cologne. The experiments made with the deodorized fluid on the human hair were attended with the most gratifying results. A few applications where the hair was thin and falling gave remarkable new and vigorous growth to the hair. Every particle of dandruff disappears on the first or second dressing, and the pores, so searching in its nature, seems to penetrate to the roots at once and set up a radical change from the start. It is well known that the most beautiful colors emanate from petroleum, and by some mysterious operation of nature the use of this article gradually imparts a healthful light-brown color to the hair, which, by continued use, deepens to a black. The color remains permanent for an indefinite length of time, and the change is so gradual that the most intimate friends can scarcely detect its progress. In a word, it is the most wonderful discovery of the age, and well calculated to make the prematurely bald and gray rejoice.

We advise our readers to give it a trial, feeling satisfied that one application will convince them of its wonderful effects.—Pittsburg Commercial of October 23, 1877.

The article is telling its own story in the hands of A. Reynolds who are using it with most gratifying and encouraging results:

Mr. Operator P. Hall, of the states tyera Towne writes: "After six weeks' use am convinced, as are also my comrades, that your CARBOLINE has not a producing a wonderful growth of hair where it had none for years.

N. McCarran, Sixth Avenue Pharmacy, Pittsburg, Pa., says: "The good effects from the use of CARBOLINE are truly wonderful. It is the best article for the hair I ever handled, and cheerfully can be recommending it to my most intimate friends."

CARBOLINE Gives the utmost satisfaction as a Hair Restorer.
CARBOLINE Has a magical effect on gray hairs.
CARBOLINE Is free from irritating and poisonous chemicals.
CARBOLINE Is the natural nourishment for the hair.
CARBOLINE Has been indorsed by the highest medical authority.
CARBOLINE Gives weak and sickly hair the gloss and vigor of youth.
CARBOLINE Restores faded or gray hair to its natural color.
CARBOLINE Is not a dye—restores the hair naturally.
CARBOLINE Cures all Diseases of the Scalp.
CARBOLINE Keeps the hair moist and the head cool.
CARBOLINE Makes the hair look natural and beautiful.
CARBOLINE Delightful, fragrant, and sure at the time.

CARBOLINE

Is now presented to the public without fear or contradiction as the best Hair-restorer and Beautifier of the Hair the world has ever produced.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

XLVIth Congress.

In the Senate on the 15th Mr. Morgan submitted a concurrent resolution that the President of the Senate is not invested by the Constitution of the United States with the right to count the votes of Electors for President and Vice-President of the United States so as to determine what votes shall be received and counted, or what votes shall be rejected, and asked present consideration, but Mr. Ingalls objected, and the resolution went over. The report of the Conference Committee on the Sundry Civil Appropriation bill was agreed to. The House bill providing for a Joint Commission in accordance with the French claims was passed. The President's message vetoing the Chinese Exclusion bill was laid on the table and ordered to be printed. In the House the Conference Reports on the Sundry Civil, the Agricultural and the Legislative Appropriation bills, and a joint resolution establishing rules to Hot Springs Ark., were agreed to. A bill was passed to constitute a Joint Commission for carrying into effect the treaty recently concluded between the United States and the French Republic for the settlement of certain claims of citizens of either country against the other, and signed at Washington, on the 15th of January, 1881, and making an appropriation of $150,000 for the payment of awards, etc.

In the Senate on the 16th House bills were passed—authorizing the Secretary of the Interior to dispose of part of the Fort Dodge military reservation to tractal settlers; amending the Act of March 3d, 1879, relative to locating homestead settlers, by adding a proviso that a settler shall be allowed to make payment in the form of filing in which to commute his homestead upon sale lands. The Senate bill to amend the Senate rule relative to Executive sessions was taken up, on motion of Mr. Logan, but Mr. Withers objected to its being read reading, and it was therefore laid over. Senator Wadleigh and Blair submitted a minority report on the Nomella-tion question, in which they claim that there was no evidence whatever to show that the vacancy was occasioned for political purposes, and that the Republican party had nothing directly or indirectly to do with the matter. The President's veto message was not read, the usual number of copies only for the Vice-President and President pro tem. were ordered, and at noon the Senate very quietly adjourned sine die. In the House the Committee on the Judiciary reported, in affair submitted a unanimous report, that the weight of testimony shows that the anonymous letter was written and sent by H. H. Dibley, Mr. Manning, from the Committee on Elections, then presented a report in favor of unseating W. D. Washburn and admitting Ignatius Donnelly, and Mr. Wickers, from the same committee, submitted another report declaring that Mr. Washburn is not entitled to his seat on account of alleged frauds in connection therewith and recommending that he keep the speaker declared the Forty-sixth Congress adjourned without day.

Domestic.

THE provisions of the bill relative to timber trespassers on public lands, as passed by Congress at the present session, are as follows:

That when any lands of the United States shall have been entered and the Government price paid to full no criminal or proceedings shall prior to the issue of the patent therefor be had or further maintained for any trespass upon or on account of matters taken or done upon such lands, and that no civil suit shall be maintained for any trespass upon or material taken from said lands by any party claiming or claiming title to any timber, stone, coal or other valuable deposits for purposes, in maintaining improvements on land of bona fide settlers, or on account of any material taken by any person without knowledge that such trespass was committed by any person who in good faith has paid the purchase money for such lands and received a patent therefor.

THE Indiana State Republican Convention met at Indianapolis on the 17th and nominated Hon. Albert H. Porter, for Comptroller of the Currency at Washington, for Governor; Hon. Thomas Hanna for Lieutenant-Governor, and a full State ticket. The platform indorses the platform of the National Republican Convention and its nominees; denounces the attempt of Senator Voorhees and the Election Committee to prevent evidence from the Southern States, etc., etc.

AT a meeting of the Metropolitan Baptist Church in San Francisco on the evening of the 16th a preamble and resolutions were adopted strongly indorsing the pastor, Rev. I. S. Kalloch, present Mayor-elect of the city.

DURING the recent session of Congress 1,197 bills and joint resolutions were introduced in the Senate, and 4,288 bills and joint resolutions in the House of Representatives. The numbers introduced during the first (or extra) session were, respectively, 720 and 3,020, making a grand total of 5,961.

THE National Prohibition Convention met at Cleveland on the 17th and nominated Neal Dow, of Maine, and A. H. Thompson, of Ohio, for President and Vice-President.

THE President has pronounced executive clemency Hartnett as Collector of the Port of Philadelphia, his previous appointment not having been acted upon by the Senate.

J. B. HOWELL, proprietor of the Cedar City, of Keokuk, and at one time United States Senator from Iowa, and later one of the Commissioners to Southern Claims, died at his residence at Keokuk on the 17th, in his sixty-fourth year.

SENATOR VANCE, of North Carolina, and Miss Florence Martin were married at the residence of the bride's mother in Louisville, on the evening of the 15th.

THE Colorado Greenback State Convention, held at Denver on the 18th, nominated a full State ticket, headed by Rev. A. J. Chittenden for Governor. Resolutions were adopted indorsing Dennis Kearney.

THE President has appointed John Morton, son of the late Senator Morton, Collector of Customs at San Francisco. Morton had been previously appointed, but was not confirmed.

THE Supreme Court of Indiana has sustained the Constitutional amendments supposed to have been adopted at the April election. One of the principal reasons given for this decision is that the establishing the amendments was defective in not providing for the counting of the votes in the State, so that the courts could determine whether a Constitutional majority of all the electors had voted for them. One of the amendments thus declared void changes the time for holding the State election from October to November, but by the decision Indiana remains on October State. Judges Scott and Niblack dissented from the opinion of the majority.

THE North Carolina Democratic State Convention met at Raleigh on the 18th and nominated a full State ticket, consisting of the present officers, with the exception of State Auditor. For this office General W. P. Roberts was nominated. Delegates to the Cincinnati Convention were also named.

THE Colorado Greenback State Convention, held at Denver on the 18th, nominated a full State ticket, headed by Rev. A. J. Chittenden for Governor. Resolutions were adopted indorsing Dennis Kearney.

THE President has appointed John Morton, son of the late Senator Morton, Collector of Customs at San Francisco. Morton had been previously appointed, but was not confirmed.

THE Supreme Court of Indiana has sustained the Constitutional amendments supposed to have been adopted at the April election. One of the principal reasons given for this decision is that the establishing the amendments was defective in not providing for the counting of the votes in the State, so that the courts could determine whether a Constitutional majority of all the electors had voted for them. One of the amendments thus declared void changes the time for holding the State election from October to November, but by the decision Indiana remains on October State. Judges Scott and Niblack dissented from the opinion of the majority.

THE North Carolina Democratic State Convention met at Raleigh on the 18th and nominated a full State ticket, consisting of the present officers, with the exception of

THE Lansing Republican says the present officials and decisions by the Superintendent of Public Instruction:

1. Section 181, General School laws of 1879, requires that the Township Superintendent shall license "all persons who, in the opinion of the Superintendent, are of good moral character, in respect to moral character, learning and ability to govern and teach a school." It is clearly the duty of the Superintendent to examine applicants for certificates, and no examination are found, in his estimation, qualified in respect to moral character, learning and ability, he furnishes to the township board of the township in which the trade is about to be established, and the people of the township have been warned and are holding valid certificates.

2. Section 138, requiring the payment of an instructor's fee of $1.00 by males and females, at the time of obtaining a certificate, also applies to those who have taught in the school district during the past twelve months, or any other time since its organization. The Monday in September, consequently a fee paid prior to the first Monday in September within twelve months may not have expired since the succeeding examination, at which the teacher who has previously paid the fee within the twelve months named, is entitled to a license is exempt from paying a second time, but subsequent examinations require the payment of not to be produced to the teacher. A teacher obtaining a municipal certificate can be required to pay but one fee, although the certificate is valid for two years. Until the fee is paid a Superintendent should not give certificate. The law does not allow other exemptions than as above specified, and the Superintendent has no discretion in the matter of the payment of the fee. The amount is fixed by law at $1.00 in all cases.

3. A Township Superintendent while acting in the capacity of Superintendent is entitled to $2 per day for his services; but when acting as a member of the Board of Examiners, he is entitled only to the pay of an ordinary member. The law contemplates no pay for services in holding special examinations, and in fact all the services which such applicants have any good and sufficient reason for not presenting themselves at the regular examinations, they can only be required to pay the actual expenses incurred by the Superintendent in attending to the case. If any one should be required to pay the expense of a commissioner, he should not be required to pay more than a single fee, and if two or more applicants for certificates attend at the same time and the Superintendent has occasion to travel to and from the place of examination, the expenses should be divided between them.

4. It is decided that the brigade encampment of Michigan State troops will be located at Kalamazoo, and militiamen of Illinois, Indiana and Wisconsin, who may camp with them, which will doubtless be located at the National Park near that village. It is also thought that the Michigan Guards of Memphis Tenn., will pay the brigade a visit as guests of Company H, Kalamazoo Light Guards.

THE Saginaw stole fifteen logs at Saginaw City and sold them to an ox maker who cannot identify the thief. They be stood upon at Saginaw to get away with logs after the manner.

THE mills at Tawas City and East Tawas are running night and day, and are largely engaged largely in the manufacture of water pipe from pine logs for an eastern firm.

THE Detroit, Lansing & Northern Railroad, Pere Marquette Railroad, in East Saginaw, had his leg crushed by a team at the depot in that city, on the 13th, resulting in death.

NORMAN McLEOD, employed in the lumber camp of Thos. Nestor, was drowned on the 13th in Au Sable River, near Oscoda. The deceased was from near Ottawa, Ont., and twenty-three years old.

11. All legitimate business of the Township Superintendent can be done only when he is present at the regular meetings of the Board of Examiners, and he cannot legally delegate his duties to any other person. He has no authority to appoint a deputy, and no power to act in his absence.

12. To remove the apprehension of some who have feared the destruction of the public revenue would follow the suppression of the Union, the confidence felt in the indestructibility of Governments viewed and at home, when it was known that the mill and revenue from the consumption of legitimate manufactures and commerce have so largely followed the abolition of slavery as to fully supply all loss of the free-labor tariff.

13. We recognize the good providence of Almighty God, who has preserved and prospered us as a Nation, and asking for His spirit to guide us to ultimate success, we will be found in it, relying on His omnipotent arm.

—Alexander Dumas dislikes society.

National Prohibition Platform.

The Prohibition Reform party of the United States, organized in the cause of the people to restore, enforce and perpetuate in the Government the doctrines of the Declaration of Independence, submit for the suffrages of all good citizens the following platform of National principles and measures. In the examination and discussion of the questions specified it has been present and is an accepted truth that alcohol is a poison, whether internal, inward, or distilled, are poisonous to the health's human body, the drinking of which is not only needless, but hurtful, necessarily tending to lower the physical, intellectual and moral tone of the number, set only and intellectual tone of the number, weakening and debasing the manhood, clouding the affections, brutalizing the heart and conscience, and thus directly destroying the sanctity and power of the family relations, and necessarily bringing down large numbers in untimely graves, producing in the children of many who drink a predisposition to intemperance, insanity and various bodily and mental diseases, causing diminution of strength, feebleness of vital action, loss of manhood and premature old age, and producing a vitiated appetite for the drinking of more of them and physical character. Alcoholic drinks are not a necessary article of food, and in the individual.

1. The legalized importation, manufacture and sale of intoxicating drinks misdirects their use and reaches an extensive and destructive sentiment that such use is right; that confers upon it respectability, and perpetuates the above-mentioned evils.

2. The traffic is equally an enemy, prevents the distributor and destroyer of its power, and is therefore a public foe to all that is dear in the sanctity of the husband, depriving the dependent wife and children of the support and comfort which the husband and father is under the most solemn obligations to provide, and which the laws of all civilized States as universal laws existing on the earth to secure and protect. Such was the understanding that the purposes were the designs of the framers of the Constitution of the United States as universal laws existing on the earth to secure and protect. Such was the understanding that its

Chester See, the oldest son of S. M. See, of this place, returned home very sick from Colorado, on Thursday, very unexpectedly to his friends. He was taken down with mountain fever and started at once for home alone and unattended, only by what care he received at the hands of strangers. When taken from the steamer here he was barely able to speak, and was so emaciated that many of his old acquaintances failed to recognize him. He is now doing well however, and thinks he has enough of the far west.

People have different ideas of morality. We once heard of an old communist that served the devil in the livery of Heaven, who turned his aged father into a back woodshed to die, and caused his coffin to be made in an adjoining room before life or sensibility had left the aged patient. When death had relieved the unnatural son of his troublesome burden, he buried his remains in the back yard, in a grave with a foot of water in it. Who collected means among the public for an indigent brother minister, and appropriated them to his own use, and when charged with these offenses, and others, rather than to stand a trial, withdrew from the Church which he had disgraced. This disreputable, canting hypocrite has been around here in times past, and wherever he is known he is despised! His name is a synonym for all that is base, hypocritical, false and mercenary, and his name is never mentioned but with a disgust and loathing that comes from contact with a filthy, living human carrion, reeking with that greatest of all moral turpitudes—hypocrisy! Perhaps Cherious knows him if not, perhaps he has heard of him. The correspondent casts a slur upon our community, and we cite this case to show that perhaps we have a pest in Separdy.

Suicide at Boyne City.—Charlevoix people were startled Wednesday morning by the report brought down by one of the log captains, that Henry Vogel son of Melcenor Vogel, who lives near Boyne City, had committed suicide. Mr. Sampson, a neighbor of Mr. Vogel's, has given us the particulars. It appears that last spring young Vogel was injured by the falling of a tree, from the effects of which he has not fully recovered, and his mind has not seemed to be right, at times. Some time ago, in one of his mentally disturbed conditions, he attempted to get hold of his revolver, which was in the room, but it was taken away. On the day of his death, he was up stairs with his sister Aggie, and they had been singing together, he seeming quite cheerful, and well. His sister went below for a moment, and had but scarcely left the room before the family were startled by the report of a fire-arm. They at once repaired to the room and found him dead upon the floor. He had taken a loaded rifle which had for months been stowed away in a remote part of the room and partially forgotten, and blown the top of his head off. Young Vogel was about twenty one years old.

From the Resort

Wm. H. Everett, one of the old residents of Petoskey, is about starting a hardware store at Point St. Ignace, having already sold out and ordered his stock of goods. Bill started for the Point Sunday morning, to get things in readiness for the reception of his large display of hardware.

A child of Jas. L. Reigel, Springvale township, Charlevoix county, died very suddenly on Monday last. The child was just one year of age at the time of its death. The bereaved parents have the heartfelt sympathy of the entire community in which they live.

Just stop and think a minute. Eleven years ago Charlevoix had a dozen houses, one store and 32x24 school house. Two mails a week, carried by a crippled Indian with a strap over his forehead, correspondence with our friends in "God's country." One small tug constituted our steam fleet and row and sail boats were the only facilities for travel between Charlevoix and up lake points. Small sail boats guided by dint of hard labor, pass from lake Michigan into the harbor, and on the event of a fore cast norther with the old Wonders scraping through over the bar, our people carried on a monster to float a good sized breath of celebration. We looked forward to a government appropriation for the harbor as the acme of our comfort hopes, and for a time with bit little hope. When the state granted sixteen sections of swamp land for the improvement of Pine River, we were in clover. Our days of dragging with a horse and scraper were nearly over, and we rejoiced.

Look upon that picture and then upon this! Have any changes taken place? Can the most ambitious complain of our progress within the past decade? Four mail routes center at Charlevoix, mail is received daily, and but about thirty six hours from Chicago or Detroit. Four tugs do the business of our harbor, and vessels of 300 tons pass out with full cargoes. Two passenger steamers are required to convey travelers between Charlevoix and points on our inland lake. Charlevoix in the place of one store now has sixteen business establishments, all of which are gradually but constantly enlarging their capacity and increasing their trade. From the insignificant nucleus of eleven years ago, we have builded well. We have a prosperous thriving village, well built, neat, supplied with nearly three miles of sidewalks. Eleven years ago a stranger was stared at as we would a kangaroo in a menagerie. Now our steamer guests are numbered by hundreds and our streets are full of life and business from morning until evening. The line of stocks in our harbor, and the constant arrival and departure of vessels and steamers causes no comment. It is but the work of time and progress. Our harbor is already our pride, but a watchful government still continues to improve it, and three years at the most, will find the best harbor between Manitowoc and Chicago. The region about us is developing into as productive a section as Michigan can boast of, and Charlevoix is rapidly extending her commercial influences and improving her marketing facilities.

Where will ten years hence find us? We are confident that our progress will exceed that of the past. The rapid strides with which this entire north country is moving toward the first rank in agricultural and commercial importance, must push Charlevoix ahead as one of its leading commercial centers. It must grow with the demand, and the demand must inevitably grow unimpendous proportions. What is to hinder it? What can hinder it.

The marked importance of this point, in all that contributes to the successful accumulation of products and their transshippage, points Charlevoix out, unmistakable, as a future railroad terminus for either a trunk linear a branch of one of our northern roads. In connection herewise, and is only a matter of a very few years. The introduction of iron, immediate with its many supplementary industries which must follow it, together with the marvelous increase of summer travel which every year brings, will soon demand a railroad, and it will come.

Upon this subject we shall say more hereafter.

DEMOCRATIC NATIONAL CONVENTION.

First Day's Proceedings.

THE National Democratic Convention met in Continuation of the call, pursuant to the call of the National Democratic Committee. At 12:45 p. m. Mr. Barnum, the Chairman of the Committee, called the Convention to order and called upon Rev. C. M. Wendte, of Cincinnati, to invoke the blessing of God upon its deliberations. At the conclusion of the invocation Mr. Barnum announced that he had been instructed to nominate Hon. George Hoadley, of Cincinnati, as Temporary Chairman. This nomination being approved, a committee, consisting of William L. Scott and J. D. McEnery, was appointed to conduct Mr. Hoadley to the platform. The Temporary Chairman was greeted with applause, and, on assuming the chair, delivered a spirited address. Temporary Secretaries were named and the temporary organization declared complete.

Mr. Bodine, of New York, moved that the rules of the last Convention be adopted as the rules of this until otherwise ordered. Carried.

Mr. Martin, of Delaware, moved a call of States for the appointment of members of the Committees on Permanent Organization, Credentials and Resolutions. The resolution was adopted, and the various Committees were announced as follows:

On motion of Mr. Wells, of Connecticut, a resolution was adopted referring all resolutions in relation to the platform to the Committee on Resolutions, without debate.

The Convention then adjourned to meet on the morning of the 23d at ten o'clock.

Second Day's Proceedings.

AT 10:40 on the morning of the 23d the Convention was called to order, and Rev Charles W. Taylor, of Covington (Ky.) clergyman, offered prayer.

The reading of the minutes were dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. Burke (Ind.) offered a resolution declaring that the surviving soldiers of the Mexican War, and the widows and orphan children of soldiers deceased, are entitled to the grateful recognition of the people of the United States, and Congress should cause them to be placed on the pension roll, on the same footing with soldiers of the war of 1861. The Chairman stated that the resolution would, under the order already adopted, go to the Committee on Resolutions.

Mr. Martin (Del.) presented the report of the Committee on Permanent Organization, but action thereon was deferred until the report of the Committee on Credentials should be disposed of.

Mr. Young (Ga.), Chairman of the Committee on Credentials, then submitted his report, recommending the seating of all uncontested delegates; the seating of both the Butler and Abbott delegations from Massachusetts, the two, united, to cast the vote of the State; the denial of seats to the contesting delegation from Pennsylvania, and the denial of admission to the Tammany delegates from New York. Mr. Thomas (Kan.) presented a minority report in relation to the New York delegates, and moved that it be substituted for so much of the majority report as relates to said delegation. Pending which the report was debated at length by Messrs. Miller (N. Y.), Judge James J. Parker (N. Y.), Governor Hubbard (Tex.) and Westbrook (N. Y.), in favor of substituting, and by Messrs. Fellows (N. Y.), Judge Peckham (N. Y.) and Young (Ga.) against, and lost on a call of States, Yeas, 359½; nays, 6c.

New York was entitled from voting at her own request. The roll call recurring on the adoption of the majority report it was adopted by an almost unanimous vote, 4 or 5 not voting.

Mr. Watson (W. Va.) moved that all contesting delegates be admitted to the Convention as spectators. Carried.

The report of the Committee on Permanent Organization, recommending that Governor Stevenson, of Kentucky, be appointed Permanent President of the Convention, with one Vice-President from each State and the usual number of secretaries, was then adopted, and Messrs. McDonald (Ind.), Fowler (N. C.) and O'Connor (Penn.) were appointed a committee to conduct Governor Stevenson to the chair. On assuming the gavel the Chairman delivered a spirited and interesting address of thanks and congratulation.

A delegate from Tennessee moved that a vote of thanks be tendered to Judge Hoadley for the able and impartial manner in which he had presided over the preliminary proceedings of the Convention. The motion prevailed, and Judge Hoadley responded in a pleasant vein.

Mr. Breckinridge (Ky.) moved that the Convention proceed to the nomination of a candidate for President. A delegate from Maryland moved to adjourn. This last motion was almost unanimously voted down. The question recurring on the motion of Mr. Breckinridge, that great exam explained that he contemplated only a call of States for the nomination of candidates, and the motion prevailed. Mr. Preston (Ky.) moved that each person nominating a candidate have ten minutes to that purpose, and this motion also prevailed. The call of States for the nomination of Presidential candidates was then ordered. Mr. John E. McIntosh (Cal.) presented the name of Justice S. B. Field, of California; Mr. George Gray (Del.) presented the name of Thomas F. Bayard, of Delaware; Mr. S. S. Marshall (Ill.) presented the name of William R. Morrison, of Illinois; Senator Voorhees (Ind.) presented the name of Thomas A. Hendricks, of Indiana; Mr. John Mercaway (Minn) presented the name of Allen G. Thurman, of Ohio; Daniel Dougherty (Pa.) presented the name of General W. S. Hancock, of Pennsylvania.

Mr. Hendee (Ohio) moved to adjourn until ten o'clock on the 24th. A call of States was ordered and the motion was voted down by ayes, 630; noes, 255.

Mr. Breckinridge (Ky.) moved that the Convention proceed to ballot for a candidate for President. The motion prevailed, and a ballot was taken with the following result:

Third Day's Proceedings.

THE Convention reassembled at ten o'clock on the morning of the 24th, and thirty minutes after was called to order. Rev. Charles Taylor offered prayer.

Mr. Peckham (N. Y.) announced that a letter had been received from Mr. Tilden renouncing all claims upon the Convention for a nomination. Mr. Peckham further said that New York would therefore ward support Samuel J. Randall. A motion to read Mr. Tilden's letter was lost.

Mr. Thomas (Ky.) offered a resolution declaring it unconstitutional to deprive any citizen of the right of suffrage.

The roll call then proceeded for the second ballot. Alabama cast 11 votes for Hancock, California followed with 2 for Hancock; Illinois cast her 42 votes for Hancock; Louisiana, Maine and Michigan followed with their votes for Hancock, New York cast 70 votes for Hancock; Ohio, 44 votes for Thurman; New Jersey, 18 votes for Hancock before the vote was announced Wyoming added per mission to change his vote to Hancock, and there were afterward changes announced all along the line. Although a delegate from New Hampshire moved to make a new call of the States. The motion quickly prevailed, and the ballot resulted as follows:

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JULY 6 1880

FOR PRESIDENT
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR GOVERNOR,
Col. Wm. B. McCreery.
Subject to the approval of the Republican State Convention.

What the Fight Will Be.

The fight this fall will not be waged upon the candidates. Both of them are men whom it will not pay to attack. But the war will be one of principle. It will be the record of the tried and true Republican party against the unfaithful and disloyal Democracy. The party with a record covered with glory, honor and integrity to every principle of human rights against the party which aided the rebellion, and which since its close, has persistently endeavored to block the wheels of government and which has no fixed financial principle. Gen. Hancock, the Union Soldier, is only to be used to secure the chestnuts. The party which in 1862 called him his comrades "Lincoln Hirelings" now runs him for President. On its record of disloyalty, and stubbornness, the Sentinel predicts the disgraceful defeat of the Democratic party the fall.

Hancock and the Democrats.

The National Democratic Convention yesterday nominated the man for President who was beaten by Seymour in 1868, by Greeley in 1872, and by Tilden in 1876. General Hancock has been standing Democratic candidate for President ever since the defeat of McClellan in 1864. He, in his person, reputation, and fame, represents the issue dropped that forced the nomination of McClellan in 1864, and his nomination now is but a return to the vacillating policy of that campaign.

McClellan was nominated in the face of the violent protest of the Copperheads of Ohio and Maryland, and he received only twenty-one electoral votes out of a total of 233. In the convention of 1880 Hancock fell naturally in the line of succession, but the experience with a military candidate had been so disastrous that the convention, at once ignoring the pioneering policy, went back to first principles and nominated that old Bourbon, Horatio Seymour. The campaign was made on the theory that a military man dangerous to the country. Seymour received 71 electoral votes to 214 for Grant.

In the convention of 1872 Hancock was again mentioned, but the hook was baited with Greeley, an old Republican, and again the Democratic campaign was made on the idea of hostility to a soldier candidate. Mr. Greeley carried six states, giving 66 electoral votes, and Grant received 286 electoral votes.

Encouraged by this experiment the convention of 1876 dredd again to Bourbonism and nominated Tilden. In 1880 the party that tried McClellan in 1864, Seymour in 1868, Greeley in 1872, and in 1876, decides with remarkable unanimity to call out the reserve candidate in the person of General Hancock, and, in so doing, decides to sanction the war cries of the last three campaigns.

The men who opposed Grant because he was a military man are now asked to vote for Hancock, not because he ever framed or supported a Democratic measure, but because he is a noted soldier. The men who raised the cry of no military candidate when Garfield was nominated, are commanded now to watch step, and declare they always wanted a military leader.

The Democratic party, despairing of success under the old flag, at last boldly flaunts the rebel rag, and places under cover of Hancock's military record the platform and representation of the hordes of the party that sold South path forward. Hancock may be the ablest war or peace man in the country, but he is the candidate of the Democratic party, and the platform is his platform. He cannot escape from it if he would, and he will not if he could. He has openly accepted, and will openly defend the work of the Democracy in Congress, under a general contract. Private record may count in the front, and have the confidence in the rear. The party that nominated him is the party that made the fight against the election laws in Congress, is the party that organized the White Leagues and rifle clubs in the South, is the party that killed and shot the friends of the colored people in Alabama, Mississippi, South Carolina, and Louisiana. Hancock may lend himself to the party just as McClellan did, but he cannot drive or control change its purpose, modify its programme, or save it from defeat. His fame as a Union General weighs little against the domination of men like Wade Hampton, Hamburg, Ritter, Ben Hill, and other of that class.

The nomination is a weak one, not because the man is not strong in the south, but because the rank and file of the party never have been in sympathy with him and will not support him. His name will have no talismanic influence among the Hessian hordes in New York City, will not enthuse the old Golden Circlers in Indiana. The fact of his nomination being in the nature of a concession to the strength of the Republican candidate, will aid the Republicans in rallying rolling pends against his party. His personal record, standing in contrast with the record of the party leaders who push him to the front, is in the nature of a signal directing public attention to the principles at stake in the contest. The spectacle of even a republican soldier as General Hancock playing cat to pull the chestnuts of the Democratic monkey out of the fire one cuts the people of the United States, 15 to 19 not accordingly sympathy, or turn their backs from the merits of the contest.

Hancock is simply a new exponent of a party that has acted many excuses for damning the people. He may carry the solid South, simply because the old Confederate leaders will it. But he will lose Indiana and New York, because of opposition to the legislative and other government experiments in the solid Garfield, he has only his military record to present to men who have professed for a term years to be virulently opposed to all military men.

Our case is clear. In General Garfield the public identified with the principles and measures of the Republican party. On the other side in the Democratic Hancock, making a vain endeavor to divert attention from the measures and principles of his party. It is a fatal policy for the people will reject it to the end. Garfield is just the man to put Republican principle to the front in a way to attract attention, while Hancock if put the man to turn public attention away from Democratic policy.—Inter Ocean.

The Republican state convention will be held in the opera house at Jackson, at 11 o'clock, Thursday morning, August 5. The business of the convention will be to nominate presidential electors and a full state ticket.

General Winfield Scott knew it was for the Presidency in 1852, and was beaten so badly that the party he belonged to gave up the ghost and was never heard of again. It now looks a good deal as though the old General's namesake, General Winfield Scott Hancock, might be the instrument in the hands of Providence of serving the Democratic party the same trick in 1880 which the original Winfield served the Whigs in 1852. There is something about the name that suggests dissolution of the party it belongs to.

The Democratic Nomination.

In nominating Gen. Hancock the Democrat have named a respectable candidate. During the war for the Union he was always willing to take hard knocks, and he was popular with his subordinates. He was never equal to great responsibilities, and they were never thrust upon him. He was not a great captain in the sense that Richardson, Thomas, Meade, Sheridan, Sherman and Grant were. He was simply a capable general of division, competent of vast discipline, but jarred with promptness and endurance in execution and with a courage equal to any amount of punishment. This is, of course, an element of strength, and it is also an element of weakness.

Men who stood beside Gen. Hancock in the turmoil of war and the clash of battle, men who perished at his command, will look at the source from whence this nomination is derived and question its motive. The spectacle of a convention, a large majority of which was loyally to the Union cause, nominating a Union general in full of significance which cannot escape public attention and scrutiny. If the match had burned its purposes this nomination might be accepted as an evidence of a returning spirit of fraternity. But while the breath of disloyal utterances and the last echo of treason lie so near, the northern and patriotic people of the country will see in the nomination of a Union general by the Democratic party a purpose to accomplish by treason and deceit that which otherwise they never could secure. The people have not forgotten the solemn pledges made by the Democratic party in 1872, when they nominated Horatio Greeley, that they would "turn out rascals and exact justice to all, of whatever nativity, race or color, and oppose any reopening of the questions settled by the amendments to the constitution," nor have they forgotten how quick and shameefully they have violated those pledges in every one of the eight years that have since elapsed. In the violation of these pledges the people have seen the source of Mr. Greeley's nomination, and by their light they will read the purpose of nominations from Hancock.

It will not be forgotten that Gen. Hancock was educated at West Point, and that being all his service since he has lived in camps or under the shadow of the tents of the drill and drum service of quarters, and that he has had no experience of civil life or the administration of civil affairs, except that acquired during the three years he was in command of Louisiana and Texas. That duty he accomplished with credit, but it was in the capacity of Provost Jobber, and was the opposite of the democratic party of the north and the conditions precisely of the entrance of his district will not be accepted as evidence of administrative capacity, but will be regarded rather as additional proof that he is unequal to the duties of the office, and that the Democratic party would use his name to execute a reign of "pardonation" among ex-rebels of prison and prosperity of the country.

The people will not be deceived by the nomination. They will patronize the purpose and by any vote to the democratic party. They will repudiate it. Here and there of gain. It is not Garfield against Hancock. It is the Republican party against the Democratic party. It is the spirit that saved the Union against the spirit that would have destroyed it. It is American enthroned, disenthralled and advancing against reaction. The is the concern as the people will see it, and in this contest, though they lose the Union soldier, they will vote against the Democratic leader. The nomination will draw nothing from the Republican party.—Detroit Tribune.

SEIDLITINE.
Seidlitz Powders. As pleasant as a glass of Lemonade. A perfect Aid to Digestion.

LAXATINE.
Laxative Lozenges for Regulating the Bowels. Prevent and Cure Constipation. 25 cents per box. At Drug Stores.

FROM Rev. Dr. Thomas, Pastor of the Church of the Messiah, Detroit, Mich.: "My wife was dangerously ill and entirely prostrated from Chills and Fever. Quinine had failed to break the disease when other physicians tried their skill. Dr. Case, who had tried Theroline on a Texas, gave me a trial of it, which was done, resulting in his complete recovery within a few days."

DOCUTA CAPSULETS.
Cure constipation, correct Kidney Complaints, and Diseases of the Urinary Organs. Regulate the Liver. They will cure any disease in a very few days. Put up in pocket vials, with full directions, and can be carried safely in the vest pocket. Capsules large size, 25 cents per vial. Sold by druggists, or sent by mail, postage free, on receipt of price by DUNDAS DICK & CO., 36 Wooster Street, New York. Circulars free.

DR. BARBER'S INHALER
IN OPERATION.
The above picture partly shows how Dr. Barber's Inhaler acts. It is the first and only perfect Inhaler ever invented.
Other vapor-making Inhalers carry the vapor, in crude and objectionable state to the breathing apparatus. Dr. Barber's invention washes it free from all unwholesome particles through pure water making it a painless inhaling instrument.
CATARRH
Bronchitis, Asthma, Hay Fever, and other diseases of the air passages of Nose, Throat and Lungs can be reached only by Inhalation. Dr. Barber's Inhaler carries healing vapor direct to the sore and inflamed surfaces and searches out the very seat of disease. It is a complete treatment in itself—not a quack device for luring the sufferer to buy a batch of "high-priced" secret" nostrums.
All intelligent physicians use and recommend Dr. Barber's Inhaler. It cures Catarrh in all stages. It cures Bronchitis, it relieves and cures Asthma and Hay Fever. It cures Pneumonia, Diphtheria, and often Consumption, if taken in time.
It furnishes
The ONLY TRUE WAY to CURE
all diseases of the breathing apparatus. It is the cheapest, radical and complete treatment ever known.

Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil.
"After all, no remedy is so certain to cure CONSUMPTION as pure Norwegian Cod Liver Oil, Carbolated by Wilson's excellent process."—Dr. Wait.
All consumptive patients are earnestly invited to give Wilson's Carbolated Cod Liver Oil a fair trial. It is pure and readily digested where all similar preparations fail. By the formula, and manufacturing process of the discoverer, it is rendered absolutely odorless and tasteless, thus preventing the nauseating effect upon the digestive organs. The nutritious properties of the oil remain and build up the system, while the active curative properties of the combination eradicate the worst diseases.
Is Retained by the Weakest Stomach.
Is free from Unpleasant Taste.
Arrests Decay. Never gets Rancid.
It cures Consumption, Scrofula, Anæmia, Bronchitis, Rheumatism, Coughs, Colds, Hemorrhages and all lung and constitutional complaints.
As a Blood Purifier the Carbolated Oil remarkable results. In cases of Scrofulous Affections, Rheumatism, &c., it strongly recommended. Its surprising power is wonderful in Consumption, depending on it frequently does, upon Scrofulous taint.
It acts upon the nutritional energy of Immediately Assimilating, and in which it invests up the system, enables it to throw off the disease.
It costs no more than ordinary oils—and testimonials during the past seven years prove its superiority.
WILLSON'S CARBOLATED (NORWEGIAN) COD LIVER OIL
is sold only in large wedge-shaped bottles. Wilson is spelled with a double "L." Remember the word "Carbolated" in ordering from your druggist, and insist on having the right kind.

Foreign.

GREAT EXCITEMENT existed in the lower house of the British Parliament on the 23d over the question of allowing Mr. Bradlaugh to affirm instead of taking the usual oath of office. An amendment was finally adopted, by a vote of 275 to 230, forbidding him either to take the oath or make an affirmation, and the announcement of the result was received with loud demonstrations of applause by the Opposition, who felt that they had won a decided victory over the Government members. Mr. Parnell and about one-fourth of the Home-rule members voted in favor of the slim score of Bradlaugh.

THE Russian troops were reported on the 23d to have been defeated with heavy loss in a recent engagement with the Turcomans.

THE army of the Argentine Republic has made a desperate effort to capture Buenos Ayres, but after three days' fighting was obliged to retreat on the evening of the 23d.

THE Egyptian obelisk, en route for New York, arrived at Gibraltar, in tow of a steamship, on the 23d.

THERE were 290 cases of small-pox in the various hospitals in the city at Dublin on the 23d.

MR. BRADLAUGH appeared at the bar of the British House of Commons on the 23d and insisted on his right to take his seat. Sir Stafford Northcote objected, whereupon Labouchere, who represents Nottingham, the seat from which Bradlaugh also had been elected, moved that he be permitted to address the House, which he accordingly did at some length. He eloquently combated the resolution against him; he said it was unprecedented to condemn any one unheard, and argued against being accused of atheism, he would not forego his opinions or claims to a seat; the House might expel him, but until he had taken his seat it had no jurisdiction; the House could not override the law which permits him to take the oath; if an appeal should be necessary, as he hoped it would not be, it must be made; he asked the House to give him justice, which the Judges would give if appealed to. He was loudly cheered. During been subsequently called to the table and informed by the Speaker of the decision of the House, he was requested to withdraw, which he once respectfully refused to do. A motion was offered by Mr. Northcote and adopted—326 to 38—authorizing the Speaker to enforce Mr. Bradlaugh's withdrawal. Bradlaugh still refusing to obey the orders of the Chair, a motion was adopted—274 to 7—that he be taken into the custody of the Sergeant-at-Arms, which was accordingly done, and he was confined in the clock tower of the building. He was there visited by Mr. Bernal Osborne, who tendered him their sympathy. Mr. Bradlaugh stated to an interviewer that he did not yet contemplate legal proceedings.

ON the motion of Sir Stafford Northcote the English House of Commons on the evening of the 26th ordered the release of Mr. Bradlaugh. Six thousand persons met at Northampton on the night of the 26th to protest against the exclusion of Bradlaugh from the House.

THE German Bundesrath has refused to entertain the proposition to restore the double coin standard.

THE steamer Dessouk, with the Egyptian obelisk on board, sailed from Gibraltar for New York on the 26th.

THE British Hons. of Commons has voted, by 259 ayes to 117 noes, to close all saloons on the Sabbath.

THE appeal of the Tichborne claimant to have the two sentences passed on him for perjury and forgery run concurrent, instead of consecutive, has been denied by the British Court of Appeals.

THE bill legalizing marriage with a deceased wife's sister was defeated on the 26th by the British House of Lords.

THE cholera has made its appearance at several Japanese ports.

LATER NEWS.

THE British Cabinet, after an exciting discussion on the 27th, agreed to support the motion to rescind the resolution unseating Bradlaugh. On that day Bradlaugh addressed a meeting of his constituents at Southampton, numbering 10,000, and after his speech a unanimous vote of confidence was adopted.

On the 26th the United States Treasury held $36,.....(?) in United States bonds to secure National Bank circulation; bonds deposited to secure bank circulation for the week, $815,.....; amount outstanding, $150,000. National Bank circulation outstanding: Currency notes, $.....,810,784; gold notes, $1,567,490; revenue, $20,083,784; customs, $.....,382. National Bank notes received for redemption during the week, $1,.....,000; against $2,546,000 during same week in 1879.

A LONDON dispatch of the 26th says the Conference at Berlin had concluded their labors relating to the rectification of the Greek frontier by handing over to the latter Prevesa, Janina and the neighboring district.

AT Elkhart, Ind., on the 27th George Elliott, a young man of dissipated habits, fired two balls into the head of his sweetheart, Miss Mamie Dorey, because, in the hope of curing his evil tendencies, she had accepted other attentions. The drunken fiend then killed himself. The young lady was mortally wounded.

THERE were two hundred and seventy-four deaths in New York City on the 27th, many of which were caused by excessive heat.

THE American and Irish teams practiced at Ballymena, Ireland, on the 28th, the aggregate score of the American riflemen being 1,.....8, and that of the Irish team 1,.....5. This had affected the betting, and long odds were being placed on the Americans.

A DISPATCH of the 26th says the armystorm had made its appearance at Goshen, Orange County, N. Y.

COUNTERFEIT $100 bills have appeared bearing the names of the National bankers Bank, Boston; the Pittsburgh National Bank; the Mechanics' Bank, New Bedford, Mass.; the Pittsfield National Bank, Massachusetts, and the National Exchange Bank, Baltimore. They are from the same plate, and are said to be scarce in the way of fine engraving. All the bills of the banks above named are to be called in.

THE Spanish authorities are taking the most extraordinary pains to prevent the landing of filibustering expeditions on the Island of Cuba. The recent outrages on American vessels have been ascribed to the laxity of the authorities relative to the filibustering business. It was stated on the 26th that another Cuban insurgent chief had surrendered with thirty-three officers and 264 privates.

A PARIS telegram of the 26th says a number of Magistrates had resigned rather than execute the decrees against the Jesuits and unauthorized congregations.

ON the evening of the 21st at Mrs Alter's, Saline, a pedler, belonging to Northfield town, from a visit to her father's, in company with her only child, seven about four years old, her horse took fright at a passing train, and ran away, striking an oak tree and throwing the mother and child to the ground. A searching party in the night found the body, killing him instantly. Mrs. Kellogg was recovering consciousness, and has not yet recovered her senses. Three of the children were not injured.

THE lumber and shingle mill four miles west of Grand Rapids, with three hundred thousand shingles, were destroyed by fire on the night of the 24th. The mill is owned by D. F. Morris. Loss, $4,000; no insurance. The flames originated in the engine room.

WILLIAM NEWTON, a workman at the Lake Superior mine, Ishpeming, was struck on the falling plank the other afternoon and instantly killed.

THE residence of Levi Averell, five miles west of Grand Rapids, was destroyed by fire on the 26th. Loss, $1,800.

THE New Era stack is 30 feet in height from the harbor surface, 2,400 feet long, with a maximum depth of 20 feet of water. It is supplied with 100 pockets, each of which will hold about 150 tons of ore. The three new wharves ran, it is said, handle 15,000 tons of ore in one day.

THE census takers only make out about thirty thousand inhabitants at Grand Rapids, instead of forty thousand expected. The returns must be whisked separately. Have a small sifter and put on the fire. Mix the eggs together, beat them a minute, and turn into pan. When brown underneath, put into a hot dish, spread half with any preserve you like, cover with the other half, sprinkle with sugar and eat hot.

HOUSES AND FLIES.—Carbolic acid soap is recommended as an excellent preventive against flies. If rubbed on the legs and wrists of horses it will be found to be troubled with flies. It is also claimed that if a couple of handfuls of the common black walnut leaves be put in any room or vessel of water all night, and next morning the water be used for fifteen to twenty minutes, then when cold take a sponge or rag and moisten the eyes, neck, legs, etc., of horses, the flies will give those places a wide berth.

A MASSACHUSETTS farmer who is noted for the excellence of his corn crops says that his practice for years has been to sow clover on a third part of his plow land, and let it grow and remain through the entire season, plowing it under late the next season and planting corn upon it. His experience, he says, teaches him that the clover with its vast amount of roots is fully equal to twenty-five loads of manure per acre, and that the labor saved in the third part and proceeds in the same way.

BAKED TOMATOES.—One-half dozen of large ripe tomatoes, bread crumbs, salt and pepper, two ounces of butter. Wash the tomatoes, and cut them in halves. Remove the pips, and stuff with bread crumbs, seasoned with pepper and salt. In the center of each half put a small piece of butter. Lay on a shallow pan close together. Cover the bottom of the pan with water to prevent scorching. Bake in a slow oven half an hour. The halves may be baked separately, or the tomato covered again after stuffing, and baked whole.

SWEET RELISH.—One pint warm milk, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls yeast. Process of making: Make a sponge with the milk, yeast and enough flour for a thin batter, and let it rise over night. In the morning add the butter, eggs and sugar, previously beaten up well together, the salt and flour enough to make a soft dough. Mold with the hands into balls of uniform size, set close together in a pan and let them rise until very light. After baking, wash the tops over with a clean cloth or brush dipped in molasses and water.

Green Fodder for Short Pasture.

THE most universal crop used for this purpose is fodder corn, and, although some regard it as very poor food, it has a value greater than any other crop yet tried for this purpose. The great objection made to it is its deficiency in albuminoids required to make the casein of the milk, and, from this fact, when fed alone it often reduces the yield of milk. This objection has force, but it may be answered by saying that it is not necessary to feed fodder corn alone—that it is an excellent succulent food, having all the starchy and fatty elements necessary, and that the lack of albuminoids may be supplied by feeding with those troublesome reflections, he heard but two words—"Good-by." with clover, millet, or wheat bran, or to offer her his hand and fortune, and in a small amount of oil-meal. It is not a perfect food in itself, and very few such foods are known. The dairyman should stock for variety in food—but for a single food to be given for all purposes. Corn has the great advantage of being adapted to almost all soils, and of producing an abundant a crop that only a small amount of ground is required for the same cost. It comes into feeding condition at the very time wanted, and remains in condition for some weeks. It is much drouth better than most other crops, and yields more tons of green food to the acre than any other crop. These advantages entitle corn to great consideration as a green crop for late summer and fall feeding.

Millet is an excellent green crop when successful; and to be successful, the soil must be in very fine tilth. A fine, mellow loam is perhaps best for this late seed. A heavy crop of millet stands four to five feet high, with heads three or six inches long. A large crop ought to weigh ten to twelve tons green, or about half as much as a good crop of fodder corn; but it has nearly double the nutriment of fodder corn in the green state, so that a large crop of millet has a great value, whether fed alone or in connection with fodder corn. It is usually sufficiently matured for feeding green in sixty to seventy-five days.

Hungarian grass is also a species of millet, but grows in a much shorter stalk and shorter bunch, but producing a fodder of almost the same quality. Eight to ten tons per acre is a fair crop. It is a good crop. Soil required is much the same as for millet.

Teosinte is also a desirable annual green crop for producing milk—bright for feeding green when the pea begins to form in pods, and is drawn out on a raw of land, and a more even distribution of the double salts (ammonia, potash, phosphates, etc.) in the soil by rain. If the manure is heaped on the field, and gets a heavy rain before spread, the ground under the heaps receives an undue share of the best part of the manure, which not infrequently renders these spots barren for a season or two.

Wool Raising.

SPEAKING of the capacity of the country for the economical production of wool in the sheep town of Coopersville, an aristocratic village in one of the eastern counties of Ohio, Maud's cousin, both physical and moral, led the career that never lavished upon women, and she had been favored with a share of forty thousand dollars. The money could purchase. Her beauty and accomplishments lent made her the idol of a large circle of young men, but not one of whom she had ever given the slightest encouragement. They swarmed under her chamber window on moonlight nights and made the lonely hours hideous with their unfavorable attentions until she was nearly driven to distraction. Her father, a wealthy merchant of the town, had long been solicitous that she should marry, and had followed this plan his young plaints were not molested.

The educated man, other things being equal, makes a better farmer than the uneducated man, just as certainly as a sharp ax will do more execution than a dull one in the same hands.

To clean brushes and sponges use spirits of ammonia and hot water. Wash them well and shake the water out, drying on a coarse towel with the bristles downward. Little or no soap is needed.

To REMOVE ANTS.—Place pieces of raw meat in a cupboard, and after the ants have clustered upon them, plunge into boiling water. Overcome in this for two or three weeks and you will never be entirely free from ants.

MUSTARD THAT WILL KEEP.—Take four ounces of the best mustard, one ounce salt; mix thoroughly, and into it put six ounces of water that has been boiled and allowed to cool. Mix well and keep in small jars well covered.

THOSE are the many people who get poisoned with the poison ivy, while strolling through the woods, that a pound of salts taken then may be of importance. The poison is in the stamens of the vine, and the harmless kind is found in the leaves.

A GENTLEMAN at the head of a large fruit-drying establishment states that he never feeds very thin across the axis, placed in a tray in the sun, and covered with thin muslin (not mosquito-netting). The process of separation closely resembling that of winnowing, by evaporation and bleached by sulphur fumes.

TOILET RULES.—One pint of milk, one-half cup of yeast, one-quarter cake of compressed yeast, two quarts of flour. Heat the milk and butter until the butter is melted; add the yeast, pour the mixture in the middle of the flour, stir a little. If moved at once a m., mold as you go, without rubbing any more flour. Four hours later, or one before baking, mold into rolls. Bake twenty minutes.

SWEET OMELETS.—Two eggs, two tablespoonfuls of cream, two ounces of sifted sugar, grated nutmeg. Beat the yolks of the eggs and cream together. The whites must be whisked separately. Have a small sauté pan on the fire. Mix the eggs together, add the nutmeg and turn into pan. When brown underneath, put into a hot dish, spread half with any preserve you like, cover with the other half, sprinkle with sugar and eat hot.

HOUSES AND FLIES.—Carbolic acid soap is recommended as an excellent preventive against flies. If rubbed on the legs and wrists of horses it will be found to be troubled with flies. It is also claimed that if a couple of handfuls of the common black walnut leaves be put in any vessel of water all night, and next morning the water be used for fifteen to twenty minutes, then when cold take a sponge or rag and moisten the eyes, neck, legs, etc., of horses, the flies will give those places a wide berth.

A MASSACHUSETTS farmer who is noted for the excellence of his corn crops says that his practice for years has been to sow clover on a third part of his plow land, and let it grow and remain through the entire season, plowing it under late the next season and planting corn upon it. His experience, he says, teaches him that the clover with its vast amount of roots is fully equal to twenty-five loads of manure per acre, and that the labor saved in the third part and proceeds in the same way.

BAKED TOMATOES.—One-half dozen of large ripe tomatoes, bread crumbs, salt and pepper, two ounces of butter. Wash the tomatoes, and cut them in halves. Remove the pips, and stuff with bread crumbs, seasoned with pepper and salt. In the center of each half put a small piece of butter. Lay on a shallow pan close together. Cover the bottom of the pan with water to prevent scorching. Bake in a slow oven half an hour. The halves may be baked separately, or the tomato covered again after stuffing, and baked whole.

SWEET RELISH.—One pint warm milk, one-half cup of butter, one cup of sugar, two eggs, one teaspoonful of salt, two teaspoonfuls yeast. Process of making: Make a sponge with the milk, yeast and enough flour for a thin batter, and let it rise over night. In the morning add the butter, eggs and sugar, previously beaten up well together, the salt and flour enough to make a soft dough. Mold with the hands into balls of uniform size, set close together in a pan and let them rise until very light. After baking, wash the tops over with a clean cloth or brush dipped in molasses and water.

HER LAST LETTER.

"In but a line, a moment scrawl,
And little seem the words to say,
Yet must one to you send this scroll—
You promised with me you'd stay:
To-morrow you'll be sad."

Ah, "you'll be sad," the words are few,
And yet they pierce my soul with pain;
Ah, "you'll be sad," the words are true,
They haunt me with prophetic strain:
"To-morrow you'll be sad."

We quarreled and for what? a word,
A frown upon the brow parted the one,
And this to wreck our future joys,
Then came her letter: "Dear, my dear,
To-morrow you'll be sad."

Few words: but mirthful, half in jest,
The last by hand should ever write;
And words formed from angry mood
Fresh with new pain to tear and scald:
"To-morrow you'll be sad."

THE GOLDEN HAIRPIN.

A Romance in the Improved Modern Style.

I.

GEORGE ADOLPHUS CLARENDON was a young man of pleasing presence, whose age was not far from twenty years. His father, a retired merchant of wealth, had given him a good education, and had started him in life with a fair capital. He was a bachelor, and hoped to see his son settled in business and respectably established in a most exemplary manner. He had his eye upon a certain young lady, the daughter of a neighboring merchant, who was considered a most desirable match by all the gossips of the village of Eastland, in Central New York, and had guessed a competitor in Mr. Rockville merely to help him on and hold the most business in abeyance, and steadfastly refused to entertain the idea, though the former had made a livelihood. He conceived himself to be formed of a spunky of clay quite above the ordinary run of mortals, and despised the common drudgery of life. He was a graduate from said college, and could boast a ring-tum-tail degree after his name. He was a stern believer in the doctrine that "the higher walks of life." Old Mr. Clarendon was a stern father, and he determined that if George Adolphus would not sell meat he should be compelled to engage in the distribution of goods and wares up to the 10th of January following, when a better and profitable way should sow a bushel on four acres, so that his landmay be thoroughly shaded.

with so small a sum as eighty-five cents in his pocket? As he walked gloomily along the strange thoroughfare, busy with those troublesome reflections, he heard but two words—"Good-by." It was a man whom he was fast passing. A moment later the front door opened and a slight female figure hurried silently out into the street. And, possibly, to him with a quick, determined tread, was soon out of sight.

IV.

When Maud recovered from the shock which her father's angry words had given her, she immediately determined upon a course of action. She resolved that she would be turned out of doors before she would consent to go to the opera with the swindling rake, who waited for her in the parlor. She called her father back and told him her determination. The result was that the proud young beauty was promptly ejected through the front door before it was who had passed George Adolphus as he wandered on in search of his level.

When Mr. Muggleton had waited for Maud until he was tired and on the point of leaving, Mr. Muller entered the room, and apologizing for the non-appearance of his daughter by say'ng that she had gone to bed with a headache, begged him to come again in a few days, as Maud would then be delighted to see him. He was sure that Mr. Muggleton had no idea of punishing his daughter's disobedience with permanent banishment. He assured him that she would surely go to some of her friends and return in penitence in the morning.

George Adolphus followed swiftly on after the young lady, hastily knocking at the door in his anxiety to overtake her and followed at a little distance, watching her movements with the keenest interest. That Maud was so intent upon some purpose which lay deep hidden in her heart that she did not notice him. The street lamps began to be lighted, but still the resolute girl walked rapidly on. At length a small foot-bridge across a canal was reached. The girl paused. Was her purpose a desperate one? George Adolphus asked himself this question and more than once he felt as he lingered in the shadow-close behind her.

Murmuring something to the effect that the hawing, white crested billows which rolled at her feet would soon quiet her aching heart, George Adolphus. In less than a week he found himself in a perfect fever of excitement. It was known that he was growing rapidly worse, it did seem as if he could not get that hair-pin near enough to his heart. Thought of swallowing it, but changed his mind and had it made into a hair-pin. In another week the excitement attained to complete a mastery over him that he began to write poetry. He could not rest in the house, and was often seen on a sausage the time all seemed to commune with Capital letters and end in a jingle.

Thus the weeks passed wearily by without the slightest intelligence of the movements of the golden hairpin.

VII.

In a brilliantly-lighted ball-room in Coopersville, guest of the gay and admired of all admirers, Maud Muller proceeded to and fro like a fairy goddess. Her wondrous hair and dress partied with old Mr. Muggleton, but she had not forgotten the night whereon she had met with such a terrible destruction, and she secretly longed to know who it was that had saved her from herself. She closely scanned every gentleman that entered the room, as in half frightened expectancy. She had heard of Mr. Clarendon, the young millionaire, but as he had not appeared much in society, she had not met him. Of course she was not curious, for she was a woman, and women are not curious; yet she could not feel easy after learning that Mr. Muggleton's heir was present till she had dignified her with recognition to have him presented.

As George Adolphus advanced, arm in arm with an acquaintance, a perceptible pallor overspread Maud's countenance. Was it caused by the peculiar pin that ornamented his shirt bosom? She tried to convince herself that the pin signified nothing. Perhaps he had picked up the hairpin in the street on that eventful evening she so well remembered. But when she heard his voice she withered like a stricken flower. George Adolphus was puzzled. So were all the by-standers. It was a very singular case indeed, they all said. Presently, however, Maud rallied, as she said George Adolphus were left alone.

"Do you remember me?" she asked faltering'y. "Do you remember having seen me before?"

Suddenly the truth flashed upon George Adolphus like a National Convention bulletin.

"Yes," he replied, making an effort to control himself. "I remember a former meeting with you very well."

"I think papa would give his consent," said Maud, very timidly.

"But you are not going to try it again?" said George Adolphus in surprise.

"O, dear, no!" exclaimed Maud. "I don't mean that. I think papa would give his consent to—that is—I don't think he'd object."

"Object to what?" asked George Adolphus, blankly.

"O, dear?" exclaimed Maud.

"Do you mean to say," continued George Adolphus, "that you don't think the old man would object to your trying it again after the water is let on?"

"No," said Maud. "I don't mean that, for he is very fond of me, and I am sure he would be glad to encourage so worthy a—that is—O, what am I saying?"

Then George Adolphus began to see how the land lay; but as a ball-room is not a favorable place for a tableau, he mastered his impulse to catch Maud in his arms and merely observed in a whisper that she was a gem of the first water, and that he would give his consent, too.

Old Muller sat in his library that night, when Maud and Adolphus entered the house, and the young man was soon prostrate at his feet, clasping him tightly about the legs and implor ing his permission to marry his daughter.

"Ahem!" remarked Muller.

George Adolphus thought this rather meaningless remark was a favorable induction, and so squeezed the old man's legs harder than before.

"Come, young man," said Mr. Muller, "you are filling my slippers with tears. Rise up and let go my legs."

"Oh, do you give your consent?" sobbed George Adolphus.

"Consent!" roared the old banker, "heavens and earth! Of course I do. Here, Maud, take this lunatic away and get me a dry pair of socks."

And they were happy ever afterward. —H. S. Tower, in Detroit Free Press.

The Red Ant and the Picnic Season.

IT is an important fact to announce that the red ant crop is now ripe; that is, it is ready to pick, or perhaps more properly to pluck. The picnic has not robbed me of all its fees than the elevation of the ant to a position, often of influence, in human affairs. There is no record of any picnic in any age with out its red ant. "Go to the ant, thou sluggard." was only a paraphrase for ordering some lazy fellow to start on a picnic and learn to work. When he finds himself where he has to bring pails of water, carry the ice, fetch the baskets, spread the table, and so on, and finds no chance to rest except by surrendering to the insect world completely and becoming alike their highway and their habitation, then he learns his little lesson of the advantage of paid labor and flies away to give up slugging and earn honest wages.

The bug is a creature of already proverbial influence. The man with a flea in his ear and the man with a bee in his bonnet are both im-mumental, but the flea and the bee are no more influential than the ant. Scientists have made a study of this creature, and the stories they tell of its intelligence and skill beside human generals in war or modern machinery in peace, and preserve self-respect only as they incidentally illustrate our ability to comprehend such genius. But these great students of nature, with all their information, forget to give us a few facts of the ant. They may not indicate genius, but still they do impress the observer. For one thing, the ant is eminently fond of being eaten. Before the picnic table can be spread he will be mixing himself freely with the fine sugar, he will be in the cells of the bread, he will be bathing in the milk—and he will be lost in the salting butter. Whether or we are to eat he will be a part of. He seems bound to get at the inside facts of human nature. But he is equally eager for the outside. One division will go down a man's neck, and other divisions countermarch up his arms and ankles. One reason why, in spite of reason and fatigue, picnic parties always have a dance on the lawn the moment lunch is over is to shake

NOTICE

Land Office at Reed City, March 1, 1880.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Clerk of the County of Charlevoix, at Charlevoix, Mich., at the County Seat, on Saturday, the 31st day of July, 1880, viz:

Reuben Shepherd, of Homestead Entry No. 4,675, for the S ½ of the S W ¼ and the S ½ of N E ¼ of N W ¼ and names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said tract, viz: Louis Mickenwirth, Peter Peterson, Peter Thompson, Peter Tayler, all of Charlevoix P. O., Charlevoix county, Mich.

RICHARD STEVENSON, Register.

SIDEWALK NOTICE

Whereas, A majority of the resident owners of real estate on the west side of Main street, in the Village of Charlevoix, Michigan, have petitioned the President and Common Council of said Village to build a sidewalk on said side of said street, between the north and third streets, on said side of said street, as said side of street, and that notice on Streets and Sidewalks having examined said petitions and recommended that the prayer of the petitioner be granted. Therefore, I, Joseph M. Clark, Jr. as Street Commissioner of the Village of Charlevoix, shall construct a sidewalk to build on the north side of Main street, between Round Lake and third street, on said side of street, by the adjoining owners thereon, within fourteen days from the date of the notice, and if not built said sidewalk to the Four feet wide, and of two inch plank laid lengthwise, securely fastened with twenty penny spikes, upon two four by four scantling, and if not better ordered. That Mr. Keeps four ways.

At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate Office, in the Village of Charlevoix, on the Second day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty. Present, J. Milo Eaton, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Mayton F. Bradford, and Lillian E. Bradford, Minors. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified of James W. Hall guardian of said minors, praying for license to sell the real estate therein described. Thereupon it is ordered, that the 22nd day of July next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court then to be holden at the Probate office, in the Village of Charlevoix and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Local News.

There are exactly 1,401 voters in Charlevoix county.

A number of testing parties are camped at various places around the Resort.

STOCKMAN'S foundation for his new store is done and the wood work will be commenced this week.

LETTERS from all directions foretell a continuous flood of people for the clear waters and cool breezes of Charlevoix.

CHARLEVOIX has a good livery stable, and good roads to drive on. Call and get a rig one of these cool evenings.

D. H. Stebbins, of Banks, has been appointed Treasurer of Antrim county, vice R. W. Bagot resigned. The appointment is a good one.

THE dredge is broken down again, but two or three days more work will finish the work. They are dredging fourteen feet deep.

A. E. MASON has sold the law office and lot on Bridge street, occupied by O. F. Wisner, to Mrs. A. Chamberlain. Consideration $320. Col. Wisner will continue to occupy it.

J. W. Wright and P. G. Hoil general traveling agents for the music house of R. D. Bullock are in town. Parties expecting to buy Pianos or Organs will save money to see them.

A matter which Charlevoix is interested in, is the poor condition of the State Road near the south county line, where it passes through Norwood Township. Norwood, having no special interest in improving highways that feed Charlevoix, manifest very little disposition give that section of road the attention which it deserves. It will pay the merchants of this village to put their hands in their pockets and assist in doing this work.

THE GRAND PARADE.—The Twelfth was celebrated here in a manner befitting the occasion. The attendance of members and their families from South Arm was large, and quite a number were here from Eastport. The Fraternity took dinner at the Fountain City House, and addresses were delivered at the grove by Rev. Geo. W. Ball and others. Everything was quiet and orderly.

POPULATION.—Robert Miller, Esq., Emmeratar, gives us the following population of the Townships of his District: Hayes, 469; Marion, 309; Norwood, 396; Charlevoix, 617. The corporation of the village embraces nearly all of the last named Township, it being a small fraction. Charlevoix also has a class of population, laborers, etc., which cannot be enumerated. The true population of Charlevoix, not embracing the large summer population is not far from 700.

The attention of sportsmen is so engrossed with the trout streams that everybody seems to lose sight of the fact that within an hours ride of Charlevoix, are lakes in which abound myriads of bass and pickerel. Several parties have been out to them lately, and invariably come back loaded with large bass and pickerel, some of the latter measuring three feet in length. One of the chief attractions of our beautiful country is the existence of the superior facilities for enjoying this most exhilirating sport.

NEW STAGE.—M. J. Stockman, of this place, managing owner of the steamer Gazelle, has just placed upon the route between Boyne City and Boyne Falls, a handsome new covered spring stage, which will be run regularly during the season of navigation, making regular connection between the steamers and the trains on the G. R. & I. R. R. Both steamers will now ticket through both ways between Charlevoix and the railroad. Mr Stockman is always wide awake to the public interest.

WANTED.—A girl to do general house work. Appl; at this office.

RELIGIOUS.—Rev. Mr. Davis preached at the school house Sunday evening.

—Rev. Dr. Brooks, of the Secret, occupied the M. E. pulpit Sunday morning, and Presiding Elder Bidrod the same pulpit in the evening.

Rev. F. E. Kittridge, Unitarian State Missionary, will preach at the school house in this village, next Sabbath evening, at 7:30 p. m.

THE FURNACE.—Superintendent Jackson is driving things at the Furnace grounds. The frame of the casting and stock houses, which combine one building, is up, and the foundation for the stack is laid. Five coal kilns are completed, and work is progressing on the balance. About 35,000 brick are required in the construction of one kiln. The steam pile driver is at work on the permanent docks, under the superintendence of Mr. Hines, and a large number of piles are being driven daily. The lumber is on the ground for the store building, which will be put up soon.

I. O. O. F.—The following officers were elected at Round Lake Lodge, I. O. O. F., at their last meeting:

A Word to the Republicans of Charlevoix County.

While the Republicans of this county are revolving in their minds the broad issues of the oncoming campaign, and serving themselves for the contest, let them not forget that there are certain matters of primary importance to be considered, whithout which a campaign cannot be successfully prosecuted.

Harmonious organization and unity of action, all will concede, are the all important factors in positive success, and not less important is the need of wise and discreet nominations for county officers—the selection of men of known ability, integrity and loyalty to the party.

If such men Charlevoix county does not lack, and they are plentyful enough that no one section need monopolize the offices. The SENTINEL has an earnest desire to see the county offices justly distributed throughout the county, and will do all in its power to secure this object.

But we are earnestly deprecate the disposition manifested by some of our eastern friends to bring certain sectional interests into the campaign, and with their suf frages in their hands attempt to barter them for sectional gain, or use them as a weapon to force others to their terms. This course will suppress itself to all at unwise and impolitic. It is plainly apparent that the weapon will cut both ways, and that when once this method of warfare is inaugurated, sectional discord and turmoil must attend the campaign and seriously jeopardize success. Antagonisms should be avoided.

We entreat Republicans in every part of our county to enter this campaign independent of any considerations of sectional interest. Let us conduct it with a generous and magnanimous respect for each others opinions on all side issues of a local nature.

On the other hand, let these local matters which are beginning to command our attention, be settled by a square fight, and upon their merits. Any issue that cannot afford to be so judged should not be solicited to respect.

But we are confident that when the overzealous partisans of both sides of these local issues sensibly consider these matters wise counsels will prevail, and the party in Charlevoix county unitedly work for the common cause.

Norwood Notes.

We intended to state last week that Mrs. Rev. J. M Whitney, (and not Mr. Whitney,) is visiting at the residence of Mr. Hesmon Stafford.

Callie Blanchard has gone to Grand Ledge to spend a few weeks in visiting friends and relatives.

Mr. Jno. Jolliffe has returned from his visit to friends in Wisconsin, during several weeks.

We hope we shall not be compelled to give the names of those who drank too much beer on the 3rd, and disgraced themselves at the picnic and dance at Antrim City.

Mrs. Ferguson and family of Chicago, have arrived to spend a portion of the season at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Foote, of this village.

Miss Kate Graves, who has for some months past been teaching music here and at Charlevoix, and making her home with her aunt, Mrs. Park McIntyre of this place, took her departure by the steamer City of Grand Rapids last Tuesday morning, intending to remain for a while at Battle Creek, and then she hopes to proceed to Boston, to pursue her favorite study at the famous conservatory of music. Miss Graves is regarded as a lady of more than ordinary talents and accomplishments. Her genial and kindly manner has gained for her many friends, while her sense of propriety and her teaching department could scarcely fail to win the admiration of all. We hope she may be eminently successful in achieving her laudable purpose to secure a superior knowledge of music, and we shall be disappointed if we do not hear good accounts of Miss Graves in the not very distant future.

Death of Chester R. See.

Chester R. See, oldest son of Samuel M. See, of this place, died at his home at three o'clock Friday morning. In our last issue we noted his arrival here from the West, and the fact of his serious illness, but under home influence and careful treatment, his friends all predicted his speedy recovery. It was not to be, however. The mountain fever and the fatigues of his long journey, proved too much for him, and death came. Chester was about twenty-four years of age, a carpenter by trade, and of very industrious habits. He was a young man at the best of habits, a kind disposition, and a faculty of making friends wherever he went. Less than three months ago, in company with his brother William, he started for the far West, determined to carve out his fortune, and Will, yet remains in Colorado, and is probably at this writing ignorant of this sad event. The relatives have much sincere sympathy. He was buried Saturday, under the auspices of the Good Templars.

The Chinese Forces.

THE Moscow correspondent of the Cologne Gazette gives some particulars concerning the Chinese army, which, it says, it has derived from trustworthy sources. It numbers not more than 600,000. Only 200,000 infantry and 80,000 cavalry can be considered as the active army; the rest perform garrison service. The strength of the troops exists, however, only on paper, as the greater portion is sent on furlough by the commanders, who pocket in consequence large sums. Notwithstanding the improvements made since 1860 in the army, it is not in anyway to be compared with a European army, in its first organization it proceeded out of the eight small Manchoo corps, with the help of which China was conquered at the beginning of the seventeenth century and the present dynasty established. With the eight Tartar and eight Chinese corps which were formed later, China had an army of about 1,000,000 men. Only a small part of this army has European rifles, and is drilled to some extent by English and French officers; the greater number have no other arms but heavy swords, lances, and even bows and arrows. The guards, formed at the beginning of the eighteenth century, have no other task but to protect the residence and the family of the Emperor. This guard is composed of six battalions of infantry, of which four are armed with breech-loaders and two with 6-foot long guns, for the use of which two men are required to fire and one to serve as prop. The guards, numbering altogether about 17,000 men, have also 2,000 cavalry and 24 Russian mountain cannons as artillery. Besides this army, which may be considered the nucleus of the Chinese forces, there exists also a Provincial army, the Lueh-ing, or the army of the "green colors," which, as China has 18 Provinces, is composed of 18 corps. This army is reported to number 650,000 men, but the part of it actually drilled is the European manner and garrisoned in the large towns consists of not more than 80,000 men. As to the Chinese fleet, it should not—irrespective of the uselessness of the officers—be estimated, with its 17 well-constructed and fitted-out large war steamers, three frigates and 15 gunboats, so lightly as it generally is. The correspondent adds that, notwithstanding the weakness of the Russian flotilla in the Pacific, an attack on the Russian port of Vladivostock can be imagined just as little as a Russian landing near Pekin, which is now as a better route of defense at the time of the Anglo-French landing in 1860. An attack on Kuldja may also be rendered illusive by the circumstance that the Russians have found in the Dunghan population devoted allies.

In the Heart of the California Alps.

EARLY one bright morning in the middle of Indian Summer, while the pioneer meadows were still crisp with frost crystals, I set out from the foot of Mount Lyell, on my way down to Yosemite Valley. I had spent the past summer, and many preceding ones, exploring the glacier that lie on the mountain-range of San Joaquin, Tuolumne, Merced and (Owen's Rivers; measuring and studying their movements, trunks, crevasses, moraines, etc., and the part they played during the period of their greater extension in the creation and development of the landscapes of this Alpine wonderland. Having been cold and hungry so many times, and worked so hard, I was weary, and began to look forward with delight to the approaching winter, when I would be warmly snow-bound in my Yosemite cabin, with plenty of bread and books; but a tinge of regret came on when I considered that possibly I was now looking on all this fresh wilderness for the last time.

To describe these glorious Alps, with their thousand peaks and spires dimpling far into the thin sky, the ice and snow and avalanches, grand torrents and lakes, woods and gardens, the bears in the groves, wild sheep in the dizzy heights—these would require the lore-work of a whole life. The lessons and enjoyments of even a single day would probably weary most readers, however commingly interested they might be if brought into actual contact with them. Therefore, I am only going to offer some of the characteristic pictures drawn from the wildest places, and strung together on a string of narrative.

Few portions of the California Alps are, strictly speaking, picturesque. The whole massive uplift of the range, four hundred and fifty miles long, by about seventy wide, is one grand picture, not clearly divisible into smaller ones; in this respect it differs greatly from the older and riper mountains of the Coast range. All the landscapes of the Sierra were born again—remodeled deep down to the roots of their granite foundations by the developing ice-floods of the last geological winter. But all were not brought forth simultaneously; and, in general, the less apparatic are they into picture the sooner the danger of being made into warm, sympathetic, lovable pictures.

Here, however, on the least-watery of the Pyrenees, is a group of wild Alps on which the geologist may say the sun has but just begun to shine, yet in a high degree picturesque, and in all its main features as regular and evenly balanced as almost to appear conventional—one single cluster of snow-laden peaks with gray pine-fringed granite bosses heaped around its base, the whole surging free into the sky from the head of a magnificent valley, whose lofty walls are bowded away on both sides so as to embrace it all without admitting anything but strictly belonging to it. The foreground was now all aglow with autumn colors, brown and purple and gold, ripe in the mellow sunshine; contrasting brightly with the deep, cobalt blue of the sky, and the black and gray, and pure, spotless white of the rocks and glaciers. Down through the middle, the young Tuolumne was seen pouring from its crystal fountains, now resting in glassy pools as if changing back again into ice, now leaping in white cascades as if turning to snow; gliding right and left between the granite bosses—then sweeping on through the smooth, meadowy levels of the valley, swaying positively from side to side with calm, stately gestures just dipping willows and sedges, and around every conspicuous pine and throughout the whole eventful course, flowing fast or slow, singing land or low, ever filling the landscape with spiritual animation, and manifesting the grandeur of its sources in every movement and tone.

Pursuing my lonely way down the valley, I turned again and again to gaze on the glorious picture, drawing with my arms to inclose it as in a frame. After long ages of growth in the barren valley, every peak vanished from sight, and I pushed rapidly along the frozen meadows, over the divide between the waters of the Merced and Tuolumne, and down through the lower forests that clothe the slopes of Clouds Rest, standing in Yosemite in full view, from which with me is my time.—John Muir, in Harper's Monthly.

How the Mercury Went Up.

AT eleven o'clock yesterday forenoon a citizen about seventy years old sat under an awning on Michigan avenue, pistol, placid and contented, and the mercury of his feelings down to about sixty. He might soon have fallen asleep, but along came another old citizen about the same age and stopped for a moment to fan his heated face.

"Purty warm out?" queried the first.

"Well, yes, but if some of those young men who are perspiring around here to-day had lived in June, 1829, I guess they'd know what hot weather was. I tell you that was a scorcher, an' no mistake."

"June, '29. Now, let's see. Aren't you a little old?"

"No, sir; I remember all about it. It was so hot from the 8th to the 24th that men could not work in the fields, and hundreds of cattle died from the heat."

"You are off just a year," said the other, beginning to wake up. "It was in 1828. I remember it, because I ran for office that fall."

"I can't help about your running for office. I know it was in '29, because I broke my leg that year."

"I don't care if you broke your neck!" exclaimed the other, his mercury rising to eighty-six degrees at a single jump. "I guess I know what year I ran for office!"

"I say it was in '29 and I've got a diary to prove it!"

"And I've got two diaries to prove it was in '28! You are talking to an old pioneer, sir!"

"And so are you—one who heard the wolves howling before you were born! Don't imagine that you know it all!"

"What's the dispute?" asked a customer who came out of the store.

"Why, sir, I've been called a liar by that person there!" replied the first. "If I wasn't so old I'd drop him in his tracks."

"And he's called me a liar!" shouted the second. "If I'm five years older than he is, but if he wants to try any drops on me I'll clear him of the law. I say it was in 1828!"

"It wasn't; it was in '28!"

"Look out!"

"Look out yourself!"

"Don't tick my nose again, or I'll hit you!"

"Don't push me back, or I'll do you injury."

And but for the younger men those two old pioneers would have tackled each other about a hot June which neither probably had correct within five years, and which doubtless was a good deal cooler than any others June has ever saw. They started off in different directions to hunt up old diaries and prove each other falsifiers, and in future they won't hitch along for each other or the street cars, won't drink from the same soda fountain if they know it, and seeing each other across the street will growl out:

"There should be a law to prevent such an old liar from running at large!"—Detroit Free Press.

A Dried-up Lake.

WHERE at one time, say the Eureka (Nev.) Leader, was Ruby Lake there is now not a drop of water. Seven or eight years ago this sheet of water was from eighteen to twenty miles long, and varied in breadth from half a mile to two or three miles, and in a number of places was very deep. The lake was fed by numerous springs along the foot of Ruby Mountain, and was the largest body of water in Eastern Nevada. For some years past it has been gradually drying up, until it has at last totally disappeared. No cause for its disappearance can be assigned. The Ruby range of mountains is considered the largest and finest between the Rocky Mountains and the Sierra Nevadas, and besides being well-timbered has been the best watered mountain range in Nevada.

STEAMER BURNED!

Disaster to the Steamer Saswannahaw—Several Lives Lost.

NEW YORK, June 23.

Another shocking steamboat disaster was added to the already long list this afternoon. The Saswannahaw, plying between this city and Coney Island, Rockaway and Long Cliff, Long Island, on the Sound, took fire from an explosion, which occurred under the engine room, when she was about two miles from the Battery, on the Long Island shore. The scene that followed was appalling, and the loss of life will be very great. The boat was running at the rate of about twenty miles an hour, and had on board about 1,500 excursionists. The explosion occurred about 3 o'clock, and in a few minutes the whole boat was in flames. The fire originated in the engine room, and spread with great rapidity. The boat was running parallel with the Long Island shore, and the pilot house with his pilot, Captain Charles Hall, was nothing at the wheel while running through Hell Gate. Everything was going as usual, when, at 3:05, the Captain heard a heavy thud and a dull explosion which shook the boat to its centre. The report was a dull one, but heavy enough to make the boat tremble violently. The boat was then just off Negro Point. I looked upon the signal lamps, turned the steam whistle, and I saw a dense column of smoke rising from the after cabin, but such is usual from the saltpetre powder. I took it for granted, better stop and get your passengers ready. I did stop, however, and found out that I did know there was danger, and we were then about a mile from Negro Point. Black smoke now followed in great volumes, and I knew that the boat would sooner or later be a total wreck. Almost as soon as you could count a dozen the flames burst through the forward deck. The fire originated in the after cabin, and spread rapidly forward. The pilot house, I believe, was not on fire when I left it, but the flames were then rushing through the cabin below, and were fast making their way to the upper deck. The distance from the shore was about three miles, and I headed the boat in that direction. Passengers were rushing in every direction. Some were jumping overboard, while others who would be broadside to the boat were seen running down the side of the fire as much as possible on our side in the boat and were jumping in. I saw no opportunity to save passengers. Had the fire originated in the forward cabin, as I at first thought it did, I could have run the boat under the bows of the steamer Seawanhaka, which was about a quarter of a mile ahead of us, and which I could tell it was fierce underneath. From the amount of the explosion I knew I could reach the boat with the engineer in his room and it became impossible to increase the speed. It was necessary to keep the steamer in the direction we were going, as the tide was so heavy that if the steamer's head was allowed to swing around the current would have carried her on to the rocks. Before the boat reached the shore the flames were rushing through the upper deck, and licking my hands so that I had to put my head in the water occasionally to cool me off. I stuck to the wheel until I felt the heat strike my face, and then I left the house, but managed to climb over the bowsprit of the steamer Seawanhaka, which was then only lying 15 ft. off, and I jumped on board. The boat was in excellent condition.

A MINISTER was expatiating his Sunday-school concerning the story of Eutychus, the young man who, listening to the preaching of the Apostle Paul, fell asleep, and, falling down, was taken up dead. "What," he said, "do we learn from this solemn event?" when the reply from a little girl came pat and prompt: "Please, sir, ministers should learn not to preach the long sermons."

TIRED are the days when a fellow feels like doing nothing and keeping at it.

A New Phase of an Old Story.

HOPKINS STRAIGHT, of Burtonville, County Cumberland, is in town and in luck. He arrived last night, and, in connection with the clean cash, besides traveling expenses, said he now carries a face as long as a lamp-post and never smiles except when asleep.

A REPORTER met Straight, who had just settled down on a farm near Burtonville to enjoy the fruits of a well-spent life, received a circular from a New Yorker stating that a certain Hezekiah, near Niagara Falls, was dying, could be cured for fifty cents, and offering a liberal commission for the discovery of the whereabouts of the sufferer. The circular, which bore the signature of the well-known firm of fortune-tellers, Messrs. Gull & Co., New York, called upon all to whom it came to assist in the search, and Straight worried over the matter for a week, and finally decided that he would go to Niagara Falls and look up the case. He did so, and found Hezekiah, who was at the wheel, realized the danger at once, and was making for the right or left for several minutes before the boat was swept into the rapids. Hezekiah was a man of very limited means, and had a numerous family dependent upon him for support. He was nothing daunted by the circumstances which were between her and the shore. Jets of flame darted up the hatchways, cutting off communication with the engineer, and burning the helmsman's hands so that he could not hold the wheel. He called for help, spoke at the wheel, being forced to drop enough to make room for the whole family to get on board. During the passage of the rapids Straight and Hezekiah managed to transact the business, and it was a dense crowd of Canadians that gathered on the shore, but such is usual from large powder. Hezekiah, I am sorry to say, died of his injuries, but Straight got the money, and now lives in Yosemite in full view of the spot where Hezekiah was found. When he was less than 10 feet from shore, he called the engineer to the rear, and he leaped through the window. He was picked up by the superintendent of Randall's Island, saw the boat strike the rocks, and all the guards on board the ferry-boat and all the guards on the bridge. Dr. Howard, the resident physician of Randall's Island, was the first to reach the boat, and he found the engineer in his room and became insensible before the speed. It was necessary to keep the steamer in the direction we were going, as the tide was so heavy that if the steamer's head was allowed to swing around the current would have carried her on to the rocks. Before the boat reached the shore the flames were rushing through the upper deck, and licking my hands so that I had to put my head in the water occasionally to cool me off. I stuck to the wheel until I felt the heat strike my face, and then I left the house, but managed to climb over the bowsprit of the steamer Seawanhaka, which was then only lying 15 ft. off, and I jumped on board. The boat was in excellent condition.

Perseverance with the Bronzed.

IN a recent communication to the French Academy, Professor Fort asserts that he was enabled to restore life to a child three years old, by practicing artificial respiration on it four hours, commencing three hours and a half after apparent death. He mentioned also a case in which Dr. Foderé, of Billemont, reanimated, in July, 1876, an apparently drowned person by four hours of artificial respiration, begun one hour after the patient was taken from the water. At this season, when cases of drowning are apt to be frequent, the possible benefit that may come from a persevering effort to revive victims of drowning should encourage friends not to despair of their resuscitation, even after several hours of seeming fruitless labor.—Scientific American.

Preservative Wrapping-Papers.

TWO new preservative wrapping-papers have been recently brought out, one dipped in formalin and the other in boric acid. The first is made by dipping ordinary straw-paper in a 40-per-cent salycelic acid bath and hanging it in the air to dry. The bath should be made from a strong salicylic solution of boracic acid, diluted with as much water as it will bear without precipitation. The sapolio, cologne, or other fruits may be wrapped in the paper before packing, and when the fruit reaches its market the paper can be removed and used again. A formic wrapping-paper may be prepared for resisting moths and mildew by dipping it in a powerful bath containing it and drying it over hot rollers. This bath is made by mixing twenty parts of the oil procured by the distillation of coal tar naphthas, five parts of crude carbolic acid containing about fifty per cent. of phenols, seventy parts of thin coal tar, at 160 degrees Fahr., and five parts of refined petroleum.—Scientific American.

MALT UNFERMENTED

THE OPINION OF PHYSICIANS throughout the United States have indorsed MALT BITTERS, prepared by the MALT BITTERS CO., as containing all the virtues of unfermented malt, and is now prescribed in most cases in place of beer, ale or porter. Physicians who have not given it a trial will be surprised at the results. They build up where the nervous system is prostrated, create appetite, purify the blood and restore life and vigor to every function. There is no other preparation of malt that will do this, and we challenge the world to produce one that can. None genuine without the name of the Malt Bitters Co. on the label.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

POTATO BUGS.—Cooking soda dissolved in water to saturation is as fatal to potato bugs as Paris green.

TO CURE toothache, take of chloroform, spirits of camphor, laudanum, of each one dram. Apply on a little cotton wool.

IF a child has a bad earache, dripping of cotton wool in olive oil, warm it and place it in the ear. Wrap up the head and keep it out of drafts.

COFFEE CAKES.—One cup butter, one-half cup sugar, one cup molasses, one teaspoonful saleratus dissolved in a cup of strong coffee, one nutmeg, one teaspoonful cloves, one cinnamon, five cups of flour, and one cup of raisins chopped.

WHIPPED POTATOES.—Whip boiled potatoes in creamy lightness with a fork; beat in butter, milk, pepper and salt; set the frothed white of an egg; toss irregularly upon a dish, set in the oven two minutes to reheat, but do not let it color.

THE pain of a sprained limb is quickly removed by ice-cold water. The terrible pangs of whitlow or felon are cut short by intense heat. A large proportion of all cramps and spasms can be relieved by water of proper temperature and intelligently applied.

IT is a good plan to put new earthenware into cold water, and let it heat gradually until it boils; then cool again. Brown earthenware, in particular, may be toughened in this way. A handful of rye or wheat bran, thrown in while it is boiling, will preserve the glazing so that it will not be destroyed by acids or salt.

TO BREAK A HALTER-PULLING HORSE.—Take a common rope or leather halter, place it on the horse in the usual way, then run the rope or strap through the hole or ring where you hitch, carry the rope to the side of the head next the manger. It is much more economical to use horses of these sizes than smaller ones, but they must be in middle-age of coarse bones and flabby flesh. Their bones should be fine for the size, and the flesh firm—both muscle, but tightened—and the cords and sinews be like whalebone. The action must also be good, the walk fast and the trot reasonably quick, with an indomitable will and a courage that never balks at a heavy pull. Rural New Yorker.

LEMON PUFFS.—Beat and sift a pound and a quarter of loaf sugar, and mix with it the peel of two lemons grated; whisk the whites of three eggs to a firm froth, add it gradually to the sugar and lemon, and beat it all together for one hour. If they do not stay their shape you please, place the puffs on oiled paper on a tin, put them in a moderate oven, and bake six or eight minutes.

HOMINY CROQUETTES.—To a cupful of cold, boiled hominy (small grained), add a table-spoonful of melted butter, a pinch of salt, moistening by degrees with a cupful of rich milk, beating to a soft paste. Put in a teaspoonful of sugar, and lastly a well-beaten egg. Roll into oval balls and dip into beaten egg, then in cracker crumbs, and fry in hot lard. Hour your hands before rolling them.

CHILBLAINS and wind-cracking begin and continue as bad habits, and are not to be got over like a disease, though the indig. stions and tympanities caused by them may require medicinal treatment. Cold-bathing is best prevented by a muzzle, which may be bound of wire and easily removed when in use. Wind-sucking is only to be overcome by a broad belt around the throat, buckled rather tight to prevent the animal curving the neck and indulging in the habit.

TO CURE HEAVES IN A HORSE.—Feed soaked oats and no hay morning and noon; and at night in place of hay supply clean cut straw. Never work at too rapid a pace; never put to active work for a full hour after meals; drive slowly for the first hour; see that the bowels are kept loose, allowing two or three ounces of Glauber salts daily in the food, if necessary. Then give daily in the food four grains arsenious acid, one dram bicarbonate of potash, one-half dram iodide of potassium, two drams ground ginger. Continue this for a month.

SALT-AND-WATER CUCUMBERS.—Put fifty freshly-pickled cucumbers in a stone jar, separating each layer with fresh grape leaves, and a sprig of sweet fennel. Pour over them a pickle made by boiling a pint and a half of salt in a gallon of water, and a tablespoonful of cayenne pepper; only let it come to a boil; have it perfectly cold before putting it over the cucumbers; cover well with grape-leaves; put a clean piece of light wood and a brick on top to keep the cucumbers down; they will ferment, be slightly acid, and be ready for use in three weeks. This is a delicious recipe.

A CORRESPONDENT of the New York Tribune says: "It is asserted, and I have no doubt truly, that timber cut from the middle of June to the middle of August lasts much longer, especially when exposed to the weather as rails or the end buried in the ground like posts. Still, if cut in the other months of the year, the bark peeled off and the timber laid up on supports two feet or so from the ground, and permitted to season well before using it, would the difference of endurance be so much? Many years ago I had white cedar fence posts cut in the winter, and set soon as cut in the ground. They have stood within the reach of my vision in the spring set them. In from seven to eleven years the ends which were in the ground had mostly rotted, while the parts out of it kept sound. I then took them out, and as the bark had peeled off itself at the posts. Rails cut in the winter will long enough for the purpose. I reversed them, and set these well-seasoned ends in the ground. They have been thus used for several years, and as yet I see no tendency to rot, though I suppose they will not endure so long as if the timber had been cut in the summer and then well seasoned before setting the posts. Rails cut in the winter, though laid up high and dry in a fence where they can season well, often rot rather rapidly."

Carriage and Heavy Draft Horses.

BOTH kinds of these horses have been scarce and dear in our city markets this spring, and the country has been scoured in every direction with the hope of obtaining a supply equal to the demand, but with only partial success. For many years to come, we are persuaded that such horses, if rightly bred, will be the most profitable stock that can be grown in our country, for there is not only an active and increasing home demand, but they will also be wanted for foreign exportation.

A horse for the gentleman's carriage should be extra-well bred; that is to say, he must have a good share of race-horse blood in his veins, either immediately or remotely, otherwise he will be lacking in style, spirit, action and endurance, all of which are essential to be combined in the carriage horses for gentleman's driving, either single or paired.

For the buggy or light wagon, a height of 15 to 15½ hands with a weight of 1,000 to 1,100 pounds, is the best size, and in point of form and action for the coupe, they should be 16 to 17 hands high, and weigh from 1,200 to 1,400 pounds. This enables them to make a fine, lofty show, and gives them substance and power enough to take a heavy carriage full of people, not only over city pavements and through the park, but also over rough country roads, when gentlemen go to their summer residences.

Unlike the Europeans, we are sadly deficient in heavy draft horses for such as are large and powerful enough to work the heavy clay soils of our farms, and for the heavy loads on our truck wagons. These should be rather short in the leg, of block (pony) build, and with rather fine feet and hair. They may be from 16 to 17½ hands high, and weigh not less than 1,400 or oftener 1,500 pounds. For the shoulder action it is much more economical to use horses of these sizes than smaller ones, but they must be free from all coarse bones and flabby flesh. Their bones should be fine for the size, and the flesh firm—both muscle, but tightened—and the cords and sinews be like whalebone. The action must also be good, the walk fast and the trot reasonably quick, with an indomitable will and a courage that never balks at a heavy pull. Rural New Yorker.

A Busy Life.

The World's Dispensary at Buffalo, N. Y. is a great institution, leading its nutrient Invalid's Hotel, for accommodation of patients, coating its founder nearly half a million of dollars, and its branch in London, England, of another proportions, where Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Pleasant Purgative Pellets and other remedies are manufactured for the foreign trade, which extends to the East Indies, Cuba and other far distant countries. All this mammoth business has been organized, systematized and built up by Dr. R. V. Pierce, who has associated with himself as a Faculty under the name of Dr. World's Dispensary Medical Association, a most competent staff of physicians and surgeons who annually treat many thousands of cases of chronic diseases, not to pressuming any set list of remedies, but using all such specific remedies as have, in a large experience, been found most effacious in thoroughly combating and directing this mammoth business of world-wide proportions. Dr. Pierce has found time to write a work on domestic medicine—entitled "The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser"—1,000 pages, 300 Illustrations, selling at $1.50, and also to serve a term as member of Congress. Surely he must be competent if he can take the lateral pastime, to discourse upon "the recollections of a busy life."—National Republican.

The Literary Revolution.

The climax in cheap book-making has surely been reached in the new $1 books advertised elsewhere by the American Book Exchange, New York. They are worth getting for their curiosities, even if they were not each of them instinctually valuable. A good word is to be commended in the "Revolution" publications is that they are all books of high literary character and worthy of universal circulation.

WILLARD A. SMITH,
EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JULY 13, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT,
JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,
CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR GOVERNOR,
Col. Wm. B. McCreery.
subject to the approval of the Republican State Convention.

The Soldier or the Man of the People.

The nomination of Gen. Hancock is a confession by the Democratic party that all the trash and twaddle with which its organs and orators have flooded the country for several years about Centralism, centralization, the man on horseback, and the danger of military despotism, was arrant nonsense. Gen. Hancock is the only man who was a professional soldier, and nothing else, ever nominated by any party for the presidency. Our earlier presidents have all been something more than mere soldiers. They have all been plain citizens, laboring men, professional men, or business men—men of mark with the common people—at least a considerable part of their lives. But Gen. Hancock has been the man on horseback ever since he was old enough to be a soldier, from several years before he was a man grown till the present moment. He has never been practically a man of the people, or one of the people, or actively elected any of their labors, or occupations, or interests, in any industry, or in any business, or even politics or public questions from his boyhood to this day.

While we regard all apprehensions of Cæsarism, centralization, the danger of military rule, and the man on horseback, as the shrewdest of demagogical bosh, and freely acquit Gen. Hancock, equally with all our other generals, of any thought or disposition or power in that direction; yet the selfsatisfaction and inconsistency of those who do protest to fear such chimeras in nominating a professional soldier of the regular army, trained from his boyhood to the government of the sword and nothing else, is piquant and conspicuous. If the men who pretend to fear military rule, and Cæsarism, and centralization, were required to point out from all the men in the country that one man whose education and life long training most conspicuously represent the very long bears of which they pretend to be so fearful, they could not possibly have selected a more striking example than the one they have nominated for President. Of all men, they have nominated the man on horseback, on his own to any such man in the United States—the man who has always been on horseback, and who has never been anywhere else.

Let us repeat that we do not believe that Gen. Hancock, or any other of our generals, ever had, has now, or will have, any sympathy with or thought of Cæsarism, centralization, or military rule, in the sense about which these has been so much demagogical and ridiculous twaddle. We do not appreciate the slightest danger of that kind to Republican institutions from placing a soldier of the regular army at the head of the government, if Gen. Hancock should be elected. Even if the country should elect a man possessed of those unrepublican ambitions and ideas he would be powerless to accomplish harm of that sort. The American people are not of the stuff upon which the armed host can be set, if ever anybody should be foolish enough to attempt it; and there is no danger that anybody will attempt it while the American people retain their present manly and freedom-loving character.

But it is evident to everybody that the training of a general of the regular army, who is and always has been a professional soldier only, is not the training best fitted to qualify a man for the some political training is valuable, if not absolutely necessary. It has been to the lack of such training that the mistakes made by our partially military Presidents have been attributed. Still more obvious it, at a period when the issues and questions with which the country is about to deal will be quasi ones of a business character, it is a disadvantage to a nominee for President that he never had any business experience or occupation, to put him in personal rapport with the business men and business interests of the country, or to truly like to deal with business issues. And especially at a period when the country is agitated by industrial questions, of the relations of labor and capital, and of the rights and interests of the great masses of laboring men engaged in industrial occupations, as it is a disadvantage to the candidate for the office of President that he has himself been engaged in any industry, nor at any period of his life has experienced in his own person the trials and hardships and feelings and desires of the toiling millions. In a government of the people, by the people, and for the people, the best representative soon for President is one who at least has been himself at some period practically one of the people in their toils, their business, their occupations, aspirations, experiences and sympathies. No amount of mere theory, however just it may be, can supply the lack of practical experience in these matters.

To the business men and workingmen of the country the nominees of the two parties present a striking contrast, which cannot and will not escape their observation. The Democratic party presents a professional soldier of the regular army, one trained to command by military methods, who has never had any political, or industrial, or business experience, and who has never been practically one of the people in their daily occupations, and interests, parents and feelings. The Republican party presents a nominee who is himself one of the people, born in poverty, trained to daily labor, long accustomed to business, mingling all his life with the people, of long and wide experience in public life, and a close student and practical statesman in the financial, business, and industrial questions with which the nation will have to deal during the next presidential term. He one represents, in his training and experience, the regular army, the other represents, in his training and experience, the American people.—Post and Tribune.

This sudden Democratic glow of fervor towards a General of the Union Army is regarded with the same suspicion that attends all manifestations of disturbed repentance.

The Chicago Times, in re "the fraud issue," says:

Before the Democratic brethren proclaim the fraud-level cry parties they had better do three things: First, explain why they have not presented the great fraud at their candidate for the office to which they claim he was elected; second state why they failed in consummating the fraud by voting for the electoral commission and acquiescing in its decisions; and third, produce some Democrat who has refused to accept office at the hands of the "fraud-elected President."

See how plain a tale will put them down! Their platform affirms that the Democrats have "reduced expenditures forty millions a year." The fact is, that in the years from 1871 to 1876, when the Republicans had control of Congress, the annual expenditures were reduced by $34,000,000. In 1877 and 1878 the Democrats had control, and they made an up ward reduction of $22,000,000 by refusing to provide for necessary expenses, thus causing a large deficiency bill. In 1879 and 1880 there was an increase of $30,000,000, and the annual national expenditure is now about $4,000,000 more than it was ten years ago, when the Republican party held the purse.—Ohio State Journal.

Ex Senator J. A. J. Cresswell of Maryland, one of the most resolute of the Grant leaders at Chicago, said in a recent speech at Baltimore:

James A. Garfield has risen from the barefooted canal boy to the proudest position in the country. I met him for the first time at the wharf in Chestertown 12 years ago, when, at the solicitation of Henry Winter Davis, immediately after his glorious canvass in the field, he came to Maryland to assist the Republicans in the campaign for emancipation. He delivered a speech in the Chestertown court house, and was stoned with rotten eggs and apples. Raising his proud head aloft, Gen. Garfield cried aloud: "I have just emerged from the ruin of hell and Chickamauga. I have looked upon death and Scared at a soldier with a gun at the polls, and not afraid of a Major General in the ballot box—hah!

How does Hancock stand on "the southern claims" question? We already know the opinion of "the solid south."

Who is this man English whom the Democrats have nominated for the vice-presidency? Tell us something about his record if he has one.

Alex Wm. H. English—they say that is his name—a prominent member of the knights of the golden circle during the war.

It will be found, we venture to say, that Hancock's candidacy is like a lion lily—best biggest when first hatched.—Council Bluffs Nonpareil.

With all their barnstorming for Hancock they fail to show up any of that gentleman's statesmanship. He was never merely a military man for president who has no idea of the civic affairs of our government?

General Hancock was a pretty good soldier; he shot Democrats for four years. Nobody alive will accuse him for pulling a trigger or ordering a charge upon Republicans. His command reduced the Democratic majority of the solid south about 50,000.

The Republican national committee has organized for the campaign by the election of the Hon. Marshall Jewell of Connecticut as chairman. Mr. Jewell is a man of means and ample political experience, and will make an energetic and industrious manager of his party's battle.

Gen. Grant was not fit for the presidency because he was a military man, but Hancock, you know is a civilian(?) The thing has suddenly changed around. There isn't any howling in democratic ranks about "the man on horseback" now or a military despotism. What a difference it makes in whose bull is being gored!

An old soldier in the Springfield (Mass.) Union says: "All of the Republican soldiers under Hancock will work against him. We have to choose between two soldiers, one a West Pointer, who has been fed by the government, and one who is a volunteer soldier and who made himself, and we shall vote for the volunteer. More than that, the veteran association is going to work to prepare a pamphlet containing Garfield with Hancock as soldiers, and the balance you may be certain will be in favor of Garfield."

It is not a very few who have been prevailed to their party because they fought against the confederacy, there was not a Democrat in that convention who did not hate the services which Gen. Hancock rendered to the nation, who did not wish him calamity, and who does not still hate that service. Yes, the nomination was because of that which they hated, then rolled over it as if they exulted in it.—Cincinnati Gazette.

General Hancock once invited Beauregard to dinner. Beauregard wrote in reply: "General H.—Please don't humble me by those flags. I'll come and see you, but first remove them." Then, according to a correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, "the flags were ordered down, and Beauregard dined with General Hancock, who was thus guilty of an open insult to the flag to soothe the irritated nerves of an unrepentant rebel."

An unanswerable contradiction has already been given to the predictions that the result at Chicago would effect Gen. Grant's hold upon the affectionate admiration of the American people. It was claimed that the great public ovations given him before the convention were stimulated by the fact that he was regarded as a presidential candidate. How mistaken an estimate this was is proved by the magnificent greeting given to him in Kansas last week. The defeat of the movement to renominate him for the presidency has not diminished the enthusiasm of his receptions. Whenever he appears in public, he is still received as the most illustrious of living Americans, with peculiar honor, and by such vast crowds of enthusiastic people as probably no other man could attract.

These facts are alike honorable to the American people and to "the first citizen" of the Republic. They show that the gratitude and admiration of the nation for Gen. Grant's services in war and peace are not inspired, nor can they be cooled, by considerations of political expediency, but rest upon a basis far broader than party.

The Chicago Times says: "The nomination of Gen. Hancock is a mistake, if not a blunder. He is not the man for leader of a political party in this or any other political emergency." That expresses the situation in a nutshell. The sole claim made by the democracy is that Hancock is a military hero. We don't want a military leader, but a civil statesman.

The scattering returns reports thus far received indicate that the full returns will show not far from 48,000,000 of inhabitants in the United States, as against less than 39,900,000 in 1870. This will be a gain of just about 25 per cent. in the last 10 years, which is considerably larger than the rate of increase during the preceding decade. The present number of inhabitants is over twice the 23,000,000 reported by the census of 1850, so that the country has more than doubled its population within less than a generation.

A PATRICK Island laborer, who was recently arrested and fined for drunkenness, was so chagrined that he shot himself dead.

THE Sny levee, between Quincy and Alton, Ill., on the Mississippi River, gave way on the night of the 29th ult., and the water poured in with great rapidity, flooding the bottom lands. It is reported that the flood sweeps all traces of wheat and corn lands, and devastates a strip of territory forty miles long by ten miles wide. The people had to flee for their lives, and many took refuge on the embankments, not having time to make their way to the high grounds. One family, named Prentice, consisting of five persons, was drowned.

THE census enumerators give Louisville, Ky., a population of 136,760. Omaha's (Neb.) population foots up 30,035, a gain of 14,000 in ten years. It was thought on the start that the census returns for Chicago would show a total population in the city of over 400,000.

THE National Board of Health expresses the opinion that there is no reason to fear a recurrence of the yellow fever in the South this year.

THE public-debt statement for June makes the following exhibit: Total debt (including certificates), $2,249,209,917. Cash in Treasury, $301,685,833. Debt, less amount in Treasury, $1,947,172,765. Decrease during the month, $10,314,854. Decrease since June 30, 1879, $85,634,961.

FIFTEEN HUNDRED emigrants from Germany, Sweden and Norway reached Buffalo on the 1st, and left by special train for the West.

A BOY at Pittsburgh, Pa., named Oakley, seven years old, was rescued from drowning as soon as the latter recovered from the effects of the excursion steamer Mary on Lake Minnetonka exploded on the 1st, killing three persons and injuring one fatally and several others painfully. The boat was lying at a dock at the time of the accident.

THE tobacco produced at the United States exhibit at Cincinnati, year ended June 30 was officially stated at 1,000,000 pounds, 913,750 were standard. This exceeds the cottage of any previous year.

THE boat race between the Harvard and Yale crews at New London on the 1st resulted in an easy victory for the latter by ten lengths.

THERE were two hundred deaths from sunstroke in New York during the six days ending on the 1st. The heat had been intense.

Cooper (O.), Chauncey I. Filley (Mo.), John A. Martin (Kan.). This division will be under the charge of General Logan. August 8, September 2 and October 14 were fixed as the days for the next meeting of the Executive Committee. A motion was passed that Senator Blaine should be formally invited to visit the Pacific Coast in the interest of the party. The Western Branch of the committee subsequently met and appointed John C. New Secretary, and adjourned to meet at Chicago the 3d of July.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

HERE are more abundant in Presque Isle County than they have been before for a great many years.

THE State Red-Ribbon Convention met in Jackson on the 31st and organized by the selection of Robert R. Frazer as President, and Charles McCandless as Secretary, with one Vice-President from each of the Congressional Districts. The first day, after organization, was devoted to speech-making. On the second day the following State Central Committee was appointed:

Chairman—Lyman Newton, Flint.
Secretary—J. C. Bontecou, Jackson.
First District—Benjamin Lyons, Detroit.
Second District—Charles Mosher, Monroe.
Third District—H. C. Hodge, Concord.
Fourth District—E. B. Bowen, Three Rivers.
Fifth District—George W. McBride, South Haven.
Sixth District—Zeek Chase, Flint.
South District—Frank Stevens, Adrian.
Eighth District—S. B. Bliss, East Saginaw.
Ninth District—L. S. Isbo, Hancock.
At Large—Watson Hopkins, Ypsilanti; Rev. H. B. Sisler, Saline.

The following resolutions were adopted:

WHEREAS, Having found that moral suasion alone is inadequate to prevent the ravages of intemperance, and believing that the time has come when all who care for the public weal ought to expend all our energies in remedying the growing curse; therefore,

Resolved, that we believe ourselves to are any longer upon the principle that the history of great moral movements is, and should be, a non-legislative one.

WHEREAS, The liquor-dealers having accumulated the fear that the present wave of temperance reform is likely to be cast in opposition to any and all legislation looking to the annihilation of their traffic, or to any legislation which will make the business unprofitable, being a malignant assault on the moral and financial well-being of society, by the foisting upon organizations; therefore,

Resolved, That it is the duty at every friend of humanity, by any and all legal means within his power, to defeat the project and defeat this purpose.

Resolved, That we interpret the temperance policy of Michigan at this time to be a demand for the repeal of the present law, and the submission to a vote of the people of a prohibitory constitutional amendment in favor of the State forever prohibiting the manufacture and sale of alcoholic, malt and vinous liquors; and

WHEREAS, To accomplish this, the united vigor and determined efforts of every friend of the cause are necessary; therefore,

Resolved, That we pledge ourselves to use every legal effort to work for the success of such measure, and that all temperance men of what soever party, should attend their primaries and conventions and see that they are held in such a manner as to secure the nomination of candidates pledged to support the measure, and that all the Congressional nominations be so pledged.

WHEREAS, The present tax law is confessedly unjust in principle and unequal in its operation; therefore,

Resolved, That we favor the repeal of the constitutional amendment empowering the Legislature to exempt property, and all other laws that may be necessary to substitute for the exemption system any effective method in the direction of absolute prohibition by simple taxation for each person.

THE following call for a Republican State Convention has been issued:

The Republican State Convention to nominate candidates for State officers and Electors-at-Large to be voted for at the election to be held on the 26th ult. Tuesday, the 5th day of August, A. D. 1880, at 10 o'clock, A. M., in the city of Jackson, at 11 o'clock, A. M., on Thursday, August 5 and

In accordance with a resolution adopted at a meeting of the State Central Committee at Detroit June 24, 1880, each county in the State will be entitled to one delegate for each 400 of the vote cast for Governor at the last State election in 1878, and one additional delegate for every fraction over 200; but each organized county will be entitled to at least one delegate.

Under a resolution of 1856, no delegate will be entitled to a seat who does not reside in the county he represents Celebration at Beaver Harbor, July 5th, 1880.

There was a regatta at Beaver Harbor, July 5th 1880, under the able management of James H. Dormer, assisted by Harrison Miller, Capt. of the Life Boat Station. The schooner Sophia A. Bonner Capt. John Bonner, that merry and obliging old lad, was anchored a few rods west of Dura dock, a line drawn from vessel to dock for all contesting fish boats to tie to and be off at the signal to start, pass around a buoy placed near the old school in the harbor, from thence round ——— Island, from there around a stake boat (The Mud Bay,) which was anchored S. E. of the harbor, thence round a buoy south side of the harbor, also around the first mentioned buoy and return to Dura dock. Entrance fee, one dollar, open to all fish boats with regular rig. First prize, China tea set; Second prize, silver plated Custom Tilt; third prize, watch; Fourth prize, watch.

There were sixteen entries. Owing to some accidents but twelve boats started. It was a beautiful sight to see them start with a good sailing breeze. Ed Bedford took the lead, which he kept till rounding the small Island where his fore halliard broke, but George Miller stepped up the mast with the agility of a cat, fixed it up as good as new. Ed with his gallant crew Alanson Campbell and George Miller, (although four boats had passed him during his mishap) nothing daunted, kept on soon regaining his lost ground coming up the home stretch far in advance of all the competitors, thus winning the first prize. Next came Jo. Smiths boat, Capt. Paul Lubian and James Gordan, with ten Hamlin. They were so nearly matched it was doubtful which would come in ahead, but Paul was far enough to the windward to pass the south buoy, while James had to tack, which lost him prize No 2. Paul came in ahead, James following close behind, taking the third prize. Jo. La Crosty boat, which was the last boat to leave the harbor, took the fourth prize. Everything was admirably managed throughout, and though several collisions occurred and several boats were disabled, no fouls were claimed, and all passed off harmoniously.

The managers allowed two extra prizes to the 5th and 6th boats in. Capt. Bonners vessel was occupied by quite a crowd music and dancing being the order of the day. The Bonner leaves soon with a load of wood for Milwaukee. Success to her wherever she goes.

Before the first race was finished a clock was offered as a prize to the Indians over the same course, four boats started, Daniel Comstalk took the prize.

There was a fine display of fireworks in the evening, under the direction of F. Fraser. A rifle for a gold watch, 40 numbers, two dollars each, took place on the point. Charles Moore was the winner A dance wound up the celebration. Everything was done up in good shape, and all things worked harmoniously.

The scent of new mown hay permeates the land.

There are some fine pieces of wheat in Hayes.

William Knight, of Petoskey, spent a few days in Hayes last week visiting friends.

Loren Hamlin has contracted to cut A. R. Upright's meadow.

A. R. Struthers and Moses Cooper, have purchased Dr. Hood's meadow.

Some of our citizens are now convalescent over the effect of the Fourth. We think they will fully recover in the course of two or three weeks, except the once fat pocket book.

A few deer are making themselves visible occasionally in our town. They seem to know that no Hayesite will violate the game law.

Now is the time to subscribe for the SENTINEL and get posted in regard to the campaign news and local matters. Do not depend upon borrowing your neighbor's paper, but get one of your own and be happy.

Now and then we find a person sighing after the "flesh pots of Egypt." They think if they were only some place else, life would be a great deal pleasanter; they could make a living easier, and just over there, some place other than the space they occupy is a land flowing with milk and honey.

Now after due deliberation, contemplation, and observation, we emphatically declare that there is not a better spot for a laboring man in the United States than Northern Michigan, and that right in Charlevoix county, and in the vicinity of Charlevoix. Put the above into your pipe and smoke it.

Pure cider Vinegar at B. Secor.

THE Board of Supervisors held a special session on the 6th of July. The south half of Sy—egwals Township was erected into a new Township, to be called the Township of Chandler. The first meeting of said Township for the election of officers will be on the first Monday in September, and the inspectors will be J. L. Beigle, Silas Walton and Robert Hughes.

A resolution to remove the county seat to Boyne City was defeated—lacking one vote of the requisite two thirds majority. A proposition to remove the county seat to Advance was also met.

The Board adjourned to the 17th day of August.

We shall publish the official portion of the proceedings next week.

Carpenter & Barthole mow always keep the best safest spices, also pure cider vinegar.

Gen. HASCOM, of the Engineer Corps, who has charge of the harbors on this shore, was here some time since, to ascertain the needs of the harbor, and decide upon the course of action in the expenditure of the $10,000 appropriated at the last session of Congress. He did not fully disclose his plans, but said enough to convince us that the most of the amount would be expended in dredging. The excellent condition of the channel this spring demonstrated the fact that the present extent of pier work is sufficient to hold a good channel for present needs. The superstructure will be built on the uncompleted north pier, and some other work done on brush work, etc.

The Cincinnati platform virtually repudiates all issues with Republicans. The party seems to have come over to the Republican side. They now claim to understand Republican doctrines, and ask the people to place them in power so they can enforce the same.

DAVID DAVIS, of Illinois, who was willing to take upon himself the great responsibility of acting as President of the Republic, had all his trouble and anxiety for nothing. Neither he nor Gen. Jackson received a vote at the Cincinnati Convention. Mr. Davis has two years to serve in the United States Senate, and then he will probably visit Tilden, but in what country the writer cannot tell.

General Logan never sulks and grumbles after he has made a hard fight and been beaten. His support of Gen. Garfield is hearty and earnest. He will take the stump for him, and says there is not the slightest doubt about his carrying Illinois. The strength of the Chicago ticket becomes more and more apparent as the campaign advances. All elements bearing the name of Republican, from the "scratchers" to such ultra and devoted Grant men as Gen. Logan, are united in its support.

Notice is hereby given that the following named settler has filed notice of his intention to make final proof in support of his claim, and that said proof will be made before the Clerk of the Circuit Court for Charlevoix County, Mich., at the County Seat, on Saturday, the 31st day of July, 1880, viz:

Reuben She-gwa-gar Homestead Entry No. 6011, for the S ½ of S E ¼ of Section 17, T. 34 N. of R. 7 W., and names the following witnesses to prove his continuous residence upon and cultivation of said land, viz: Louis Shikaseday, Peter Hamilton, Elias Pamp, Thomas Tagwahwaw, all of Charlevoix County, Mich.

RINALDO STRATTON, Register.

SIDEWALK NOTICE.

Whereas a majority of the resident owners of real estate on the south side of Mason street, in the Village of Charlevoix, Michigan, have petitioned the President and Common Council to have a sidewalk built on said south side of said street, between Bridge and Clinton streets, on said side of street; and the Committee on Streets and Sidewalks have considered the premises and recommended that the prayer of the petitioner be granted. Therefore, in pursuance of Section 3 of Chap. 2 of the Charter of the Village of Charlevoix, and by virtue of the Village Ordinance, that a sidewalk be built on the south side of Mason street, between Bridge and Clinton streets, on said side of street, by the adjoining owners thereon, within fourteen days from the date of the service of this notice, said sidewalk to be four feet wide, and of two inch plank laid lengthwise of the walk, supported with twenty penny spikes, upon two four-by four scantling. And it is further ordered, That the Marshal of said forthwith serve a copy of this order on each owner of lands lately occupied by the petitioners, and in case said adjoining owners shall not construct the walk as aforesaid, that said sidewalk within the time above prescribed that the Marshal shall forthwith proceed to build such sidewalk and report the cost of the same, as provided in the Sidewalk Ordinance of said village of Charlevoix.

At a session of the Probate Court for said County, held at the Probate office, in the Village of Charlevoix on the Second day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty. Present, J. Milo Eaton, Judge of Probate.

In the matter of the Estate of Marcus K. Bradford, late of Charlevoix, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified of Lucy W. Hall, praying for license to sell certain real estate therein described. Thereupon it is ordered, that the 26th day of July next, at the office in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the heirs at law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office, in the Village of Charlevoix and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel a newspaper printed and circulated in said county, three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

REGULAR communication of Charlevoix Lodge, F. & A. M., this (Tuesday) evening.

E. A. H. COLE, of South Arm, is building a new residence, and went to Traverse City this week for material.

The schooner yacht Danville, of Cleveland, Ohio, manned by several Cleveland gentlemen, put on a lark, was in port Tuesday.

A large force of carpenters are at work on Resort cottages. Six lots have been purchased lately upon which cottages will be erected.

J. A. BAKER, of Hayes township, cut ten tons of hay last week. He has eight acres of winter wheat ready to harvest. In some sections of Hayes and Evangeline the crops look well.

WITH Messrs. Harry Johnson at the throttle and C. M. Lents, with his kind and courteous treatment to passengers, the Grand Rapids & Indiana railroad company can boast of a good railroad team.

THE Elk Rapids Progress is coming out for Hancock & English. It hasn't got far to jump, for it has been lingering around the encamp camp since its birth, lending aid and comfort. It might better put at the head of its columns, Hancock and Noble, or Dexter and English.

GEN. HASCOM has officially announced his intention to build the superstructure on the north pier and expend the balance of the $10,000 appropriation in dredging. This will make in Charlevoix harbor fully thirteen feet of water and widen the channel. The work will be commenced in about thirty days.

H. N. THYNG, engineer of the M. W. Wright, at Little Traverse, lost $26 from his vest pocket. W. F. Long, engineer of the Star, and P. S. Brown, engineer of the Wilson Brothers, were there and mistreating one of the employes of Lyon & Son, they hobbled him into giving up the money to Young.

FOR the sake of their families we forbear making public the names of the six jayrunes who, in deliberating on the fate of their fellow citizen one day last week, at Lewis' Hall, pelted the sheriff with plaster and clubs through the open windows, and held a Twelfth of July celebration in the hall, with the drums of the Orangemen, besides exciting up other unjustifiable tricks.

THE MOHAWK CLUB, numbering about thirty of the leading citizens of Grand Rapids, will arrive to-day or to-morrow to go into camp at some point on Pine lake. They will remain in camp three days and spend the time in fishing and hunting. Mr. Standling, the Commissary, is now engaged in selecting a camping ground and providing for the reception of the club. Gen. Heath, Inspector General of State troops, is President of the club.

VIEW OF CHARLEVOIX.—Messrs. Ricker and Riley, artists, are engaged upon a birdseye view of Charlevoix, which, if they receive sufficient encouragement, they will lithograph and publish. The picture will give a perspective view of the harbor, Pine lake, South Arm and supplementary views of Charlevoix from the upper end, and of the resort from the village. Also Jordan and Boyne river scenery. They are masters of the work and we hope they will receive sufficient encouragement to make a success of it.

STOCKMAN has the lumber and part of the brick on the ground for his new store.

FISH.—E. H. RAMSAY, C. A. Burton and two Cleveland gentlemen caught a large number of bass and pickerel at Orchard Lake on Friday.

COTTAGES.—Geo Smiley and J. P. Woodbery, of Kalamazoo, and Mr. Heaton, of Detroit, and Mr. Estabrook, of East Saginaw, are building cottages at the Resort.

MR. HENRY BENNETT'S enlargement of the Clifford House makes it a hotel in the extent of rooms, and the thorough refitting it has received makes it now in all respects. He has named it the "Clifford House."

NEW COMERS.—F. H. Ramsey and wife, of Traverse City, have located here and have rented Mrs. Fobare's residence on Mason street. Mrs. Ramsey is a fashionable dressmaker, and Mr. Ramsey is a carpenter and builder.

THE Ladies Aid Society cleared about $200 at their stand on the 12th. This makes $72 on the 4th, and 12th, which will be properly expended in carpeting the M. E. Church. The ladies will next turn their attention toward raising chandeliers.

ENTERTAINMENT.—A panorama of 1N1 grims Progress will be exhibited at the M. E. Church on Wednesday and Thursday evenings of this week, under the auspices of the M. E. Church Society. Admission, 25 cts; children, 10 cts. It comes well recommended.

VILLAGE COUNCIL.—At the meeting of the council Saturday evening the following were allowed:

W. B. Sain, cutting sidewalk notice, $1.00
P. O'Neomber bonds, and interest sidewalks, 1.77

The council ordered crosswalks built on the south side of Mason street.

THE STATE ROADS.—James A. Keat has been appointed Local Commissioner of the South Arm and Boyne Falls State Road and J. F. Barrah of the Boyne City and Melrose State Road. Both are men fully competent for the duties of the position, and better appointments could not have been made.

LOST.—Between the Clifford House and the bridge, a spectacle case containing a pair of spectacles. Leave at this office.

—Somewhere in the village, a goldcolored sleeve button. Leave at the office.

CAMPING PARTIES.—Among the camping parties resting near the village is one which numbers in its mess Judge E. C. An Account of Some of Pennsylvania's Queer Sects.

THE River Brethren of Pennsylvania closely resemble the old Dunkards, the Amish and the Seventh Day Baptists. These plain and simple folks are scattered all over Eastern Pennsylvania. They recently held their annual love feast in Lebanon County, near Hummelstown. They had an ox roast, public feet washing, a praise meeting, and a general reunion. About six hundred persons were present.

To the stranger these various Pennsylvania German sects all look alike, but upon close inquiry their beliefs, forms of worship, habits and customs are found to be different. One sect baptizes by plunging the convert three times into the water forward; another just plunges its converts into the water backward. One uses no buttons on garments, another uses buttons. The Amish people use hooks and eyes only. The dress of one of those farmers is usually a very broad-brimmed black wool hat, stiff and strong; a dark brown cutaway coat, with a small collar and no lapels; looks and eyes in a row down the front; dark pantaloons, cut straight up and down (no spring bottoms). His hair is always worn very long, and cut off straight, like a brush. Generally they are dark-haired and dark-eyed. Their style of dress has not changed in a hundred years, and their tailors have used nothing but the regulation patterns since their ancestors first crossed the sea. The young men follow closely in the paths of their fathers, and the make-up of a sixteen-year-old boy is generally the same as his fifty-year-old sire.

The women wear the plainest of garments; sarsa, brown or dark gray frocks with very narrow skirts; dark silk handkerchiefs over their shoulders; black silk and pasteboard bonnets, stiffly made on the sunbonnet pattern; a pair of rough calfskin shoes. This attired they are ready for a meeting, the market, or a marriage, as the case may be. The seventeen-year-old girl dresses like her mother and grandmother, only the child sometimes wears a silk kerchief of a color brighter than that worn by her mother. To see their pretty black eyes it is necessary to get a look at them from the front.

The assemblages at the love feast was made up of just this class of people. Some of them came twenty miles, and their conveyances covered several acres. These farmers generally own first-class horses, and they take a pride in driving to the feast in their very best turnouts. An ample stock of feed is brought with them, and the horses are tied along the fences. Four ministers or speakers were present. The feet-washing was at night. These services take place once a year before harvest, and are held to give praise to the Lord for His goodness in sending them abundant crops. The ceremony of washing feet is usually private. The men gird themselves with towels and, with a basin in hand, wash the feet of their brothers, as a lesson in humility. The women wash each other's feet in the same manner. The baptisms are private. Then follows a general rejoicing, and a roasted ox is eaten.

"You are welcome," said a broad-brim to his city visitors. "You are welcome to partake of what we have. All strangers are welcome."

In the conversation that followed, the old gentleman said: "We very rarely engage in law suits; never among ourselves. We settle our own grievances between us, stick together, intermarry, keep honest, and that's about the way we get along. If you want to find the Amish people you must go down into the Conestoga Valley in Lancaster County. The Dunkards live over in Berks and Lancaster Counties. the Seventh Day Baptists about Ephrata, which is sometimes called Dunkards-town; the Moravians are over in Bethlehem, and also in Lititz, Lancaster County. We are all pretty much all over the same cloth, but there are many writers who get us mixed up in their descriptions. Yesterday I attended the funeral of a very old Moravian over in Bethlehem. His name was Bickel, and he was nearly eighty years of age. For fifty years he was a member of the trombone quartet of the church. Their trombone playing every Easter morning before daylight, go about the city playing suitable anthems. In their graveyards are no monuments, fancy railings or fences. They are all buried in rows, rich and poor alike, men with men, and women with women. A small flat piece of boards is placed on each grave. The graves are numbered, and the record is kept in the church book. As they die they are buried, so that families are separated in the burying ground. At first sight their cemeteries look like empty grass fields.

"The Amish or Orrish people are more strict. They have no churches, but they meet at one another's farms, and one of their number does the preaching. Their dress is very simple. Many of them meet with losses, by fire or otherwise, the others contribute enough to make good the loss. If a son or daughter marries outside of their sect, he or she is disowned. In this they are very strict. They own magnificent farms, and their cucumber barns are ten times larger than their houses. No person in the world is more honest than an Orrishman. They take no part in elections, but pay their taxes.

"I see that in the courts of Berks County a very interesting case has just been decided by a Master in Chancery, in which two parties in a Mennonite congregation were fighting for a church. The congregation split because their pastor, the Rev. Mr. Oberholtzer, refused to appear in church in a regulation coat. The regulation coat is one that has buttons on one side only, and no collar. Although the color

Rev. Oberholtzer went to Conference in a regulation coat to state his case, he lost it, and then he established a new sect, calling it the New Measure Mennonites.

"The story of Rachel Kerster has never found its way into print that I have heard of. She was the only child of a rich Dunkard, and she became tired of the plain dresses and primitive customs of her people. She informed her father of this and asked to be allowed to travel and see the world. Her father became angry; one word brought on another, until finally she was disowned. She left home, and her father spent three years in finding her. She had taken refuge with a friend in a small Western town, and when she was discovered she was wearing worldly dresses. She was taken home and dressed in homespun; but she soon died."

The love feast lasted three days. Sometimes they are held in the open air, and often in a very large frame building containing table accommodations for hundreds of people, built especially for the purpose. Small congregations sometimes hold love feasts on the clean floors of a member's mammoth barn. Their service consists of song, prayer baptism by immersion, foot washing and feasting. The farmers go to the feasts in the morning and return to their homes at nightfall.—Cor. New York Sun.

He Laughed, Too.

THE Chief of Police yesterday had a visit from an old farmer living out on the Center Lime road, who had a story to tell. After two or three efforts he began:

"I vhas goin' home last night when I overtakes two men on der road. Dose fellers dey lift mid saidt would I gif 'em a ride. I laft too, and say shump in.

"Yes, I understand."

"Pooty quecksome feller laft ant saidt he likes Dutchmens, cause his uncle vhas a Dutchmans. Dat vhas all right, und so I laft too. I vhas real tickled, und I shakes all oafer."

"Yes."

"In a leetle vile one veller vants me to change a seven-dollar bill, so as he could gif some money to der orphan asylums, und he laffs ha! ha! ha! Dot tickled me some more, und I laffs too. Den de odder feller he grabs me py der collar und pulls me down behind und says dey looks in my pockets for a shentscom dot vhas stolen from de treasure. Dot makes us all laff like some goot shoke."

"I must have been funny."

"Ir vhas. Dose fellers took out my wallet und counted oop der monish. It vhas about ten dollar, und dey laft und said dot dey must go on some trips to der seashore mit dot. Dot tickled me some more, und I laft too."

"Well, what then?"

"Well, den dey shumped out und put deir fingers to dir noses und says goot bye, old Dutchmans, und aybay dey goes like some horse-races."

"And you didn't laugh at that?"

"Well, not pooty much. I vhas already to, but I shouped. If dem fellers vhas up to shokes it vhas all right, but if dey vhas robbers I vhants you to coach 'em und gif 'em some pieces of my mind like dunder! I dond like somepody to laff at me vhen dey doan feel tickled all over."—Detroit Free Press.

Marriage Fees.

A PENNSYLVANIA couple, wanting to be married, sent for Uncle Sam pastor, who was a hundred miles away enjoying a vacation. He spent $12.50 in going and returning, and gave them an engraved certificate which cost him half a dollar. The happy man gave him a ten-dollar bill for a wedding fee. A Connecticut pastor was detained half an hour from his prayer-meeting service by a loving and good-looking young couple. The gentleman handed him a dollar and a half. As he handed the fee over to his wife he quietly remarked that he didn't think the young man thought much of his bride or he would have plunked down a larger consideration. Some time ago a colored couple handed with much ceremony a dollar bill to the clergyman who married them. The same clergyman received from another couple two bits and a large pile.—Philadelphia Times.

THE North British Railway Company's plans for restoring the Tay Bridge are now published. The main features of the new structure will be two. The old long girders, which were thirteen in number, are to be replaced by twenty-six small girders, and they are to be thirty-one feet lower than they were in the old bridge. This new plan will give abundant securities for stability, but it will, of course, necessitate a lowering of the girders already standing, and it is on this ground that the plan is expected to be opposed. The people interested in the fifteen or twenty smacks that find their way up the river to the neighborhood of Perth in the course of a year will, in the name of "the navigation of the Tay," probably take considerable exception to the new plans.

A LARGE Newfoundland dog, accompanied by a small black and tan, visited a Hartford (Conn.) police officer's yard and deliberately killed a pet Scotch terrier belonging to the house. The two strange dogs carried the body away, finally leaving it on Windsor avenue.

QUICKLIME is destructive to worms, slugs and the larve of injurious insects.

THE water used in mixing bread must be tepid. If it is too hot the loaves will be full of holes.

SWEET OIL and a weak solution of lime-water make a soothing application for a burn or scald.

A FEW pieces of horseradish root placed among pickles will prevent scum from gathering on the top of the vinegar.

ONIONS.—When the tops lie down, the onions are ready to be harvested. Store in a cool airy place after being thoroughly dried in the sun.

FOWLS are very fond of milk and thrive well upon it. Sour milk will bring better returns in eggs than in any other way it can be fed.

SPRUDGE CAKE.—One egg, one cup of sugar (rounded), one-half cup of butter, one cup of sweet milk, one teaspoon saleratus, two teaspoons cream-of-tartar, two and a half cups of flour, two teaspoons lemon extract.

PIGS.—A run in a good clover pasture will be beneficial. The yards should be kept as clean as possible. A quantity of coalpicks sprinkled about the pens will deodorize and disinfect the place very satisfactorily and cheaply.

MEADOWS.—As soon as may be after the hay is gathered give the meadows a good top dressing of fine manure. This will produce a thick bottom growth to shade the ground and prevent the soil from drying up and injuring the roots of the grasses.

HARD SUGAR GINGERBREAD.—One half cup of butter, the same of cream, two cupfuls sugar, one cupful of sour milk, two eggs, one tablespoonful ginger, one teaspoonful soda, flour enough to roll. Roll half-inch thick. Cut in strips three inches wide and six long with a jagging-iron. Bake in a quick oven.

A HORSE'S hoof is of the same nature as horn. If you desire to know the effects of applying a hot shoe to a horse's hoof, place your comb on a hot stove for a minute or two, then let it cool, and see how easily it will break. A hot shoe makes the hoof brittle instead of tough.

EFFERVESCING LEMONADE.—Ingredients: The juice of six lemons, one half pint of cold water, one dessertspoonful of pounded sugar, one-half small teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Recipe: Squeeze the juice from the lemon, strain and add it to the water, and sweeten the whole with the sugar. When well mixed, put in the soda, stir well and drink while the mixture is in an effervescing state.

SCRAMBLED EGGS.—Three and one-half pounds nice brown sugar, one and one-half pints good molasses, three quarts of boiling water and one-fourth pint of tartaric acid. When cool, strain into a jug or gun and mix with this one-half ounce of essence of peppermint. Put up in bottles, cork tight and keep in a cool place. For a drink put two spoonfuls of this syrup into two-thirds of a glass of ice water and then add the third teaspoonful of soda.

HOT CAKE.—Salt some corn meal and pour over it enough scalding water or milk (water is generally used) to make it rather moist. Let it stand an hour or longer. Put two or three tablespoonfuls on a hot griddle greased with pork or lard. Set both on the surface, making the cake about an inch thick and of round shape. When browned on one side turn and brown it on the other. Serve very hot.

RENEDY FOR ROSE-BUGS.—When they infest the inches in great numbers it is sometimes practiced to shake them off on a sheet and burn them. Again, it is recommended to hang about the plants open-mouthed bottles half-filled with a mixture of sweetened water and vinegar. Many may also be killed by pouring boiling water on the ground under the bushes, but this must be done on the first appearance of the insect before the wings are formed.

Something About Eggs.

An old dealer in eggs has lately been [illegible], and responded as follows: "Comparatively few fresh eggs reach consumers through dealers. The city dealers receive them chiefly from brokers, who pick them up in every direction, of all sizes and sorts, and in almost every conceivable condition. When prices rule low, they are held for an advance, and a buyer must be adept to distinguish the stale eggs from the fresh. Some eggs keep better than others, owing to the state of the shell, which is according to its health and vigor of the hen. The white of an egg when fresh is clear and colorless. When it has received a faint tinge of color, the egg has begun to spoil and is unfit to be eaten by itself, but will do for cooking purposes. There is a difference in the flavor of eggs. A turkey's egg does not taste like that of a hen; flavor of different breeds of the common hen exists in a great measure from the condition of the egg, whether fresh or stale. The richness comes from the condition of the fowl." We may add that the food of fowls has also with the quality of eggs, as the food and condition of cows has to do with the quality of milk.

MISS SIDNEY PAUL GILL, who died in Newark, N. J., recently, was the author of the hymn, "I Want to be an Angel."

MARK TWAIN has two new books in hand, and it is likely that one of them at least will make its appearance before many months.

MRS. FRANCES HODGSON BURNETT, the novel writer, will pass the summer with Mrs. Isabel Boecher Hooker at Hartford, Conn.

MR. THOMAS HUGHES sails for this country August 12, to supervise the organization of a Tennessee Land Company. He will lecture during September and October.

LONGFELLOW'S "Mask of Pandora" is to be brought out as an opera at the Boston Theater. The book will probably add much renown to the blank verse. Wonderfully true and correct costumes are promised, including a ballet in the flowing Grecian robes.

IT is stated that when M. Renan has finished the volume on Marcus Aurelius, which is to conclude his series of the "Origin of Christianity," he intends to devote himself to writing a history of the Jews, and hopes to bring the work within the compass of three volumes.

OF Edgar Poe, not long before he died, Mr. David Graham Adee writes in the Bazaar: "He was below the middle height, and dressed in rather rusty black broadcloth. His collar was turned back, fully exposing the beautiful neck and line, intellectual countenance. He wore his dark locks long and negligently, the broad massive brow commanded respect and reverence; the almost boyish face was ornamented with, in those days, the foreign appendage, only worn by officers, of a small mustache; and the superb eyes, large, dark and lustrous, burned with the godlike glow of genius."

World Make a Good Newspaper Man.

MR. FAMMIS, of Sandersville, has a large rattlesnake, about five feet long, which he captured on the 5th of last October, and which he has kept in a box with a wire net front, ever since that time. Though he has had it seven months, the snake has never eaten anything at all since it was captured. It "lives on air," and if it could be converted into the genus homo, retaining its natural habits, it would make a splendid newspaper man.—Louisville Courier-Journal.

A Shower of Lightning.

THE Geneva (Switzerland) correspondent of the London Times, in a recent letter to that paper, says:

"A remarkable electrical phenomenon occurred at Charens on the afternoon of Thursday last. Heavy masses of rain-cloud hid from view the mountains which separate Fribourg from Montreux, but their summits were from time to time lit up with vivid flashes of lightning, and a heavy thunder storm seemed to be raging in the valleys of the Avants and the Alliaz. No rain was falling near the lake, and the storm still appeared far off, when a tremendous peal of thunder shook the houses of Charens and Favel to their foundations. At the same instant a magnificent cherry tree near the cemetery, measuring a meter in circumference, was struck by lightning. Some people who were working in a vineyard hard by saw the electric fluid play about a little girl who had been gathering cherries, and was already thirty paces from the tree. She was literally folded in a sheet of fire. The vine-dressers had in terror from the spot. In the course of a few minutes, reunited into three groups, none of them within two hundred and fifty paces of the cherry tree, some one noticed a luminous cloud. They felt as if they were being struck in the face with balls tenuous but grave!, and when they counted each other sparks of electricity passed from their finger ends. At the same time a column of fire was seen to descend from the direction of Chatelard, and it is averred that the electric fluid could be distinctly heard as it rushed from that point of the lime pailing of vault in the cemetery. The strangest part of the story is that neither the family of the people in the cemetery, nor the vine-dressers, appear to have been hurt, the only inconvenience complained of being an unpleasant sensation in the joints, as if they had been violently twisted, a remarkable thing which was felt more or less acutely for a few hours after. The explanation of this phenomenon is probably to be found in Prof. C——'s theory of the way in which lightning descends, as described in a letter on the effect of lightning on trees, printed in the Times of May 18. The professor contends that it falls in a shower, and that a perpendicular stroke is not necessary for a tree to be struck, but that it runs along branches of trees until it is all gathered in the trunk, which it bursts or tears asunder in its effort to reach the ground. In the instance in question the trunk of the cherry tree is as completely shivered as if it had been exploded by a charge of dynamite. A part of the shower which destroyed the tree fell near enough to the girl who was standing, but, distributed over the grass, left her unharmed, and was so disseminated in the cemetery that the six persons upon whom the electric ram descended escaped without serious injury."

What the Democrats have Accomplished.

The pending contest before the people must present upon principle, upon principle alone, upon living issues or less real, upon the party record as it is called—that is upon what the parties have done and what they propose to do. In respect to historical questions the Democratic leaders claim to say for themselves. They used to speak with pride, to the encouragement of their adherents, of a score or two of years ago or more. It would be dangerous for them to invite attention to the past in this way just now. If we go back a quarter of a century to the events which led to the war, or fifteen or twenty years to the time of the war itself, we shall not find record which they would wisely choose to a political battle-field. The Republicans could desire nothing better than such a review as this, and the record of a successful and triumphant party which it would produce. If we come down to the period of reconstruction which succeeded the war we shall see that the Democrats slowly and with great reluctance adapted themselves to the change in which were forced by the result of the war. Their spirit and their methods were such as to guess the sentiments of the people and to exercise the power to obtain that representation of the Union for which their professors had long clamored. In respect to the reconstruction of the Southern states, for which they accused the government, they have assumed the great concern, they have assumed local management. They have rather favored than helped the process. The right of suffrage, its own local Governments without Federal interference is something for which the South is under no obligation to the Democratic party. It has been guaranteed and maintained by the Republican Administrations of President Hayes. The most plausible objection to this peaceful policy has rested upon the threatening attitude of the Democratic party, founded as it is upon a solid north and as near as only forty-seven Electoral votes against the nine Confederate states give it absolute power.

Coming down still later and examining the history of the Democratic party since it regained control of both branches of Congress we do not find that the case of the Democrats is much better. While that record is one that they can show even in a narrow and sectional sense in reference to this vexed Southern question? How have the late Confederate States, which are holding the Democratic party in, done for more than a generation, profited by this Congressional restoration? The Democratic party is given said government in these states. As has just been said, the thing has been done under Republican Administration. When the Democrats met in extra session they found no troops to be removed from State capitals; they found no Governors and Legislatures not elected by the people but maintained by Federal force. They found no such power under the control except certain revenue officers, whose presence was a mere mockery, and the small and [illegible] force as an effort to expel the laws relating to Federal elections—laws which applied and were intended to apply by no means to the South alone. The Democrats did not succeed even in repealing them, and in every effort to do so they incurred signal rebuke at once bolstering Democratic defeats throughout the North. At last the attack upon the election laws dwindled to a mere change in the method of appointing election officers. The leaders chose little more than a year ago upon a boundless fire and slaughter against Supervisors and Deputy Marshals in the closing days of the session avowedly announced that they did not desire to disturb these officers in the enforcement of the election laws, but only wished to have them named by the courts from both parties. That is the sum of the work for the South which the Democrats have done since they took charge of affairs in Congress.

It is not in the story of history then, even though a year old, which less twenty years old, that the Democrats can make quite fair pause. Despairing of what they have done they must fall back upon what they intend to do. Promises do not count for much in a Presidential canvass, especially when they suggest an unfavorable comparison with performance.—N. Y. Evening Post (ind.)

A Striking Comparison.

Congressman McKinder was interviewed the other day, by the Cincinnati Commercial, when he remarked that this would not be a personal contest between Garfield and Hancock, though Garfield would have the advantage in a comparison of records, but it would be a contest between the two parties as to which is most fit to be trusted with the government of the country. Mr. McKinley then made the following striking comparisons:

In 1860, after 20 years of Democratic rule, a government 6 per cent. bond sold at 89 cents.

In 1880, after 20 years of Republican rule, a government 4 per cent. bond sells for $1 07.

In 1860, after 20 years of Democratic rule, a loan of $1,000,000 exhausted the market in six months.

At the end of 20 years of Republican rule a loan of $1,000,000,000 was taken in a single day.

In 20 years of Republican rule we find—

An increase of population of 60 per cent.

An increase of general agricultural exports of 600 per cent.

An increase of exports of manufactured articles of 253 per cent.

An increase of internal commerce of 700 per cent.

An increase of railroad mileage of 187 per cent.

In 1860, after 20 years of Democratic rule, congress authorized a loan of $25,000,000 to pay current expenses.

In 1880, after 20 years of Republican rule, the secretary of the treasury pays $1,000,000 a day contracted for a war brought on by a rebel Democratic south, which now wants power again so as to stop the waving of the bloody shirt the wearing of which in Hancock's chief glory and his whole available stock on a candidacy for the presidency.

In 1860, after 20 years of Democratic rule the balance of trade against the country was over $20,000,000.

In May-31, 1880, after 20 years of Republican rule, the balance of trade was over $122,000,000 in favor of the country.

These are facts which the people are not likely to forget. They touch the very essence of the question at issue this year. It is no answer to these striking facts for the Democratic journals to say that Gen. Hancock was "a superb soldier." The question is whether the Democratic party, with its bad record, or the Republican party, with its good record, shall be given control of the government.

As exchange says that "it would be interesting to know how English," the Democratic nominee for Vice President "got his start in life" in the regular old fashion all way, still, it may answer politicians to re-mind, not run down as a prudent cause reign reenbacker. No miracles will be necessary to that the Democratic ticket that year.

Alex. H. Stephens's Testimony.

The Augusta Chronicle of June 10 reports the substance of the Hon. Alexander H. Stephens, who has just returned to his district. From it are taken these extracts:

If the Democratic party made no blunders, Hancock and English would go into the presidential civil and there would be no dispute about the count. They must stay in the ship, don't go off in the little skiffs. The ship was the good old Jeffersonian creed of Democracy. * * * Stand fast to the Jeffersonian principles, make no blunder, and the Democracy will win a great victory. He knew Hancock, and would vouch for him as a great soldier and a great civilian. English was as true to Democratic principles as the needle is to the pole.

Gen. Weaver the candidate of the Greenback party, was a very clever man, but he had taken the wrong road. He advised him to come down and join the Democratic ranks.

He knew Gen. Garfield well. He had always regarded him as a man of rare ponderity and of high intellect. He did not appear Gen. Garfield because of any defect in morals, so far as he knew, nor of any defect in intellect. He never heard of the credit mobilier scandal until after he was nominated. He did not know whether the charges were true or not. He had not him as often and looked upon him as a Christian gentleman. He opposed Garfield not because of these charges, but he disagreed with him on political principles, and would support Hancock against him. He opposed him because he thought he advocated dangerous measures which were ruinous to this country.

For 20 years the Democratic party has been under a cloud—but the clouds are breaking away—the light is breaking in upon us. We will carry the election next November, and then the work of the last 20 years will be undone and buried under the ground forever."

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

Domestic.

A WASHINGTON dispatch of the 7th says the reports so far received from the census in Vermont indicated such a decrease in population that it seemed doubtful if she will have more than two Congressmen under the next apportionment. Some counties show a falling off of from ten to twelve per cent.

A FEW nights ago a farm-house near Francesta, Orange County, Minn., caught fire, and the owner in his efforts to save it forgot all about his sleeping family, two members of which—girls aged three and eleven years, respectively—were burned to death, and a third aged seventeen was frightfully injured.

It is estimated that the loss to farmers by the recent breaking of the Sni levee was $200,000 on corn, $200,000 on wheat and $100,000 on cottage, horses, etc.

In the case of the persons killed by the explosion of the boiler of the steamboat Mary, at Lake Minnetonka, Minnesota, the coroner's jury finds that G. H. Halstead, the owner of the boat, was criminally negligent in not permitting an inspection of the boiler by a competent engineer.

One of the suits brought by a friend of Wm. Kelloch for libel to that gentleman was dismissed by a San Francisco Court on the 8th. The Judge declared it as his opinion that the suit was not brought in the interest of the people.

THE official statement compiled at the Interior Department shows that the issues of postage-stamps, stamped envelopes and postal cards during the fiscal year ended June 30 last, foot up an aggregate of $31,-865,050, being an increase of nearly $3,500,000 over the total for the preceding fiscal year, or 12·60 per cent. The greatest proportional increase is in the item of postal-cards, the issues of which amounted to $4,753,400 during the last fiscal year, as against $3,217,920 for the previous year. The issues of newspaper and periodical stamps increased 13 1-10 per cent. the totals being $1,098,432 for the fiscal year 1879, and $1,250,803 for the fiscal year of 1880.

THIRTY buildings in Tyrone, Pa., were destroyed by fire on the morning of the 8th. Loss, $125,000; insurance, $75,000.

DURING the month of June 13,676,-880 bushels of grain were shipped from New York. This exceeds by 3,880,000 bushels the largest monthly shipment ever before made from that port.

WILLIAM MCGIBBON, a New York stock broker, has been arrested, charged with complicity with Jerome and Patchen in securities the books recently lost in that city by Braxton, Ives & Co.

PRIVATE dispatches from Arkansas City Kas., received in St. Louis on the 9th, say Captain Payne, at the head of 300 settlers, had evaded the vigilance of the United States troops and invaded and taken possession of a tract of land in the Indian Territory, contrary to the proclamation of the President. It will be remembered that he invaded the Territory last spring, in violation of the President's proclamation, and was ejected by the military. It is said he defies the authority of the Government, and meets arrest and trial to determine in the courts whether his act is in violation of any law.

TWO masked men boarded a train on the Missouri Pacific Railroad at Windsor Station, on the morning of the 8th, and robbed the United States Express Company's safe of $700.

JAMES B. GEORGE, a wholesale boot and shoe merchant of Baltimore, fell from a fourth-story window in his store a few mornings ago, and was instantly killed.

STEPHENS & WILCOX, dry-goods merchants of Omaha, have failed, with liabilities of $70,000.

SAN FRANCISCO has a population of 233,959, including 3,060 Chinese.

Personal and Political.

THE Republican State Convention of Iowa to select candidates for State officers will be held at Des Moines, Wednesday, August 25.

ATTORNEY-GENERAL DEVENS, in reply to Secretary Sherman, says that vacancies occurring during the session of the United States Senate, and appointments to which have not been confirmed by the Senate, can be filled by the President after the adjournment of Congress and the commissions so filled will hold the expiration of the next succeeding session of the Senate.

CONGRESSMAN W. D. WASHBURN has been unanimously renominated by the Republicans of the Third Minnesota District. In the First District Mark H. Dunnell was renominated by the regular Republican Convention and W. D. Ward received the nomination at the hands of a bolting faction. The Republicans of the Ninth Illinois District have renominated John R. Lewis for Congress, and the Democrats of the Fifteenth District, John R. Eden and William Osborne, there being a hitch in the last-named district.

THE Virginia Readjusters met in State Convention at Richmond on the 7th, adopted resolutions relating to all issues mainly, but leaving Hancock and ex-Governor Kemper in full control. They also resolved to nominate candidates for Congress in all the Districts in the State. There were 600 delegates, including fifty colored men, present.

THE Republicans of the Twenty-sixth District of Pennsylvania have nominated J. B. McCracken for Congress.

THE Republicans of the Seventh Wisconsin District on the 9th renominated Herman L. Humphrey for Congress. Cyrus C. Carpenter has been renominated by the Republicans of the Ninth Iowa District, and ex-Congressman B. B. Small has received the Republican nomination in the Second Minnesota Congressional District.

COLONEL W. F. PELTON, nephew of Samuel J. Tilden, died at the Everett House, New York City, on the 8th, aged forty-two years.

JEROME ANN PATCHELL, the Richmond brokers arrested for having fine securities in their possession, were released on the 8th, on a charge of grand larceny, and committed for trial.

JUDGE WILLIAM LAWRENCE, of Ohio, has accepted the position of First Comptroller of the Treasury, to succeed Judge Potter, resigned.

A. H. PETTIBONE has been unanimously nominated for Congress by the Republicans of the First District of Tennessee. The Democrats of the Fifth Congressional District of Missouri have renominated R. H. Paine.

Foreign.

PARIS dispatches of the 9th say that the Papal Nuncio to Madrid has declared that the Vatican could break off relations with France if the March decrees were enforced against any religious orders.

CHUNG HOW, the Chinese Ambassador who negotiated the Burlingame treaty, has died of consumption, at Shanghai, aged fifty-three years. He was born in Manchuria, and was originally a soldier. He rose to be a general, and was decorated with a peacock feather for bravery. He was a member of the Tsung-li-Yamen, or Foreign Office, and was sent to the United States and the European Powers on a special mission. He was considered a very able man, and was a favorite with the Emperor.

THE Marquis of Lansdowne, a large landed proprietor in Ireland, and a member of the British Cabinet, has resigned for the reason that he is unable conscientiously to support the Government's compensation for Disturbances-in-Ireland bill. There were rumors on the 8th of other resignations for the same reason.

THE Spanish Cabinet has decided to indemnify the owners of the American steamer Atlanta, illegally detained in Porto Rico waters.

A SEVERE earthquake occurred in various parts of Switzerland a few days ago. Several persons were killed, and the summit of Schienberg, near Quaien, fell, overwhelming a large forest.

THE Porte has sent three transports laden with troops and munitions of war to Prevesa, with instructions to disembark steadily.

AT an official banquet at the Chinese Embassy in St Petersburg on the night of the 8th representatives of all powers except Russia were present.

AT a Cabinet meeting in Washington on the 9th it was decided that the money appropriated for improvement of rivers and harbors should be spent under the direction of the War Department at the rate of $250,000 per month, the work in the Northern States to be done during the summer and in the Southern States during the winter months.

THE Earl of Kenmere, another member of the British Cabinet, on the 8th announced his intended resignation, to cause the duress of his objections to the Government's Compensation bill.

A CONSTANTINOPLE telegram of the 9th says the Porte had offered a money indemnity to Montenegro instead of territory.

FAMINE FEVER prevails to a considerable extent in County Mayo, Ireland, and the Government has sent a physician thither to investigate its nature and extent.

THE Sultan of Zanzibar is on his way to England.

LATER NEWS.

SECRETARY SCHURZ stated on the 10th that orders would be immediately issued to employ all necessary military force to prevent any occupation of the Indian Territory by the Payne expedition, or any similar unlawful intruders.

ON the 9th, in a letter to the Secretary of the Treasury, Judge Lawrence, of Ohio, declined the office of First Comptroller of the Treasury. It was rumored in Washington on the 10th that after forwarding the letter of declination, the Judge had accepted the position.

Verax, Jun.

Arthur Stanton Wagar was born in North Hudson, Hillsdale, Mich., on the 29th day of March, 1859, and died at Cedar, Sarasota Co., Colorado, June 17th, 1880.

He was the son of Christopher and Elsie A. Wagar. He leaves many relatives and friends to mourn his early death.

Mr. Wagar left Mayville the latter part of March, and went to Denver City, and at the time was in the best of health and spirits. He died, and there his brother, as soon as possible was called to be by his youthful side to cool and soothe his lonely homesickness. The grief of the bereaved mother can be imagined, under these circumstances. The father had deceased some years before.

On Sunday P. M. July 18th a funeral service in memory of Arthur was held in the school house at Norwood. The funeral sermon, of which he was a member, caused the room where the services was held to be draped in mourning, and with appropriate and mourning badges attended in a body, in solemn procession. The service was sweet, as it was solemn. The sermon was preached by Rev. Mr. Hamilton, and very solemn and impressive. The afflicted family have in their really heartfelt sympathy and prayers of a large circle of the community of which Mr. Wagar was a member, and the blessing and the bitterness of the bereaved.

Small Wives and Parasols.

SMALL WIVES are often highly commended by husbands of experience and judgment. There is, also, among men of undoubted taste a general impression that a small wife is a good thing. This does not seem to be a reasonable view of the matter. One cannot have too much of a good thing, and so long as a large wife rests no more than a small one, the former ought, apparently, to be regarded as the better. The origin of the popular approval of small wives is, doubtless, the fact that women's souls do not vary at the sizes of their bodies. The same quantity of soul is put into a small woman that is put into a large woman. Of course, the amount of soul in the possession of the small woman seems unusually large when compared with her body, and hence arises the general belief that the smaller the woman the more soul she has, and, consequently, the greater is her value. In point of fact, the small wife is of no more intrinsic value than the large wife, and in spite of the praise which is lavished upon her by unreflecting observers, she is attended with inconveniences which seriously interfere with her usefulness.

That wives will carry parasols in sunny weather is universally known. Nothing can induce them to give up this habit, and though in some cases a wife will let her husband hold her parasol, most wives are firmly convinced that no man has sense enough to hold a parasol as it should be held. Now when a wife and her husband are of the proper proportioned height the parasol is not an evil of very much consequence, but when the smaller wife carries a parasol and walks by the side of her husband, the ribs of the parasol are brought to a level with his eyes, and the latter are placed in imminent danger. This leads to grave disasters, and ultimately exchanges the husband and wife from one another. When a husband has had one eye totally destroyed and the other seriously injured, he is usually ready, no matter how much he may have loved his small wife, to tell her that home forth she must choose between him and her parasol. Of course she cannot, with any self-respect, give up the latter, and thus two hearts originally beat as one are sundered forever and beat in solitude and grief.

Few people have any idea of the amount of eyes that are annually ruined by the parasols of small wives. In the year 1876 it is estimated that in the United States alone two hundred and sixty eyes were totally put out, and seven hundred and nine were more or less injured. No accurate table of the number of calamities produced by the same cause has been made, but the fact that about two-thirds of all the divorced men in the State of Illinois are unemployed gives us some idea of the extent to which the parasol in the hands of a wife objectionably small ruins the peace of families.

What is the proper remedy for this giant evil? This is the question which interests every man who has or who contemplates taking a small wife. It will not do to increase the length of the parasol handle inversely as the height of the wife. There is a certain standard of length of the parasol handle, beyond which it cannot be increased, for the reason that when the handle is too long the parasol does not cast a shadow which can be kept in position over a bonnet with any certainty. Equally impracticable would be any device for increasing the height of wives, so as to bring their parasols above the level of their husband's eyes. Already the backbreeds of women are made as high as possible, and, if any attempt is made to increase their height, women would be totally unable to walk. Of course, the wise man who is still unmarried, and who knows the danger that accompany the parasol of the small wife, can resolve to marry no woman whose parasol will not reach at least six inches above the level of his eyes; but the man who is already married to a small wife cannot better his situation by making good resolutions as to the selection of his second wife.

It may be said that the small wife should be required to hold her parasol in such a way as not to endanger her husband's eyes. Of course this is physically possible, but he knows little of the nature of woman who fancies that any wife will submit to dictation as to how she shall carry her parasol. When her husband remarks, "There, my dear, my other eye is gone!" she merely says, "How can you be so stupid?" and calmly lays all the blame upon him. If requested to keep her parasol out of her husband's eyes, she either flatly refuses and tells him to attend to his own affairs—as if he has no right to feel any interest in his eyes—or she bursts into tears and says that if he cannot walk with her without insulting her he had better stay at home. The parasol is probably dearer to a woman than any other earthly thing, and she will carry it in what she considers the proper way, though all the male sex should be blinded thereby.

The only apparent defense against the parasol is to cover the ends of its ribs with large india-rubber feelers. No such end should be placed a sphere of solid rubber of at least an inch in diameter. By no possibility could the human eye be injured by contact with so large and soft a substance, and the husband of a small wife, whose parasol should be rendered thus innocuous, could walk with her in a crowded street in safety. It is evident, however, that nothing except stringent legislation will induce the women of our country to consent to having their parasols decorated with rubber spheres. If sorely requested to do so by their husbands they will unhesitatingly refuse, and, in most instances, will assert that the request is deliberately intended to make them ridiculous. The Legislature, however, can very properly enforce laws for the protection of the eyes of male citizens. That a woman should be allowed to carry a weapon that constantly menaces her husband with blindness is a reproach to our civilization. We forbid men to carry pistols and knives, and we should equally forbid women to carry the dangerous and sometimes deadly parasol now in constant use.—N. Y. Times.

The Excellence of Marriage.

HAPPY unions are always voluntary, not only at the beginning, but as long as life lasts. Love cannot be made free by a change of statutes. It cannot be bound or loosed under any circumstances. If the State should listen to the petitions of those who ask that sex relations be exempted from control, the relations would soon be overrun with the experience of a century would convince the world that the old, long-tried, negative solution of the sex question is the wise one. There are evident reasons why such a result would come. In all the past emotional experience of the race it has been found impossible to create an intense idealization of more than one object at one time: it has been found, too, that when such idealization has been tested by knowledge and time, it does not diminish, but deepen; and that the effect of this long-continued idealization is to create the best conditions of development, both for those who exercise it, and for those toward whom it is directed. Now, if the conditions of happiness are once secured, they should be maintained. It is not possible to bring out all the results of this mutual sex idealization in any short period of association. It is very fact that the association is a permanent one gives it earnestness and dignity. It would not be possible to extract from a half-dozen associations, extending over twenty-five years, the same amount of the character-developing element that would come from one fortunate association lasting for the same time. When we are once sure of wedded love, integrity and affection of some friend through long experience, we spend no more brain activity in keeping his peculiarities of character and in adapting ourselves to them. The cessation of husband and wife is rather moral and affectional than intellectual. It is a rest, a certainty, a point of departure for all other activities. Once settled, and safely settled, we waste no power in readjusting these relations, but take the fruit as it ripens, without the need of spreading the old and planting new trees.—North American Review.

An Ancient Indian Republic.

THE political principles embodied in our Constitution remind, among others, of the fine principles of the sort adopted in this land. They are very similar, at least in practice, to the principles which governed the Iroquois, originally embracing five and afterward eight Indian nations who occupied Western New York and the shores of Lakes Erie and Ontario, where they were surrounded by the Algonquin Lenapes. The Iroquois alliance was the most permanent and powerful on this continent. They were the only Indians who ever attempted seeing other tribes intervening themselves by internal dissensions, formed a confederacy in which military glory and tribal union were carried to the highest aboriginal perfection. Each tribe or canton was independent and each was bound to no every other by ties of general interest and honor, very much as these States are; and each tribe had a voice in the general councils and a sort of veto power. Affairs of common concern were decided in a general meeting of the Sachems of all the nations usually held where the village of Onondaga now stands. The Iroquois followed the custom of the ancient Romans by encouraging other nations to unite with them, and by admitting tribes or parts of tribes constituted in war into their confederacy. Thus they so increased in strength that early in the seventeenth century they had overcome all adjacent tribes, and in another 100 years had the whites not colonized the country would, no doubt, have absorbed all the Indian nations between Canada and the Gulf of Mexico. Their Sachems were chosen by the general voice for courage and wisdom. They lived in noble simplicity, accepting no pay, giving away their share of the spoils of war and the perquisites of peace, despising all pecuniary profit and every unworthy action. They looked for reward only to the respect and love of their people, and, though nominally savages, evinced the best and loftiest traits of civilization. The Iroquois were at first composed of the Mohawks, Oneidas, Onondagas, Cayugas and Senecas, to whom the Tuscaroras, Hurons and Algonquin-Mississaugas (from Canada) were afterward added. They felt their superiority, and possessed a degree of valor which made them feared by all other tribes. A Mohawk, Oneida or Cayuga would put to flight, single-handed, a score of the New England aboriginals, and an ancient chief would issue orders to tributary nations with the dignified authority of a Roman dictator, and was as implicitly obeyed. Slavery was unknown among them. They were celebrated for their eloquence—the Cayuga Logan, the Seneca Red Jacket and the Onondaga Garangula were good examples—and women were more respected than in any other Indian tribes. The matrons were a conservative force in the state, being represented in the public councils and exercising a prohibitory influence in questions involving peace or war. In some respects we do not seem to have gained very much on our Iroquois predecessors.—N. Y. Times.

The Turquoise Mines of New Mexico.

LEAVING the ambulance with a mile of the mines, we toiled wearily along the mountains, well named the Rocky. Their surface is strewn with fragments, broken as if chipped with hammers—a rugged pavement, which bruised our feet, tore our shoes and wore out our patience; and when at last we reached the first mine, we thought it but a continuation of the Cerritos. The most ancient is much the largest, and to this we directed our steps. Under the dizzy ranges which overhang it is a sheltered recess, blackened with smoke and bedded with canes made by campfires of Indians, who still frequent the spot, in search of the precious chalchuite. With difficulty we reached this cave, and, looking over the edge, looked down and saw, not a narrow, black shaft, but half a mountain was gone. Undoubtedly the mineral lay here which, through countless generations, furnished the Indian Kings with their most valued ornaments. The yawning pit is two hundred feet deep and more than three feet wide at the bottom. Probably it was work of aborigines before the Soto's requiem mingled with the voice of the mountain wind. A barren valley, which the sacky mountains lift their high heads. On the southwest it opens toward the Rio Grande in a measureless vista, where earth and sky appear to meet. A plain, oppressive in its vastness, lying in the midst of a scene wildly dernase, its sameness relieved by the solitary peaks Sandia and Albuquerque. In every direction mountains grim and fixed as walls of adamant, apparently impovable as the throne of God. Low in the horizon one feathery cloud hung motionless in a sapphire sky. The world seemed stricken dead. No verdure to cool the parched grass; no water, "the eye of the earth" glancing up toward heaven; no waving branches, beckoning like friendly hands to cool shade and shelter; no wagon-road or foot-path to mark the track of men; not a sound to break a stillness which it but the hush of profound peace, but the everlasting silence of death.

Long before I joined my companions I had heard stories of exultation, and, wondering what prospector had "struck it." I learned that a piece of chalchuite had been brought out of the lining of a seam where it had lain under the roots of a stunted shrub, in appearance not unlike spikewood. It was over an inch in length by half an inch in thickness; a large and lovely specimen, the color sea-green, delicately shaded into blue—the latter the result of decomposition, so the scientist said.

The owner of this "regular bonanza" was our driver. He made no effort to conceal his delight; and with reason, for it was a rare piece of mineral, and the lucky miner to obtain it with so little trouble, or even to get it at all. Such a stone the gentle and gracious Montezuma might have worn in his signet-ring or set in the clasp of his green mantle of feather-work. Such a gem would have made still brighter the bright eyes of the laughing Princess Nenezain, the gifted darling, whose death was the crowning horror of the Noche Triste.—*Mrs. Governor Wallace, in N. Mosquitoes in China.

HOTEL charges in China are not too economical, but the traveler must reconcile himself to pay his bill when he leaves any place for a trip that he thinks may be short, but which may exceed his idea of the time required. Happening to be away for four days, I found that the charges for food and bed at the hotel and a walking-stick which I had had left behind were the same as those charged to a family which resided in the house. Henceforth, when I went abroad, I took those little things with me, and found a profit accruing on return. One finds soap and lamp duly charged as extras in all Eastern hotels; wearied at the end of a long day's excursion, he calls for a candle and finds that it is the mosquito. This blood-thirsty little creature in China will take no denial. Worried by the heat of the day—the moist heat that so enervates one—a tired traveler will seek mid-day rest. When he has carefully resounded through the earth, and given that gentle waking up toward heaven; no waving branches, beckoning like friendly hands to cool shade and shelter; no wagon-road or foot-path to mark the track of men; not a sound to break a stillness which it but the hush of profound peace, but the everlasting silence of death.

Wiles of the Heathen Chinee.

RUMORS are current that a well-known citizen of Yuba City was recently the victim of a well-arranged swindle by Chinese confederates. "Keen and wily" Mongols, as Brecher styles them. The story, as told, is that the citizen, lately becoming a happy father, was desirous of purchasing a fresh milch cow, and thought himself fortunate in finding one owned by a Chinaman a few miles up Feather River. John brought the cow to town accompanied by a scrubby-looking youngster of a calf, apparently about a week old, and receiving the price stipulated, departed. When in the evening the citizen went out to draw the lacteal fluid with which to nourish citizen junior he quickly found that the cow was dry, and that the calf was a four-bit scrub orphan, adopted for this special occasion. He went straightway to the house and cautioned the good wife to say nothing about the matter, which injunction she has since strictly observed.—Marysville (Cal.) Ledger.

A Poor Woman's Gift.

A POOR Irish woman went to a venerable priest in Boston, last week, says the Pilot, and asked him to forward to Ireland her help for the famine sufferers.

"How much can you spare?" asked the priest.

"I have one hundred dollars saved," she said, "and I can spare that."

The priest reasoned with her, saying that her gift was too much for her means, but she was firm in her purpose. It would do her good to know that she had helped—she could rest happier thinking of the poor families she had saved from hunger and death. The priest received her money with moistened eyes.

"Now, what is your name?" he asked. "that I may have it published."

"My name," said the brave soul, counting over her money; "don't mind that, sir. Just send the help, and God will know my name."

The Rabbit as a Pugilist.

A FEW days ago, while riding in the mountain, Mr. Fogg's attention was called to a certain spot by a peculiar sound, caused by some animal in distress. Mr. Fogg, upon examination, found a black snake had secured in its coil a young rabbit, and was attempting to prepare for its dinner the little creature, after the mode of procedure the snake always follows. After a little while his attention was called to another spot, by the approach of the mother rabbit, who, bristled and ready for the fight, attacked the snake until he was put to flight and released her young. Like a great General, the old rabbit followed close upon the enemy, biting the snake until he secured himself by crawling into his den in the hollow of a tree.—Blue Ridge (Va.) Echo.

Mosquitoes in China.

HOTEL charges in China are not too economical, but the traveler must reconcile himself to pay his bill when he leaves any place for a trip that he thinks may be short, but which may exceed his idea of the time required. Happening to be away for four days, I found that the charges for food and bed at the hotel and a walking-stick which I had had left behind were the same as those charged to a family which resided in the house. Henceforth, when I went abroad, I took those little things with me, and found a profit accruing on return. One finds soap and lamp duly charged as extras in all Eastern hotels; wearied at the end of a long day's excursion, he calls for a candle and finds that it is the mosquito. This blood-thirsty little creature in China will take no denial. Worried by the heat of the day—the moist heat that so enervates one—a tired traveler will seek mid-day rest. When he has carefully resounded through the earth, and given that gentle waking up toward heaven; no waving branches, beckoning like friendly hands to cool shade and shelter; no wagon-road or foot-path to mark the track of men; not a sound to break a stillness which it but the hush of profound peace, but the everlasting silence of death.

Long before I joined my companions I had heard stories of exultation, and, wondering what prospector had "struck it," I learned that a piece of chalchuite had been brought out of the lining of a seam where it had lain under the roots of a stunted shrub, in appearance not unlike spikewood. It was over an inch in length by half an inch in thickness; a large and lovely specimen, the color sea-green, delicately shaded into blue—the latter the result of decomposition, so the scientist said.

The owner of this "regular bonanza" was our driver. He made no effort to conceal his delight; and with reason, for it was a rare piece of mineral, and

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

COMMON sulphur is the best remedy for vermin on fowls.

FARMERS may hire their hard work done, but they must always do their own hard thinking.

WATER is one of the important elements, not only in rapid development of beef, but in the production of choicest qualities.

HORSERADISH SAUCE.—Two tea spoonfuls of made mustard, two of white sugar, half a teaspoonful of salt and a gill of vinegar; mix and pour over grated horseradish. This is excellent with beef.

INDIAN SUET PUDDING.—One-half pound suet, chopped fine, one cup molasses one pint milk, one egg, meal to make a very thin batter, one teaspoon ground cloves, one teaspoon ground cinnamon, one teaspoon salt, a little nutmeg, a few currants or chopped raisins. Boil or steam three hours. Sauce.

FORESTRY.—It was considered best to let grass stand until the seed was full grown, before cutting, but of late years it has become almost the universal custom to cut when most of the grass is in full bloom. The advantages gained for early cutting are, first, better hay, which is more readily eaten by cattle; second, less injury to the grass roots; third, a second crop of grass can be secured.

In the wheat berry, the epidermis, seed skin, gluten, cell-layer and germ from about eighteen per cent. of the entire weight. The remainder, or eighty-two per cent., is the largest per cent. of flour that can be secured by the most perfect machinery. If we include the germ, which some millers say is useful in the flour, there would be nothing lost in the process. Carefully peel peaches or apricots and drop them, whole into the boiling syrup, letting them boil for ten minutes rapidly; take them out separately with a spoon or cup, and place them in wide-mouth jars or bottles, pouring in a little syrup with each one. When full see that the syrup covers the fruit, and then do not shake or stir the jars, but fill the jars to the top with the syrup. If there is a large quantity of fruit, and the jars are not large, fill a few jars to put the fruit in the syrup a little at a time.

HOW TO CLEAN THE FLOOR.—If you have a painted floor keep soap and soapsuds off of it, for it spoils the brightness of the paint, makes it soft, and then it peels off, leaving the floor looking worse than if it had not been painted. If your floor has not been painted, keep soap off of it, for it gives it a dingy, grimy look, and keeps growing worse all the time. Just take clean, hot water, put a teaspoonful of ammonia into a three-gallon pail of water, stir it, and with a clean, long-handled mop rub the floor all over then wipe it off with clean water. It will take a little while to get the gray out of the boards, but it will come out after a time, and you will find it far easier to keep your floor white and nice than it was when cleaned with soap or suds.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Cleveland Herald says: "The ways that turnips can be sown and yet not require a special preparation of the land are many. I know a farmer who, after the last hoeing of his potatoes, scatters the seed thinly along the rows, and when the potatoes are dug the dirt is pulled back into the last hill, and the turnips are not disturbed. The fine soil that works down about them rather helps than injures them, and a big crop of turnips usually results. Sowing among the corn is another not objectionable method, for the turnips will not grow very much upon the soil until after the corn is cut up, and the after crop will prove a far more profitable one than planting pumpkins among the corn, and far less injurious to the development of the ears.

FRUITS IN SYRUP.—Syrup for peaches, apricots, plums and pears: Take half a pound of loaf sugar to each pint of water and boil very rapidly for ten minutes before the fruit is put in. Sufficient syrup should be made to allow the fruit to lie covered in the pan, and when the first quantity is done there will be enough syrup left to do half as much again, only the second batch will not be quite so clear. The Codling Moth and Borer.

THE codling moth is an enemy not readily overcome, and as its ravages in the apple orchard are very destructive, prompt and persistent efforts are required for its suppression.

The moth deposits its eggs in the eye or calyx of the young apple. In a few days they hatch and the worm burrows into the core of the fruit. It eats to the center and then works its way around, and a gill of vinegar; mix and pour over grated horseradish. This is excellent with beef.

A LADY had in her employment a young man from the country. On certain occasions he was instructed to reply to a lady, who shortly went away, leaving a card and a promise to call again. As the card was handed to his mistress, she said: "John, what did you say to the lady?" "I told her that you were not at home." "Well, John, I hope you did not laugh." "Oh, no, ma'am" said John, "I never laugh when I tell a lie."

He Still Lives.

Some years ago Dr. R. V. Pierce, of the Worlds Dispensary and Invalids Hotel, of Buffalo, N. Y., and London, wrested for consumptive a terrible disease of the knee joint, resulting in ulceration and extensive shedding of the bone and tissues. The case had all been despaired of by the previous attending physicians. Amputation of the thigh was promptly decided upon and skillfully performed by Dr. Pierce, and after sufficiently to purify the blood and prevent a recurrence of the malady, the Doctor's Golden Medical Discovery was freely prescribed. The man's system was thoroughly purified and strengthened, he gained in flesh and health, the stump healing nicely, and he is to-day a happy man. His case manifested the wonderful power over the worst scrofulous and other blood diseases. Such for a time it purifies and then strengthens the system so thoroughly freely it against all attacks of disease. Sold by druggists.

MIDDLEVILLE, Mich., Feb. 30th, 1878.
DR. R. V. PIERCE:
Dear Sir—I can truly say that I have sold your medicines for seven years. The Golden Medical Discovery is the best one that I have ever used, and in every case where I have recommended it it has cured. I have cured it in my family for children. It cures their colds and coughs in a day or two. My wife has used it for a great many years and now is healthier than she has been for years. It is the duty of all to take them, if sickness is to be cured.

THE SENTINEL

CHARLEVOIX, MICH.

WILLARD A. SMITH, EDITOR AND PROPRIETOR.

TUESDAY, JULY 27, 1880

FOR PRESIDENT,

JAMES A. GARFIELD,
OF OHIO.

FOR VICE PRESIDENT,

CHESTER A. ARTHUR,
OF NEW YORK.

FOR GOVERNOR,

Col. Wm. B. McCreery.
Subject to the decision of the Republican State Convention.

Republican Congressional Convention—Ninth District.

A Republican Convention for the district embraced in the Counties of Manistee, Wexford, Missaukee, Roscommon, Ogemaw, Iosco, Arenac, Gladwin, Clare, Isabella, Midland, Bay, Saginaw, Tuscola, Huron, Sanilac, Lapeer, St. Clair, Macomb and Oakland, is hereby called to meet at the City of Saginaw, on Wednesday, the 25th day of August, 1880, at 10 o'clock A. M., for the purpose of nominating a candidate for Representative in the Forty-seventh Congress of the United States, and the transaction of such other business as may properly come before the Convention.

The several counties are entitled to delegates as follows:

PERRY HANNAH, Manistee, 1
CHARLES V. NYE, Wexford, 1
F. J. NEWTH, Missaukee, 1
JAMES M. SAXON, Roscommon, 1
C. D. JENNINGS, Ogemaw, 1
J. H. DAVIDSON, Iosco, 1
JOHN SPELLMAN, Arenac, 1

At an out-door Hancock ratification meeting, recently held in Georgia, the stars and bars waved over the crowd, with no United States flag in sight.

GEN. BUTLER expresses the opinion that the Greenbackers will poll a pretty large vote for Weaver for President, and that most of it will come from the Democratic party.

THERE are unmistakable indications that the Hancock boom is subsiding. It started off big, as the Ossebo boom did in 1872, but there is no substance to it, and it is beginning to collapse.

THE Chicago Times, Independent Democratic, says: "Garfield is a hard money advocate, a protectionist, a Nationalist, a leader of his party. Where, Gen. Hancock stands upon any question, the Lord only knows."

AT the United Irishmen's convention, in session at Philadelphia, the extreme course of adopting the Russian nihilist policy toward England by Ireland has been proposed. It is an extreme measure and would be universally condemned.

"He's all style and nothing else," is the opinion expressed by the Western volunteer officers and soldiers who served in the Army of the Potomac during the war, and saw much of General Hancock. His good looks and his "style" are the chief points of his character.

THE election of Hancock will be the signal for the greatest exodus the South has witnessed. Not alone blacks, but every white Republican will leave. The struggle for political and constitutional rights in that section of the country will be considered hopeless.

THE Indianapolis Sentinel, the leading Democratic paper of Indiana, peremptorily refuses to insert in its columns, with the rest of the ticket, the name of Wm. H. English, the Democratic candidate for Vice President, who lives in Indianapolis. The Sentinel sees evidently knee English.

A PROMINENT Mississippi Democrat, who stands at the head of a noble profession, more than a year ago said of Gen. Garfield, with whom he had become acquainted while serving on the Yellow Fever Commission: "He is the brainiest man in the Republican party, and I consider him the leading statesman of the country." An honest man's hearty tribute, from one opposed, politically, to our nominee.

A ONE armed soldier in the East a few days since when asked whether he would support General Hancock on the ground of being a Union General, made the following characteristic reply, which is no doubt in harmony with the great mass of Union soldiers: "There have been two Generals nominated; one is backed by the solid South and the other by a loyal North; will support the latter." This one armed soldier represents not only the majority of the soldiers of the North but he also represents the great host of the people of the North in every State. The Hancock rallies are numerous enough to be sure, but the mostly live south of Mason and Dixon's line. Soldiers who fought to save the country will vote to keep the country in the hands of those who are its friends, and against those who are their country's enemies. What good reason could be assigned for a Union soldier or any loyal man to vote for Hancock with the rebel hand at his back? Not one.

A WRITER in the Baltimore American comes forward with a statement which, if hereafter verified—and it is said it can and will be abundantly demonstrated to be true—will effectually blast the Presidential prospects of the Democratic nominee. This statement is to the effect that Gen. Hancock, who was a violent partisan of McClellan, so far forgot his duty to his flag, his country, and his superior officer, the commander-in-chief of the army and navy of the United States, as to join in a council of war at which it was proposed to disregard President Lincoln's orders removing McClellan from the command of the army of the Potomac, and to march the army to Washington and forcibly depose both Lincoln and Stanton. In this infamous council it is asserted that Hancock, Fitz-John Porter, Franklin "Baldy" Smith, and several officers of lower rank took part; and but for McClellan's lack of nerve to face the situation, the traitorous programme would certainly have been carried out. Gen. Hancock is charged with having originated and pressed the proposition, which was seconded by Fitz-John Porter. The intense feeling created among a certain coterie of Democratic generals at McClellan's removal is a matter of history, but the details of the villainous plot concocted at the time have never been made known. It is said that Gen. Grant, when it will be remembered, never thought much of Hancock, came into possession of all the facts relating to this conspiracy, and at the proper time the whole story will be laid before an astonished and indignant public. It is due to the American people that the light of day be thrown upon this dark and diabolical plot, to the end that its truth or falsity as concerns the Democratic nominee for the Presidency may be distinctly made known. There should be no uncertainty about the matter.

SHERIFF'S NOTICE.

Whereas, A majority of the resident owners of real estate on the north side of Bridge street, in the Village of Charlevoix, Michigan, have petitioned the President and Trustees of said Village to have a sidewalk built on south side of said street, between Lewis and Hayes streets, on said Bridge street, and the Common Council, in session and duly sitting, having received the said petition, and determined that the prayer of the petitioners be granted. Therefore, notice of Trustees' Public Sale is ordered by the Common Council of the Village of Charlevoix, that a sidewalk be built on the south side of Bridge street, between Hayes Lake and Hayes street, on said side of street, to the abutting owners thereon, within fourteen days from the date of the service of this notice, said sidewalk to be four feet wide, and of two inch plank laid crosswise, securely fastened with twenty penny spikes, upon two lines of good scantling. And it is further ordered, That the Marshal forthwith serve a copy of this order on each owner or lessee liable required to construct said sidewalk, and in case said abutting owners, or any part thereof, shall neglect or refuse to build said sidewalk within the time above prescribed that the Marshal shall forthwith proceed to build the sidewalk, and report the cost of the same, as is provided in the sidewalk ordinance of said Village of Charlevoix.

TEMPERANCE.

Norman Hands His Mind Upon The Subject.

EDITOR SENTINEL:—We have noticed several times your editorial comments relative to an increase of drunkenness in the streets of your pleasant village. However much we may differ in other things, on this point we are with you heart and soul.

Scotch the foul fiend; drive this blighting curse from your midst; the very appearance of such a blot will lower the moral tone of your summer resort. That whiskey den will be an eyesore to all respectable people. The eye is offended, the sense pulled; the soul of any order loving, peaceable citizen would be staggered by the fact that his first entrance to Charlevoix from the dock is to ground by a staggering being reeling from that whiskey shop—next to the finest hotel in Charlevoix.

Have the village fathers nothing to learn from Petoskey? Has not the fact been spread through the entire Northern region, that the whiskey saloons in Petoskey are raising a fine crop for the penitentiary?

Yet there are some men who say, "Let the men gain a living," so long as they don't break the peace, and keep respectable be them alone—respectable?—"Let them alone" for what? To pay on society, to cast into the trials, to break up the homes in Charlevoix, to increase the poor tax, to establish a poor farm, to build jails, to build almshouses, to increase your municipal expenses. Is this what Charlevoix wants? We think not. But some will say I am a crank; bitten to the eloquent Bob Ingersoll in presenting a case to a jury in a whiskey suit:

"Intemperance cuts down youth in its vigor, manhood in its strength. It breaks the mother's heart, increases the father's burdens, empoverishes maternal affection. It produces weakness, not strength; sickness, not healthy death, not life. It makes wives widows, children orphans, fathers fiends and all paupers. It covers the land with misery, idleness and crimes. It fills your jails, supplies your penitentiaries, and demands asylums. It crowds your penitentiaries and furnishes victims to your scaffolds. It is the blood of the gambler, ebonest of the burglar, the prop of the highwayman. It counterfeits the liar, respects the thief screens the perjury. It defiles beauty, destroys manhood, blights intelligence, slays religion, stifles love, satisfies virtue and insanes reason.

"It burns sons, consumes women, detests life, curses God and blasphemes Heaven. It seduces witnesses, nerves perfidy, defiles the jury box and stains judicial ermine. It bribes voters, disqualifies voters, corrupts elections, pollutes our institutions and ruins free government. It hinders education, and honors terror, not safety. Despair, not hope, misery, not happiness, and with the exhalations of its breath, it casts sorrows on England, blights confid

DURING the month of June there arrived in the United States 52,567 emigrants. Of this number Ireland furnished the largest quota, and Germany the next largest. The immigrant arrivals at the port of New York alone for the year ending June 30 were 263,-738, against 192,231 for the preceding twelve months.

DR. TANNER finished his twentieth day of fasting on the 18th. On the morning of that day he was reported to be feeling better than usual, and took a two hours' drive in Central Park. In the afternoon he took a long walk, and at night he took a carriage ride. He drank considerable water during the day. Upon his return from the ride he was found to weigh 135 pounds. His average daily loss in weight for the previous few days was about eight ounces, or only one-quarter of the average while he was abstaining from drinking.

Letter of General Garfield Accepting the Nomination for the Presidency.

MENTOR, O., July 12.

General Garfield has forwarded to Senator Hoar, of Massachusetts, the following letter of acceptance of the nomination tendered him by the Republican National Convention:

MENTOR, O., July 10, 1880.

HON. SIR: On the evening of the 8th of June last I had the honor to receive from you, in the presence of the Committee of which you were Chairman, the official announcement that the Republican National Convention at Chicago had that day nominated me as their candidate for President of the United States. I accept the nomination with gratitude for the honor it implies, and with a deep sense of the responsibilities it imposes. I cordially indorse the principles set forth in the platform adopted in the convention, and will proceed to discuss of which it treats my opinions are on record among the published speeches of Congress. I can, therefore, by make special address of more public purposes than those which have become subject of the canvass, seem to me specially important, or which have been omitted during the past canvass, and with my approval or wish to revive the passions of the late war.

STATE SUPREMACY.

It should be said that while the Republican party recognizes and will steadfastly maintain all the rights reserved to the States, and all the rights reserved to the States, they have always resisted and will resist any claim of State sovereignty which so long crippled the functions of the National Government, and at one time brought the Union very near to destruction. Nor can we fail to remember that a State is a Nation, with ample powers of self-preservation, that its constitution and the laws made in pursuance thereof "are the supreme law of the land," that the right of the Nation to maintain a republican form of which its Legislature shall be create I can best be protected by the faithful exercise of the fundamental powers of government, found in the National laws, and in the action of Representatives in Congress chief author of which declared to be "every elector shall be permitted freely, and without fear of war with Rivals."

FREE and Bolivia, allies at present in the war against Chili, have formed a confederation to be known as the United States of Peru and Bolivia.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

1. Under section 108, general school laws, the liberality of the township board is required to be exercised in the case in three months to the directors of the several districts to instruct them how to use the buildings, the directors being held responsible for the return of the books to the library. In case the board of inspectors may think that the conveniences or interests of the people will be best subserved by leasing the books delivered directly to the inhabitants of the township therefore and not through the directors, said board may suspend the action of the section quoted.

2. Authority of Section 69, General School Law of 1859, the same being section 4 of act of No. 29, laws of 1859.

3. The township board must be appointed from the entire number of members of school districts in the township and districts living wholly or partly in such township. In case of a township having three school districts, one situated in another township, the township board of such township must consist of nine members, three from each district.

4. Section 4 of act No. 29, laws of 1859, as amended by act No. 291, laws of 1879, requires that the township board of each township shall annually, on the first Monday in April, cause to be made a school district enumeration, and section 5 of Section 4th, General School Law of 1859, requires that the township board shall cause to be made a report annually to the Clerk of such township in which the number of every form and sex and the number of children in that part of the district which is situated in such city, village or township of law is complied with, there must be made a report of the number of persons of each class desired to be apportioned to fractional districts.

During a recent storm at St. Louis, lightning struck the house of John Finery, and killed a boy named Nelson, and badly injured four others.

MY ONE ADVENTURE.

IT occurred in Texas.

We were traveling through the interior of the State in our own conveyance, a hundred miles from railroads or wards (unfortunately, and his physician recommended this journey as the best means of establishing his health.

I had insisted on it to keep me at home, and I begged so hard to be taken along, and made such promises of care of myself and baggage, and giving no trouble, that at last he allowed me to accompany him.

It was a strange, wild, lonely life we led. Sometimes we would drive through the country from sunrise to sunset without meeting or seeing a human being. We would always avoid towns, or make our arrangements so as to secure rigid lodgings under a roof, but most of the time we slept in our wagon, and cooked our own meals by camp fires.

But by this time we were both inside the cabin: for a man had appeared during the night, and come to him we entrusted the care of our horses. It was a smoke-dried place, evidently kitchen, dining and sleeping room all in one. The supper was cooking at the open fireplace; the table was ready laid; and a tall, gaunt, cadaverous looking woman, with a child sitting by her side, was busily engaged in knitting. Both were rough-looking customers, but you tell Patty I sent you, and she'll do the best she can for you. She used to work for my wife before she married Dan, and I think she's a good-hearted soul. Dan himself—well, Dan's my favorite of mine; but, ten chances to one, he's gone to the fall himself. If I could give you even a lounge, I would be only too happy to do so, but I have only bare floors to offer, and I think this lady ought to rest comfortably on a bed to-night."

After some further discussion, this plan was agreed upon as the most feasible which presented itself, and we were about to start, when Mr. Rice said:

"Perhaps it would be best to leave any valuables you may have with you here at my house. I have a lock-room, and you know that in my cellar, or, if you prefer it, your friends can take care of them until morning for you. I think Bixby likely may be with us other company before midnight, and it's just as well to let them know you're employed."

We thanked him, and handed over our wallet containing our money and ready money; and my husband thought it best to leave his watch behind also. The chain was very massive, and would be likely to attract attention. We would not be without a timepiece either, for my watch was also attached to a black guard which I wore around my neck, so I kept it with me. We then exchanged good-nights, and my husband gathered up the reins to go.

"I suppose there is no difficulty about finding the way?" he said to Mr. Rice.

"You couldn't miss the cabin; it is right down the road—the first house you come to."

Fifteen minutes' drive brought us there. A woman was standing in the doorway as we approached.

"Can you give us a bed to-night, madam?" asked my husband, politely.

"Mr. Rice told me to look after you, he sent us here thinking perhaps you might have a spare bed."

She stared in silence for the space of a minute or so, and when at last she deigned to speak, it was to ask some question about, "Who all was stoppin' at Mr. Rice's?"

"I'll tell you all about it after I get in," replied he, not very truthfully; "I have been driving all day, and I'm very tired."

Then ridin' all day! Yer don't say? You mus' be tide sho nuff. Ll-light down, lads on yer, I reckon I'll hev to make up a bed for yer somehow."

That latter mu flour bread in the house, though mus' or strangers is almighty hard times."

State Politics.

Congressman Barrow will probably be returned from the fourth district.

Kalamazoo delegates will be solid for Stockbridge at the Republican convention.

Monson S. Cromby, of Grand Rapids; Edmund Deering, of Marquette, and P. Dean Warner, of Oakland county, are named for the office of Lieut. Governor.

D. Goodyear for Congress in the sixth district; Mark S. Brewer, present Congressman from that district; Senator Hoxsey, of Flint; Andrew D. Weidell, of Howell; A. M. Bull, of Hamburg; Stephen D. Bingham, of Ionia.

Wm. Jenney, Secretary of State; W. Irving Lawton, Auditor General; J. M. Nasmith, Commissioner of the State Land Office, and H. D. Pritchell, State Treasurer, will be eagerly remembered by acclamation by the Republican convention next month.

Edward S. Lacey, of Charlotte, will have no opposition in the third district Congressional convention. Neither is it probable that J. C. Beaman in the fourth or Jay A. Hubbell in the ninth will meet with any opposition in the conventions of their respective districts.

The name of Edward Cahill, of Lansing, of J. Van Riper, of Berrien county, W. R. Gibson, of Jackson, Byron Gould, of Albion, Col. E. J. Marsh, of Hillsdale, Edward Baxter, of Grand Haven, and Judge White, of Burlington, will all be pressed for the Attorney Generalship.

The prominent candidates for Governor are Col. F. B. Stockbridge, Speaker John T. Rich, Senator J. C. Palmer and Hon. D. H. Jerome. E. G. D. Holbrook, ex-Secretary of State, Rev. A. Beal of the Ann Arbor Courier, and Charles T. Gorman, ex-Minister to Bogota, will have some zealous friends in the convention. Col. W. E. McCreery has virtually withdrawn.

Soldier's "Grub."

Practice Lessons Heretofore.

"Times isn't as they used to was." Wagon requisition of 1861 by Quartermaster Sawyer, advertisement for proposals to feed the Michigan State troops, who will "serve their country" on encamp at Kalamazoo from Aug. 9th to Aug. 17th. The bill of fare is: Asked out as follows: The breakfast—tea and coffee, sugar and milk, beef steak, potatoes, ham, corned, sausage, butter, salt pork, crackers, and pickles; for dinner—tea and coffee, sugar and milk, roast beef, roast mutton, boiled ham, butter, boiled corn beef, pork and beans, boiled rice, potatoes, bread, crackers, pickles, and one additional vegetable; for supper—tea and coffee, sugar and milk, cold roast beef, hot potatoes, corned beef, bread, boiled ham, crackers, pork and beans, butter, pickles. Covered eating houses, comfortably seated, must be supplied, and rations well cooked and well served. In contrast with the above bill of fare, the veterans in the Atlantic campaign remember coffee, hard bread and bacon for breakfast; bacon, coffee and hard bread for dinner; and hard bread, bacon and coffee for supper. Covered eating houses were no, a part of the feature of that campaign, for in the regiment in which a lansing veteran served there was not even a "mess" tent, and "Billy" Sherman's headquarter traps could have been carried on a wheelbarrow.

MURDERER ARRESTED.—A Cheboygan paper has the following account of the arrest in that village of a desperate murderer last week by one of Pinkerton's detectives: "An arrest was ——— in this village Saturday night which is a most important one, and which will probably result in the conviction of the offender and his death by hanging. On the 7th of last April a man named Henry English and wife were known as outlaw in and about Elk county, Penn., at a place called Caledonia, was being pursued by a number of officers for one of the numerous crimes he had committed in that country, when he fired upon and killed one of the officers. Fifteen shots were sent after him by his pursuers and he was wounded seven times, but managed to get into the woods, where from a secure position behind a log he kept the officers at bay, being armed with a Winchester rifle and two revolvers, until he escaped into the mountains. The militia were called out but failed to effect his capture. The case was then put in the hands of the Pinkerton Detective Agency of Philadelphia, and J. R. Thomas, one of the force, was detailed to hunt the murder out. The detective since the 29th of April has been after his man and tracked him as far as Cheboygan. When he arrived here deputy-sheriff Paquette was consulted, and at once took hold of the matter with the detective with his usual energy. The officers worked cautiously and sure, keeping their business to themselves until finally they located their game in Bois Blanc Island, where it seems he had been employed for some time past in fishing, and last Saturday when he came to the village, they quietly arrested him and he is now ready to be taken to Pennsylvania, the requisition papers having arrived from the State. It is a capture of great importance to the people of Cheboygan, where English has been for a long time a terror. He is a desperado of the worst character and if he anticipated that he was to be arrested by here there would have been serious trouble before he could have been taken, but so quietly was the matter worked by the officers that he was taken completely at his guard and had no chance to make any resistance. He is a man about thirty-five years of age, six feet high, very broad shoulders and must powerfully built, as quick as a cat and a perfect athlete. He bears numberless marks, scars, cuts and wounds upon his head and body, the result of desperate encounters. He takes his arrest quietly, gives no account of himself, but remains sullen and silent.

DRY goods as cheap as ever at H. SEE'S.

At a recent reunion of G. J. survivors of Hood's Texas Confederate Soldiers' brigade, held at San Antonio, letters of regret from Gen. Beauregard and Gen. W. S. Hancock were read.

GENERAL HANCOCK has not yet decided that he wrote a letter to Gen. Sherman in 1877, expressing his readiness to recognize Tilden as President if he would take the oath. And probably he never will.—Bay City Tribune.

THE Manistee Times pronounces T. W. Palmer the most vulnerable of all the Republican candidates seeking the nomination for Governor in this State, and if further demands a candidate who's record is without blemish. The Times has a level head on that subject.

DEMOCRATS appear jubilant over the announcement that two or three church members and disappointed office seekers have expressed themselves in favor of the Presidency. The Republican party has no use for such men and can cheerfully say, erring brothers depart in peace.

General Hancock says that his letter of acceptance will not be ready short of two weeks. Old Judge Jere Black, who wrote Hancock's Louisiana "stolen" No. 10, is now in Europe, and it will take just about two weeks either for him to return, or for a letter from him to reach New York.

The Democratic Messenger, of Fremont, Ohio, one of the most outspoken Democratic sheets in the State, has come out for Garfield and Arthur. It says "that a bona fide vote of the American people will loudly call on Gen. Garfield to take the reins of the Government for four years from March 4, 1881."

The surviving rebel soldiers still entertain the notion that Congress should put them on the same footing with regard to granting pensions as the union soldiers, and believe should the Democrats succeed in electing General Hancock President, that all crippled soldiers would be pensioned and paid for their services during the war.

GARFIELD and Arthur both are Masons. The Washington Sunday Herald says: "Brother James A. Garfield is a charter member of Pentalpha lodge, No. 23, and a member of Columbia chapter, No. 1; Columbia commandery, No. 2, and Mithras lodge of perfection. A. and A. Rite, all of the city. Brother Chester A. Arthur is a member of all the Masonic bodies in New York city.

ONE of the Democratic newspaper organs, printed in Washington, has issued a call for a campaign subscription fund to be raised by confederate soldiers, each of whom shall put $5. It estimates that this will produce a net sum of $1,500,000, to which the further sum of $500,000 more to added by other subscriptions. This is certainly a liberal, if not extravagant, provision for a campaign fund. One might reasonably suppose that the Democrats intend to go into the business of vote-buying on the largest scale.

Now is the time to buy groceries and the place is H. SEE'S.

The Democrats of Charlevoix, together with several prominent Resort Democrats, have commenced talking over the question of the erection of a church edifice at an early day. They have been without one in the village for a suitable location, and their views have so far matured that they have determined to secure a suitable site for one. Although the society here is not notably rich, yet the excellent strength of broadcast Baptists during the summer season will be great, is exerted in this direction. We have no doubt Charlevoix people, once convinced, possess such determination will go readily and the project.

Adventures with Alligators.

I once visited Lake Jessup with Judge Emmons, of Jacksonville. The Judge was a wonderful marksman, as full of fun as a magpie, but he was getting old and his eyesight was failing. One day we killed a monster alligator on the edge of a marshy cane brake. He had splendid teeth, and the Judge wanted to secure them as mementoes. The painter of the boat was tied to the reptile's leg, and we towed him across an arm of the lake to solid ground. A small ax was borrowed from the house of a "cracker" near by, and we commenced to decapitate the prize, but the head, and remove the teeth. The body was so large that we could not draw it upon the shore. An axe was cut and pointed, and driven through the jaws of the reptile, pinning him into the mud, the water was probably two feet deep. The Judge drew out a sheath knife, and was about to make an incision, when he was cautioned by a barefooted negro who stood on the bank watching the operation with curious eyes.

"Better git aim o' dat ah gashsmash," said he, "twell he done gone dead."

"Oh, good heavens!" exclaimed the Judge, "he's been dead an hour. If he ain't alive, do you reckon he'd allow us to drive a stake through him?"

"No gash an dead till de sun go gone down," the darkie observed.

The Judge laughed, and passed me the knife. I inserted the blade in a bullet-hole near the shoulder, and cut a gash in the flesh, following the trend of the diamond-shaped scales beneath the skin. Judge Emmons stood near the monster's tail. The knife penetrated the quivering flesh and was stained with his hand. As quick as a flash the tail shot from the water and the Judge was knocked fully ten feet. The reptile raised its head, snake and all, and sailed out into the lake like a submarine battery. Judge Emmons lost his glasses, but was fortunately unhurt. The incident, however, convinced him that it was dangerous to fool with a dead alligator until after sundown.

In the winter of 1873 I was encamped in the great Fernhill Swamp, ninety miles south of St. Augustine, hunting deer, bears, wildcats, cougars and wild turkeys. There was a great drought, and the savannas and swamps were dry. Scores of alligators paraded the dry savannas in search of water. One day Captain Frank Sams and Tom Murray, two well-known guides, rode past the encampment. They were looking for sour orange stumps, with the intention of transplanting and grafting them. A hundred yards from camp they reined in their horses on a burnt savanna and began to shoot. Snatching a double-barreled gun, I ran out on the savanna. Their horses were prancing around an enormous bull alligator, who had crawled out of the dry swamp, and who was headed for the Hillsborough River. He was confused by the shouts of the guides and the prancing of their horses, and I approached him unseen. Stealing behind him, I ran a long gamecock splinter into his eye. He turned himself over the blackened stubble, and the guides struck at him with our whips. Down to weariness, he crawled close to the ground, puffed out his throat, opened his cavernous mouth, and made a noise like the rushing of a wind. A moment afterward I discharged a load of buckshot into each eye. The monster shuddered, and stretched himself in the agonies of death. Captain Sams dismounted and hurled his ax in the reptile's tail. The vertebra was severed, and he was no longer dangerous, although there was still life in the tail. It moved slowly and measily like the tail of a wounded snake, and the guides declared that it would not die until the setting of the sun. At intervals the savanna roared like a Central Park lion. Toward night I went to the swamp to mark the roosts of wild turkeys. The day was oppressively hot. I was returning toward camping after dark, when I found myself on the burnt savanna. To my surprise, the whole savanna seemed alive and moving. Nearly worn out with exhaustion, I fancied that my head was reeling, a sure sign of malaria fever. The phenomenon was quickly explained. A thousand lizards were in camp near the great alligator, awaiting the light of day to secure their prey. A year afterward I found the skeleton of this saurian, and knocked out its teeth. The savanna was then covered with water a foot deep.

How a Noble Dog Rescued Captain Jack Crawford, U. S. A.

A SAN JOSE dispatch to the Denver Tribune says: Last Monday a number of soldiers went from Fort Craig to the Rio Grande for a bath. Among them was Captain Jack Crawford. After being in the water about three minutes, one of an hour Captain Jack started to cross toward the other side over a sand bar, on which the water was only from six inches to a foot deep. Several of the others followed Jack, and they had considerable fun tripping each other and rolling over in the water, while two of the boys got Jack down in the shallow water and tickled him in the ribs, until he was nearly exhausted with laughter, he being very ticklish. In order to get away from his tormentors Jack rolled over toward the deep water on the lower edge of the bar, and when he got up on his feet he kept backing down stream, and although there was not over two feet of water where he stood, yet the current was so strong that it would carry big shots should he lose his footing. He kept splashing water on those who had been tickling him, and lustering them to come on after him, when suddenly he made two or three desperate efforts to get back, but failed. Yes, he said not a word, or the others might have joined hands and reached for him. No one dreamed for a moment that he was trying to extricate himself from the quicksand. All at once he went down like a piece of lead. Even then we thought he had taken a dive, until he was under water longer than a man would willingly stay, and, indeed, no one would have noticed this particularly had we not heard a peculiar sound, more like the roar of a lion than anything else, and the next instant Jack's dog, "Hero," a beautiful St. Bernard, was seen swimming toward his master, while he set up a howl that seemed to say, "I'm coming." Jack came up about twenty-five yards below where he went down, and right in the center of a terrible swift current, near where the river would make a swift, sharp turn. He was nearly exhausted when the dog broke from under him, and, striking a whirlpool, he could make little or no headway, and had to use all his strength to keep from being caught in the suction. Hill, a soldier, orderly for General Hatch, soon as he saw the dog go for Jack, also sprang in the current, but Here got to Jack first, just as he was going down the second time, and, taking him by the back of the head, brought him above water. Jack, who never lost his presence of mind, caught the dog by the back just above the hips, and the faithful Hero brought him safe to shore, nearly a mile below where he first went down. This was really a narrow escape, as an officer and five soldiers went down nearly in the same place a few years ago and were never seen. A wagon and team of mules disappeared in the river two years ago and have not turned up yet. An old Mexican brought Jack over from the opposite shore in a boat, while Hero never ceased flicking his hands and face until he came out of the boat. In about an hour Jack was all right again, except that he had a headache and could not hear good, his ears being full of water.

ATTENTION is called by a St. Petersburg correspondent to the fact that the new Empress of Russia has been a widower. A new ceremonial for the interment of the late Empress had therefore to be improvised.

A NEW method of suicide was recently chosen by a Russian teacher. He mounted his horse and madly leaped from a high precipice into a river. The man was drowned, but the horse, though much hurt, came out of the water alive.

A LARGE plate-glass window on Tremont street, Boston, was broken the other day in a singular manner. A passing horseshoer struck a pebble in the street so hard that it was projected through the window with the force of a musket-ball.

SCIENCE of the cone-bearing trees of California were formerly in demand abroad at from one hundred to one hundred and twenty-five dollars a pound, and there are millions of trees now growing in England and on the continent of Europe from seeds sent from California during the last twenty-five years. Many of the trees are now bearing seed, and hence the demand for seeds from California has greatly decreased.

LAURA MARBLE, of Kingston, N. Y., betook herself to the middle of a stream to avoid service of a summons. The officer pursued her, and tried to shove the judge's signature, but Laura declared that he was only trying to drown her, and knocked the papers from his hand. They floated down stream and sank, and he had to strip and dive for them. "Sufficient service," quoth the Judge, and the officer doubtless thought it more than sufficient.

MATTHEW LYNCH, who was killed recently in New Mexico by a falling tree, left an estate of over $1,000,000. He was a Philadelphian, a Roman Catholic, and a bachelor, who fought through the civil war and at its close went out to New Mexico with a small capital, which he used in purchasing a canal supplying the mines of Elizabethtown with water. This started him on the road to wealth, and later he discovered the Aztec mines, which yielded $60,000 a month. His heirs are two brothers and one sister.

THERE has been for some time on exhibition in London a seal, which, for its extraordinary intelligence, is called "the learned seal." It is kept in an immense tank, and has been taught to draw a small boat in which is seated a lad who steers the craft, and whose commands are implicitly obeyed by the animal. After being unharnessed the seal thrums the strings of a guitar which the attendants place beneath its fins, much to the delight and amusement of the spectators.

A CALIFORNIA heroine, who lives upon her father's ranch, in Siskiyou County, was recently introduced to a bear in the absence of her father. She did not lose her head, but take refuge under the bed, but summoned the family dogs and turned them loose upon her visitor. Brain retreated to the nearest tree. The girl then took down her father's rifle, and walking to the foot of the tree, took deliberate aim and fired. Fortunately the first shot proved a mortal one, and the bear fell from his perch dead.

Mark Twain's Reflections on the German Language.

I HAVE heard of an American student who was asked how he was getting along with his German, and who answered promptly: "I am not getting along at all. I have worked at it hard for three level months, and all I have got to show for it is one solitary German phrase—Zwei glas" (two glasses of beer). He paused a moment, reflectively, then added with feeling, "But I've got that solid."

My philological studies have satisfied me that a gifted person ought to learn English (barring spelling and pronouncing), in thirty hours, French in thirty days, and German in thirty years. It seems manifest, then, that the latter tongue ought to be trimmed down and repaired. If it is to remain as it is, it ought to be gently and reverently set aside among the dead languages, for only the dead have time to learn it.

On the way to Heilbronn there were some nice German people in our compartment. I got to talking some pretty private matters presently, and Harris became curious, and nudged me, and said:

"Speak in German—tisses Germans may understand English."

I did so, and it was well I did; for it turned out that there was not a German in that party who did not understand English perfectly. It is ruinous how widespread our language is in Germany. After a while some of those folks got out, and a German gentleman and his two young daughters got in. I spoke in German to one of the latter several times, but without result. Finally she said:

"Ich verstehe nur Deutch und Englische," or words to that effect. That is, "I don't understand any language but German and English." I can understand German as well as the maniac who invented it, but I talk it best through an interpreter.—The Tramp Abroad.

Got to Stand It.

ON one of the hottest corners of Woodward avenue, at high noon yesterday, a small boy with a boot-black's kit sat under the full blaze of a sun pouring down for all it was worth. The boy perspired, roasted, blistered and almost melted, but he had stuck there for half an hour, when a lady passing by halted and said:

"Bub, aren't you afraid of being sun-struck?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the prompt reply.

"Then why don't you get into the shade?"

"I can't."

"Did any one tell you to wait here?"

"No, marm, but I'm doing it on my own hook. It's awful hot, and I'm most dead, but I've got to stand it."

She looked to see if he was tied, and was about to go, still regard him as the son of a brutal father in a saloon around the corner, when the lad explained:

"There he is now! That boy up there is the chap I was waiting for, and I had to sit under the sun to get him to turned the corner. He's the feller that called my sister a pokes-eyed rabbit, and I'm going to jump in on him and lick him most to death! I wish you'd hold my box so I can get the bulge on him before he suspects anything."—Detroit Free Press.

Self-Winding Clocks.

A CLOCK-MAKER of Copenhagen, named Louis Sonderberg, who for some time past has had charge of that city's electric time-keepers, has just invented an ingenious appliance which obviates the necessity of winding up the regulator, from which the clocks in question receive their time. By a mechanical contrivance which periodically cuts off the stream of electric fluid emanating from the battery, and brings an electric magnet to bear upon the relaxed main-spring in such a way as to wind it up, the requisite momentary, perpetual motion is practically imparted to the works of the regulator—that is to say, so long as the batteries connected with it are kept properly supplied with acids. The discoverer of this important improvement has exhibited himself, by six months successful experiments in his own workshops, that his system works faultlessly, and has applied for permission to adapt it to the electric clocks set up by the municipality in different parts of the Danish capital. Electricity, under Mr. Sonderberg's compulsion, is destined not only to make the Copenhagen clocks go, but to wind them up, with never-ending recurrence, until the "crack of doom."—London Telegraph.

A Peculiar People.

MR. TREMLETT, the British Consul at Saigon, mentions as a remarkable peculiarity of the natives of the country that they have the great toe of each foot separated from the others like the thumb of the hand, and it can be used in much the same manner, though not to the same extent. This distinctive mark of an Annamite is not, however, entirely seen in the vicinity of Saigon, but is now confined to the inhabitants of the more northern section of the empire, where the race has remained more distinct. This peculiarity is the meaning of the native name for the Annamite bear in the absence of her father. She did not lock the doors and take refuge under the bed, but summoned the family dogs and turned them loose upon her visitor. Brain retreated to the nearest tree. The girl then took down her father's rifle, and walking to the foot of the tree, took deliberate aim and fired. Fortunately the first shot proved a mortal one, and the bear fell from his perch dead.

PERSONAL AND LITERARY.

"TO ALL my friends I leave kind thoughts," said John Brougham in his will.

A FIRST volume of Bret Harte's "Complete Poetical and Dramatic Works" has appeared in London.

MR. G. W. WILLIAMS, the colored representative from Hamilton County in the Ohio Legislature, is writing a history of the colored race in America.

MR. A. CLOSSON ALCOTT cannot remember when he has used any intoxicating liquor. He drinks very little coffee, and has eaten no animal food for fifty years.

THE volume of Shakespeare which Colonel Bob Ingersoll uses instead of a family Bible has inscribed on the back, "The Inspired Book." On the sides is the legend, "The Volume of the Book." In the middle of the book are blank pages for the family register.

MR. GEORGE BANCROFT is tall, thin and a little stooped. His head is rather small, his face long and thin, his eyes are youthful and lively, his mouth is expressive of decision. He has thick, white hair, and a long, luxuriant white beard.

A PHILADELPHIA music publisher with an ear for music, has been writing and publishing what he calls "Mono-tone Tunes for Tenderness." The authors of the opera object to this method of having their airs set to music, as they cause it to rest a man's right to use his memory for his own gain.

MR. J. T. TROWBRIDGE is said to never compose his poems with pen in hand, nor his prose without it. His poetic muse visits him chiefly in the open air during his walks, or while floating in a boat on the pond near his house. He often holds as many as fifty lines in his mind in this way, and in writing them down he revises them repeatedly.

THE German Empire has commissioned Baron Max Maria Von Weber, son of the composer, Carl Maria Von Weber, to visit the country during the summer and study and report upon the American system of internal navigation and steam railroads. He is an engineer of great reputation and familiar with railways, having been manager of the Saxon State Railroad.

PAUL LEICESTER has discovered a new use for slang. He says it is the tendency of language in the hands of the literary class to become formal and stilted, and that slang phrases having their origin in popular usage, and being coined out of natural experiences, by a process of natural selection become the feeders of the literary language of the people, so that it often happens that what is vulgar in one age is classic in the next. He derides the idea that language needs sign-posting and cannot be trusted to the people at large.

A WOMAN isn't fit to have a baby who doesn't know how fish is cut. But a woman does know how to hold it. It is a man whose education has been neglected in this particular. A woman will go to the crib with her eyes shut and pick the infant right side up every time out of a possible dozen, while ignorant man fumbles among the laces and embroidery and overlies and dillys, with his eyes wide open, and the chances are eight out of nine that when he lifts the youngster the blood will rush into its head.—Norristown Herald.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

RATS, mice and insects will avoid a place that has been sprinkled with chloride of lime.

IN dusting, use a soft cloth instead of a brush or wing; the cloth will catch all the dust, and you can shake it from the window, while the others set it floating again.

APPLE MARMALADE.—Do not peel your apples, but core and slice them as for a tart. Choose hard apples, like russets, or any apple that does not mush in cooking; boil them very rapidly in syrup, just enough to cover them, until clear looking, and, if liked, add a few cloves or lemon zest.

EGG MUFFINS.—Two well-beaten eggs, one pint of milk, one teaspoonful of salt, two tablespoonfuls of yeast and flour to make a batter; stand in a warm place over night. In the morning stir in a tablespoonful of melted butter and half a teaspoonful of soda dissolved in a very little hot water. Bake in gem pans.

THE American Poultry Journal says that the Bronze turkey is the most useful of all the breeds. It originated from the wild and common domesticated turkey, and for rich plumage, size and weight exceeds all others. It is very hardy bird, and if allowed to wander about and shift for itself, has a tendency to revert to a wild state.

RYE sown in August will make excellent pasture for sheep. It may be pastured pretty close and still left for grain next season, or it may be again pastured and plowed for corn in May. This is an excellent method of preparing land for corn oats or potatoes, and, where market crops are grown, is used extensively as a preparation for spring crops.

CLEANING COMPOUND.—Mix one ounce of borax and one ounce of gum camphor with one quart of boiling water. When cool add one pint of alcohol; bottle and cork tightly. When wanted for use shake well and sponge the garments to be cleaned. This is an excellent mixture for cleaning soiled black cashmere and woolen dresses, coat collars and black felt hats.

COFFEE ICE CREAM.—Three pints of cream, one cup of very strong coffee, two cups of sugar, two tablespoonfuls of arrowroot wet in cold milk; heat half of the cream to boiling; stir in the sugar, and when this is dissolved, the coffee; then the arrowroot; boil all together about five minutes, when cold beat up very light, whipping in the rest of the cream by degrees; then freeze.

CHOCOLATE ICE CREAM.—Irish moss soaked in water one hour, and dissolved well to cleanse it of sand and a certain foreign taste it has to the public in using it just at the point of boiling or simmering for one hour, or until a rich yellow color is given to the milk; then strain out cream or eggs, from one to one and a half ounces to a gallon only is necessary, and this will do to clear, thicken, and flavor with lemon or vanilla, and freeze.

IT requires, theoretically, four pounds of corn to make one pound of pork, but allow for waste, undigested matter, and for the sustenance of life. It is scarcely possible that a pound of pork can be produced on less than this. In practice the best results attained have been reached when very corn, and four and a half pounds of corn have produced a pound of pork. But as mixed food is more healthful than all corn, there is economy in feeding waste milk, boiled small potatoes, cut clover and other such food. Pork at the worst can be made for the price of four and a half pounds of corn.

ONION SOUP WITHOUT MEAT.—Drop in a saucepan a bit of butter—half the size of a hen's egg. When hot add two or three large onions; slice them; stir and cook them until they are done; then add a half teaspoonful of flour. Stir this also until red and do not let it scorch. Next pour in a pint of boiling water and season to taste with pepper and salt. Mix well and let boil a minute; then pour it into a soup-kettle and place at the back of the range or stove until ready to serve. Add then one and a half pints of boiling milk and two or three well-mashed potatoes. Add to the potatoes a little of the soup at first, then a little more until they are smooth and thin enough to put into the kettle. Stir all well together; test to see if the soup is properly seasoned; if not add whatever of salt, pepper or butter may be needed. Let it simmer a few minutes. Pour over toasted bread cut in small pieces and placed in the bottom of the tureen.

THE disease known as "ship head" and "ship jaw" is an enlargement of the bones of the head or the lower jaw. Both are the same disease, but appearing in different places. The character of the disease is a softening of the bones, which become porous or spongy, lose their solidity and strength, and become fractured, or the sinews and muscles lose their hold upon them. It is common for the whole bony structure of the skeleton to be involved, for the disease is constitutional. It is peculiarly one special to the Mississippi Valley, where the rich mold and damp impart some quality to the herbage, or which causes it to be defective in some qualities, so as to affect the health of animals disastrously. There is no cure in advanced cases, but when the bones of the upper jaw and from the lower jaw are found to be enlarging, treatment by iodes should be began at once. Phosphoric soil in mild quantities may be given to a full grown horse, and ten drops to a yearling, in the drinking water. An equivalent of phosphate of iron may be given. Exclusive corn-feeding is a frequent cause. Oats should be the chief food.

Be Kind to Yourself.

It pays to be kind to everybody; but be kind to yourself all over, and especially to your stomach, which promptly resents ill treatment. Mr. Joseph Weiler, Chicago, Ill., writes: I suffered with indigestion and Constipation for a long time. After spending a large amount of money for doctors' bills, without obtaining relief, I used the Hamburg Drops, and was entirely cured thereby.

ASTHMA!

Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy.

The late Jonas Whitcomb, of Boston, called Europe a sick place when he went there in search of health, and was imported by irrepressible Americans. He was a great sufferer from asthma, and his remedy was discovered by accident. He was induced to try it, and was surprised to find that it relieved him almost immediately. He continued its use, and was benefited for a time. While the first bottle had done so much for him, the second did more, and before the third was used he pronounced it the most valuable medicine he had ever taken, and continued its use for upwards of two months, when he was pronounced cured. He lived many years after, and was a well man until the day of his death. He gave the recipe to a friend, who introduced it into this country, and it is now known as Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy.

Extract from the "Life of Washington Irving," by his nephew, Pierre M. Irving, Vol. II., p. 326.

"The doctor prescribed, as a sovereign remedy, a large dose of opium, which he always kept by him for such occasions. Mr. Irving, however, objected to it, as he found it a very great relaxer of the system. He, therefore, substituted for it a wine glass of water, to be taken every hour during the night, with the same effect."

"I have derived very great benefit from Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy."—P. IRVING.

"President's House (postmaster's), Boston, Mass.

"My mother has suffered very much from the asthma for many years. I procured for her three months ago a bottle of Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy, and the result was truly astonishing. She has not had a severe attack since, and has kept it up, for the whole time, on the second bottle. I am, yours truly, JOHN P. HALE."—Home Missionary, New York.

"I have used Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy, and found it a most excellent medicine. I cheerfully recommend it to any one suffering from Asthma."—Rev. Dr. ARTHUR MITCHELL, Pastor Bethesda Church, Boston.

Jonas Whitcomb's Asthma Remedy is compounded only by the proprietors, JOSEPH BURNETT & CO., Boston.

It has rained every day for the past seventeen days in the vicinity of East Saginaw, Mich. In consequence the crops in that region are damaged fully 20 per cent.

SENATOR BRUCE, of Mississippi, says that three Congressional districts in that State can be carried by the Republicans "this President will use his authority to see that voters are protected in the exercise of their privileges.

A REVIEW of the situation in Maine inspires the Democratic Boston Herald to predict that the Republicans will elect their state ticket by a small majority, carry both Houses of the Legislature, and secure four or five Congressmen.

WHAT glorious figures our Democratic friends are. In 1852 the southerners put in a northern President to help them steal negroes. In 1856 they put in another to help them prepare for the rebellion. In 1860 they would put in another to help speed the resultless war.

THE New York Sun says "we need a change." But what makes the Sun think so? The country never was more prosperous. If every office was filled by a Southern brigadier, and every Confederate soldier pensioned, we doubt if the Sun would even then be happy.

IT is now said that Gen. Hancock will not resign his place in the army for two reasons. One is he may not be elected, and in that event would be just as much out; and the other is that if elected Congress will restore Fitz John Porter to the army, and he can fill his own place by appointing Porter to the vacancy.

GEN. HANCOCK is one of the dangerous soldiers whom the present democratic congress forbade by statute to go near the polls on election day, because their presence there, even for the purpose of preserving the peace, would be dangerous to the liberties of the people. Does democracy mean nothing but hypocrisy?

GOVERNOR ORMAN, in his speech at Chicago lately, struck right into the marrow of the question when he asked why Hancock should be elected, as the Democrats propose. It is a conundrum which no man can answer, for, so long as the history of the past twenty years is not effaced from the memory of the people, the challenge which can not be successfully met, is to furnish reasons for taking the control of national affairs out of the Republicans and turning it over to the party of the brigadiers.

THE Hon. John F. Potter, of Wisconsin, has, in a letter to a friend, expressed his entire approval of the nomination of Gen. Garfield. He says:

Our glorious old party came out of the Chicago Convention in better shape than has been in since the war, and it stands before the people to-day on a grander and better foundation than it has since we elected Lincoln. Garfield's nomination is all that could be desired. Between the men—Hancock and Garfield—there is no comparison. Garfield is the ablest we have in our party—and the purest, and best. The record of each shows, I think, is assured.

GARFIELD'S CAREER.

From the August Atlantic.

General Garfield's career illustrates in remarkable degree the possibilities of American life to one born with a strong brain in a strong body, and gifted with industry, courage, perseverance, and a high ambition. His father, a poor farmer, possessed of a few sterile acres and a large family, died when he was 6 years old. He had no well-to-do relatives to help him along. In fact, he had no help save the counsels of a wise, resolute, religious mother, and no capital save what lay in his own head and hands. With the labor of his hands put forth in the lower forms of honest toil, with the ax, the hoe, the carpenter's plane, and on the tow-path of a canal, he gained the power to obtain such education as a rural community afforded. Then, making a capital of his new store of knowledge, he taught country schools, and got the means to take a higher course of study. Equipped with the training of a Massachusetts college, he opened for himself a path in life which began with the Latin and Greek professorship of an obscure school in Ohio, and broadened out until it led to a Major General ship in the union army, to a seat in Congress, held for nine consecutive terms, to an election to the Senate for the unanimous choice of his party in the Ohio Legislature, and now to the Republican nomination for the Presidency. All these honors came to him without solicitation, and without effort on his part to grasp them. So far as fate shaped his career in life, it was the career of a day laborer. High purposes, an indomitable will, a great capacity for work, fixed principles, and good habits enabled him to compel fate, and change that career to one of conspicuous honor and special uses. Every farmer's boy cannot become a Major General, a Senator, and a Presidential nominee, but the lesson of Garfield's life is that the impediments of this country place no obstacles in the way of the poorest lad who toils in the fields or the workshop. It is a lesson full of encouragement and cheer. It shows that the country is not wholly given over to the rule of political rings, bosses, and conspirators, and that one party, at least, is still strong enough and wise enough to "pluck from the nettle danger the flower safety," and to select for its leader a man whose worthiness and fitness are his only strength. It shows, too, that in spite of all the changes in our sociable fabric, brought about by the growth of great corporations and the accumulation of vast wealth in a few hands, talent and manliness, moulded by money, can still win the way to the most exalted positions. The Presidency is not yet sold to the highest bidder, nor disposed of by a junto of selfish political schemers.

A CONUNDRUM.

From the Philadelphia Bulletin.

By the way—who can tell us what radical improvements the Democracy has made since it has had the upper hand in congress? We cannot remember one wise measure that it has passed or advocated.

A TWO-HANDLED JOKE.

From the Cardington, O., Independent.

The Kenton Democrat discovers that Hancock's initials, W. S. H., stand for "Will Succeed Hayes."

"Won't succeed Hayes" is just as proper and more probable,

GENERAL DIMONT, who has just returned to Washington from the Pacific coast, says to the New York correspondent of the Graphic:

"I went up into Oregon, and wherever I went I heard everybody talking Garfield. There was as much interest exhibited as though it was within a few days of election. I was astonished, and did not know what to make of it. I had either to believe that every one was for Garfield, or else that only Republicans were traveling. I suppose the reason there was so much excitement was because their State election had just taken place, and they were still aroused from it. The preponderance of Republicans may be accounted for somewhat, too, by the fact that the State had come that way. At any rate, there was a tremendous boom in full swing, and Hancock will do nothing there, you can depend upon it. It's in the air—the Garfield excitement—and he will sweep the State.

THE Greenback party is to be congratulated upon the withdrawal of Gen. Sam. Carey from its ranks. He has come out for the democratic candidature, where his sympathies have always been except when he got $30 or $40 a night to speak for the greenbackers. The democracy are welcome to all "such." They carry on strength with them, but on the contrary drive voters to the opposite party.

JEREMIAH S. BLACK AGAIN.

The Philadelphia Times, which is giving its Independent support to Hancock, published on Tuesday this personal letter to its editor from Jeremiah S. Black in regard to the Democratic candidate for a Presidential nomination), now in Europe:

HOTEL CONTINENTAL, PARIS, June 28.

MY DEAR SIR—I have regularly received the Times since I have been on this side, and through it I have learned all I know about the situation at home. I am informed fully concerning the nomination at Chicago, and did not need much information concerning the character and history of the candidate there set up, my personal acquaintance with him being tolerably full and intimate. You let drop an expression in 1868 concerning General Hancock and his then particular friends which impressed me with the notion that you did not admire either him or them up to the point of their merits. I see now that you appreciate not merely his gallantry and heroism as a soldier, but those far higher qualities of mind and heart which go to form the character of a great ruler in a constitutional government. Your supreme determination to see that Gen. Garfield shall be defeated against all unjust aspersions upon his personal character is equally pleasant reading to me, for I have been his devoted friend for many years, and I am content that I never will believe that he does not deserve the affection I have bestowed upon him. If he would carry the principles which regulate his private life into his public conduct, he would make the best chief magistrate we have ever had. But he will not for the interest of his party, as he has all his lifetime, and that will require him to take the advice which Stephens gave to Montalvin in the buckshot war. I do not know any really good man who has been and assisted in doing so many bad things in politics as Gen. Garfield.

I am very truly yours,

J. S. BLACK.

MR. HORACE WHITE has an article on "The Nominations." After reviewing the circumstances of the Chicago Convention at some length and stating forth the causes of Gen. Grant's defeat, Mr. White considers the merits of the opposing candidates. He says:

"Nobody better represents American institutions and the American idea of self government than Gen. Garfield. The poor boy grubbing an education for himself—let us beware our pity spins anybody who can sneer at this picture!—the college instructor, the brave soldier in the volunteer army, the successful leader of his party in the House of Representatives, not devoid of ambition, but free from the suspicion of trickery and deceit in his political action, a student now and always, an adornment to his profession to acquire knowledge as when he first opened the spelling book,—such is the man chosen, by accident perhaps, but well chosen, to receive the votes of a great party for the office of Chief Magistrate of the American people. Whatever may be said of the De Golyer paving contract or the Credit Mobilier case, nothing will shake the confidence of the great mass of the people that Gen. Garfield is in money matters worthy of their fullest trust."

Of the Democratic candidate Mr. White says:

Gen. Hancock is a brilliant soldier, a true patriot, and a polished gentleman. He is all that he has ever held himself out to be; he is no humbug; he has never given himself out for a statesman, and if the country takes him for one and finds itself disappointed, the fault will not be his. . . . Gen. Garfield has given better evidence of his fitness for the tasks of civil administration than Gen. Hancock. For this reason Gen. Garfield has the better prospect of carrying New York. Military exploits connected with the suppression of the Rebellion were never greatly in demand for the purpose of rallying Democrats to the polls, and it may be doubted whether the lapse of fifteen years has added anything to their property."

THE editor of the New York Republikanner writes to the Chicago Tribune that "the Germans of New York will never vote the mongrel ticket of Hancock and English, being too intelligent and patriotic for that." They do not believe in letting the rebels slip into power under any pretext, and the general prosperity of the people of the country is something they are afraid to imperil by a change.

GEN. KILPATRICK is regarded as the coming candidate of the New Jersey Republicans for governor. McClellan will be renominated by the Democrats, and the issue will then be, the Buffalo Express says, between a general who has licked somebody, and a general who hasn't.

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 29th day of August, 1876, executed by Israel Roush, of Boyne, Mount Morris county, Michigan, to James A. Hawley, of Leslie, Ingham county, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county of Charlevoix, in Liber Xof mortgages, on pages 75 and 76, on the 18th day of September, A. D. 1876 at 11 o'clock a. m. And whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is two hundred and ten and 20-100 dollars (principal and interest, and the further sum of twenty-five (25) dollars as an attorney fee, stipulated for in said mortgage, and which is the whole amount claimed to be unpaid on said mortgage, and no suit or proceeding having been instituted at law to recover the debt so remaining secured by said mortgage, or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale contained in said mortgage has become operative.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given that by virtue of the said power of sale and in pursuance of the statute in such case made and provided, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described at public auction, to the highest bidder, at the front door of the court house in Charlevoix, in said county of Charlevoix, on the 1st day of October, A. D. 1880, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to wit: The west half (½) of lot number three (3) in Town Thirty-three (33) North of Range Six (6) West, containing Forty-seven (47) acres of land according to United States survey thereof.

Dated this 21 day of July A. D. 1880.

SIDEWALK NOTICE.

Whereas, A majority of the resident owners of real estate on the South side of Water street, in the Village of Charlevoix, Michigan, have petitioned the President and Common Council to have a sidewalk built on said south side of said street, between Round Lake and Grand Sheets, on said side of street, and the Committee on Streets and Sidewalks having examined the premises and recommended that the prayer of the petition be granted. Therefore, on motion of Trustee J. M. Clark, it is ordained by the Common Council of the Village of Charlevoix, that a sidewalk be built on the south side of Water street, between Round Lake and Grand streets, on said side of street, by the adjoining owners thereon, within fourteen days from the date of the service of this notice, said sidewalk to be four feet wide, and of two inch plank laid crosswise, securely fastened with heavy spikes, upon two feet by four scantling. And it is further ordered, That the Marshal cause a certified copy of the order on such matter herein before required to construct said sidewalk, and in case said adjoining owners of said land shall neglect or refuse to build such sidewalk within the time above specified, that he cause the same to be done with reasonable dispatch and report the cost of the same, as by law and the ordinances of said village of Charlevoix provided.

Attest: H. W. CROUTER, Clerk.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

Domestic.

By the cutting to that the shore end of the tunnel now being dug under the Hudson River from Jersey City to New York, on the morning of the 21st, twenty-two men were buried alive, eight miners making an almost miraculous escape.

Among the 2,900 immigrants who arrived at New York on the 24th were 750 Mormons. Nearly 600 of the Mormons are Swedes and Norwegians. There are a few Danes and five English families among them.

OFFICIAL returns give Boston a population of 363,500—an increase of 71,000 in ten years.

EXPERTS who have investigated the causes which led to the Hudson River Tunnel accident have come to the conclusion that the engineers engaged in the work are not to relied in their duty, and guilty of gross carelessness and blundering.

ABOUT one o'clock, p. m. on the 22d a respectably-dressed man entered a Detroit bank on pretense that he wanted to buy Government bonds. The cashier who was the only person present in the bank at the time, was about to reply, when the stranger struck him with a sledge-hammer. The cashier was rendered insensible by the blow, and when he recovered found that $5,000 in bills had been taken from the money drawer.

AT Cobleskam, N. Y., a few days ago Mary Ickbella, twenty-two years of age, daughter of Samuel Ickbella, attempted to light a fire with kerosene, when the can of oil exploded, and she was fatally burned. Her father, a sister and a hired man also received burns in their efforts to save her. While enveloped in flames she ran wildly about the house, which took fire in several places.

SPECIAL AGENT SAWYER, who was sent to St. Louis by Superintendent Walker to inquire into the alleged insufficiency in the taking of the census of that city, reported on the 23d that he had investigated all complaints carefully, and that the alleged imperfections did not exist—that the census had been faithfully taken by the enumerators—and that he saw no good reason why the request to have the census taken over again should be complied with.

ON the night of the 23d a pleasure yacht, having on board Father Boyesterorgh, pastor of Trinity Catholic Church, Detroit, and a number of ships and citizen officials, was run into by the steamer Garland, on her way down the Detroit River, and sunk—two persons, the boys and six adults, were drowned.

DISPATCHES were received at Washington on the 23d from Admiral Wyman, who went on the United States steamer Tennessee to Cuba, to investigate the alleged losing indignities offered the American flag by the Spanish man-of-war Canto. Admiral Wyman states that at Santiago de Cuba he was assured by the Spanish Governor that his Government unequivocally disavowed any intentional insult or indignity, or the commission of any act at variance with the usages of all civilized powers. The Spanish authorities claimed that the vessels fired upon were not only within six miles of the shore, but actually within three miles, the limit of jurisdiction claimed by the Government of all maritime nations. Admiral Wyman further stated that the Spanish authorities offered almost daily evidence in support of this assertion, and that, in his opinion, there was nothing in the case to warrant any further inquiry on the part of our Government.

THE official census returns give Rhode Island a population of 276,780, a gain of 59,367 in ten years.

Personal and Political.

THE Chicago Tribune of the 21st says: "General Grant will soon take up his residence at New York. He has been offered and has accepted a lucrative position which will necessitate his residence in that city. His trip to Colorado and New Mexico is said to be in connection with the affair. He was offered the Presidency of the De Lesseps Canal Company at a salary of $25,000, but he declined."

COLONEL STICKNEY, Secretary of the Ute Commission, died on the 21st, at the Los Pinos Agency, of typhoid fever. He was ill only a few days.

THE following Congressional nominations were made on the 21st: Third Ohio District, F. Schultz, Republican; Ninth Indiana District, W. R. Meyers, Democrat; Seventh Indiana District, C. Brandt, Democrat.

THE Missouri Democratic State Convention met on the 21st and nominated Thomas T. Crittenden for Governor on the first ballot.

GENERAL HENRY S. HUIDEKOPER, of Germantown, Pa., who commanded the "Bucktail Regiment" at the battle of Gettysburg, has been appointed Postmaster of Philadelphia.

THE following Congressional nominations were made on the 23d: Sixteenth Illinois District, Judge Thomas Hudson, Democrat; Eighth Ohio District, General T. W. Kirby, Republican; Ninth Tennessee District, C. H. Simonton, Democrat; Twelfth Illinois District, Henry M. Miller, Greenback; Ninth Indiana District, General Tom Browne, Republican.

THE Colorado State Democratic Convention for the nomination of State officers will meet at Leadville on the 18th of August.

THE Vermont Democratic Convention met at Burlington on the 24th and nominated Edward J. Phelps for Governor, George W. Gates for Lieutenant-Governor, and James K. Williams for Treasurer.

THE California State Greenback Convention, which met in San Francisco on the 23d, nominated W. A. Howe for Congressman from the Third District, and J. H. Polk from the Fourth District.

THE Ohio State Democratic Convention met at Cleveland on the 23d and nominated William Long for Secretary of State, M. R. Ewbank for Judge of the Supreme Court, and J. J. Jackson for Member of the Board of Public Works. Messrs. Fanning and Burns were renominated, the former for Clerk of the Supreme Court and the latter for School Commissioner.

GENERAL GRANT arrived at Leadville on the 24th, and was welcomed by a salvo of artillery, a military escort and a grand procession, in which some 30,000 persons participated.

JOHN R. FRENCH, ex-Sergeant-at-Arms of the United States Senate, has been appointed Secretary and Disbursing Officer of the Ute Commission, ex-Colonel Stickney, deceased.

THE New York Tammany State Committee met at Saratoga on the 23d and reelected and accepted the resignations of the candidates for Presidential Electors nominated at the Syracuse Convention in April last. Resolutions were adopted in favor of harmony in the party and indorsing the nominations of Hancock and English.

Foreign.

THE London Times of the 21st says Austria had informed the Porte that she was determined that the decisions of the Conference with respect to the Greek frontier and Montenegro should be executed to the letter. The Times states that Germany supported the declaration of Austria.

COLONEL VARTE, of the Mexican army, with 470 men, was reported on the 23d to be in pursuit of Victoria and his Apaches, who had just crossed from the United States into Mexico.

THE General Manager of the Northern Counties of England Insurance Company has been sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment at hard labor, the Chairman of the Board of Directors to twelve months', and four Directors to six months', for falsifying the company's accounts.

A SHOCK of earthquake was felt at Orizaba, Mex., on the 23d. A loud rumbling noise was heard at the same time.

A RECENT explosion of powder in the artillery works of Kosika, South Russia, killed eighteen and wounded twelve persons.

OUR GRAIN AND FRUIT.

The Pine Lake Region Crowding Rapidly to the Front.

I was a guest to the Pine Lake Region and the present address to that section was the burden of the conversation, some stranger of the harvest who came out to commence work in the field as fall as they were. I found that the wood is occupied with cedar and hemlock, and the land appears to be very rich and productive. Many people interested in the country are making preparations to put in large crops next season, and the general impression is that the yield will be immense.

A few of the hay being the eastern part of the town started for Petoskey but changed their minds and went home. Many of the farmers in the vicinity of their residence and have enough to last them about three hours to the Sound. Some of the hunters found timber very scarce. Deer are said to be plenty in the woods.

How The Cow Lost Her Tail.

PEOPLE who have cows to sell take them to King's cattle yards on Monday morning, and people who want to buy cows go there to select their animals. There is always a big crowd and any amount of chaffing. Cows of all colour, ages, shapes and sizes are tied to the fences, and the owner will take his cash that nothing but a mortgage on his farm could have induced him to part with his favorite.

The other Monday the sport of the yard was cow tail, till about a foot and a half long. The weather was awful hot and the flies plenty, and she not only worked that old stub for all it was worth, but made it pretty lively for insects with her hind feet.

"I see smiles and hear laughter," said the owner as he faced the crowd, "but this very bob-tailed cow is worth any beef in the yard, she don't look finished out with that stumps-tail, but here is another case wherein the inventive genius of man can overcome the lost forces of nature."

He thereupon deftly affixed a small bush to her tail by means of a string, and the cow sent the flies skyhigh at every rap.

"And now how did this cow lose her tail?" continued the man, as he hung his coat on the fence. "She didn't go slathering around a mowing-machine, oh, no. She didn't get it hung in the barn door—not by a jugful. She didn't cut it off herself in spite the family, for we know how we all love her. Why, gentlemen, when I started with this cow this morning there was more weeping and wailing in the town of Bedford than I ever heard at any funeral. I tell ye, bob-tailed cows not only have a place in the world's great pastures, but also in the affections of the public. I've got to sell that cow to buy liver-pads for my family, and I tell you I feel as clear down to my boots. Excuse these tears, but that animal has got a strong hold on my affections, and we are a family that never conceal our real feelings.

By this time everybody in the yard was in the circle around him, and the man wiped his eyes and said:

"I had her tail. Last week a stranger came along looking for a cow which would give twenty quarts of milk at one milking. I told him he was my huckleberry. That cow has done it time and again, and she'll do it every day in the year. The stranger laughed. That kinder stung me, and I told him if she didn't run out twenty full quarts of milk I'd cut off her tail. He did, he was to give me fifty dollars for the cow. Ladies and gentlemen, I set down and milked. I felt as sure of them fifty dollars as I do of leaving this yard alive, but alas! this is a vain world. She had got hold of something wrong that day, and all I could get out of her was nineteen quarts, one pint and one gill. I am a man of my word, and off went her tail. Now, then, if there is any person here who isn't dodgasted particular about that missing gill of milk let 'im step forward, plank down twenty-five dollars, and take the best cow which ever pulled grass in Wayne County.—Detroit Free Press.

Some of the Most Remarkable Long Fasts on Record.

THE recent remarkable fasting test by Dr. Tanner has led to the edmination of a curious book written by one Wasley, entitled "Wonders of the Little World," in which the writer has recorded the following feats of alleged long-continued abstinence from food:

Paulus Lentulus, a doctor in the Province of Bern, Switzerland, in a book entitled "A Wonderful History of the Fasting of Appolonia Schreirs, a Virgin in Bern," says she was by command of the Magistrates brought to Bern, and "having a strict guard put upon her and all kinds of trials put in practice for the discovery of any collusion or fraud in the business, in conclusion they found none, but dismissed her fairly. In the first year of her fasting she slept very little; in the second not at all, and so continued for a long time after."

Gerhardus Bacolfanuses, physician to the Roman King Maximillian, tells of Margaret, a ten-year-old girl, born in the village of Rood, near Spires, who began abstaining from all kinds of food in 1506, and fasted for three years, walking in the meantime, and talking and laughing and playing as other children of her age would do. She was by special order of the Bishop of Spires delivered into the hands of the parish, priest and by him narrowly observed. Afterward by command of the King, Dr. Bacolfanuses took charge of her and subjected her to the closest scrutiny for twelve days, when finding that no deception was practiced he allowed her to return to her friends.

Katherine Binder, born in the Palatinate, in 1585, is reported by Fabritius to have fed only upon air for a period of over nine years; another maiden, aged fourteen, born in the Dukedom of Juliers, is credited with having done without food for three years.

The Maiden of Meurs fasted for fourteen years. Her reason was Dr. Pielgen, and her wonderful fast is recorded, originally, in Dutch. From the title page we learn "Twenty-one years old until she reached the age of thirty-six, she is said to have taken no sustenance whatever, she fasted from the year 1597 until 1611, and the fact is testified to by the magistrates of the town of Meurs, and by the town minister, who closely observed her. Over a picture of the starving maiden is written a Latin verse of which the following is a translation:

This Maid of Meurs thirty and six years spent,
Fourteen of which she took no nourishment;
Thus pale and wan she sits as fast asleep,
Awaiten's all she loves to look upon.

Phillip Melanethon said he had known Luther to fast for four days together.

"I know," said Poggius, "a man who lived for two years together without any food." He had also read of a girl who fasted the whole of twelve years in the reign of the Emperor Leotharius.

John Scot, a Scotchman, lived about the year 1680. Having lost a lawsuit, he shut himself up in the abbey of Holyrood House, and abstained from meat and drink for thirty or forty days. The news of the feat having gone abroad, the King ordered a second test; Scot was shut up in a private room in the Castle of Edinburgh, and nobody was allowed access to him; a sentry over and a little bread were set before him, which were found not to have been diminished at the end of thirty-two days. He gave a like proof of his endurance to Pope Clement VII. at Rome, and when he left the Holy City carried with him proof of his long fast under the Pope's seal. At Venice he repeated his feat. Returning to England he denounced the divorce of King Henry VIII. from Queen Catherine, and was thrust into prison, where he fasted for fifty days. How John Scot ended his hunger-enduring career is not known.

Herodotus Barbarus says: "There was a man at Rome that lived for forty years, only by smoking in of the air." He was a priest and was all that time in health.

Rondeletius reports: "A girl that to the tenth year of her age lived only upon air." She was after ward married and had children.

Joan Baptista is a remarkable case cited by Cardinal Richelieu's physician. She was a French girl. When eleven years old, in 1598, she was confined with a fever which continued twenty-four days, leaving her speechless, obstructing the esophagus, and leaving all the parts below the head dull and languid. The stomach dried up and contracted, although all other portions of the body remained a rounded and healthy appearance. Joan could take no food of any kind for nearly three years, during which time she moved around, did housework and seemed in no way incommoded by the absence of nourishment. She returned to food gradually after the time named.

Marcliscezium manilla is reported to have lived fifteen years without food or drink, and to have been still living and tasting when the a mint here drawn on was written.

A Piedmontese maid refreshed for two months on water, or diluted wine, at Genoa, under strict superintendence of guards placed over her by Prince Auria. This test was thought to confirm the report that she had fasted "for many years together."

Franciscus Nicholaus Petra-Undersa, a Helvetian, left his wife and five children to live in solitude, and died in 1470, at the age of seventy, having fasted during the last twenty years of his life! In all this time he took food but once, and then by the order of the physician of Clement V., who called divine to know through the action of the climate and the seasons.—Christian Union.

Cheap Goods.

THERE are some very singular illusions prevalent in the minds of some of the dwellers in rural districts in regard to the prices at which goods and garments can be obtained in New York City. They read astonishing advertisements; they receive surprising circulars, detailing at great length the rates at which suits, jackets, mantles, skirts, hosiery and the like have been reduced in New York City. They are lined with an instantaneous desire to share in this brilliant opportunity. A camel's-hair dress trimmed with satin and real lace, at about three dollars and seventy-five cents, expressage and all charges paid, would suit them exactly, and the announcements are so ingeniously mixed, that the impression that they can procure some such costume for seven dollars and a half is a persistent one in the mind.

Moreover, it is supposed and expected that the lowest prices announced for materials and fabrics in the bulk, and which frequently consist of treacherous remnants and "ends," or, sometimes, of odd-style goods, can be reached in the purchase of small quantities of fresh material, which are required of a particular color, or to match another fabric.

In a store the other day, where a great bargain was announced for a placard over a pile of checked gingham dresses for children of three and four years of age was seen to say eight cents each. This was certainly very cheap; but on examination it was found that a narrow colored edge, and trimmed with a narrow colored needlework, were from two dollars and seventy-five cents to four dollars and fifty cents each.

Just so with cheap dresses. Attracted by an advertisement, ladies go to stores, and find that what is cheap is not fit to wear, and that what is good and fresh and fashionable is not cheap. The disappointment is great even when a bargain may be had; but it is near the close of the season, and because the style of the garment, or the design of the fabric, is such that it is not considered safe to keep it over. But even these are snapped up by people who, at certain seasons and in certain cases, and are not to be relied upon as furnishing merit in their shopping, are paid, for usually the season for the goods or article very quickly passes away, and it is left on the hands of the buyer, and may be as obviously out of date, as hardly to be wearable another season.—Journal of Commerce.

Thunder and Lightning in South Africa.

NATAL is an awful country for thunder and lightning, and never a summer passes without some damage being done to both man and beast. No house is considered quite safe without a conductor. Maritzburg is rather noted for its thunder storms, and though I have seen one or perhaps two instances of the tall tele graphs of the city that had been seared from head to foot by lightning, yet, when it is considered how numerous they are, how frequently these thunder storms occur, and how awfully near the lightning approaches, it was astonishing how few of them had been struck. From this fact I should say the lightning conductor offers peculiar attraction to the electric fluid; though from these cases mentioned, where trees had been scorched but not shivered, their wood seem to have acted as conductors. When on the subject of thunder I may mention two instances of the freaks sometimes indulged in by the latter. One happened on board ship on a voyage to Australia, when one of the men standing near the foot of the mainmast or the main rigging, I forget which, was struck down by the fluid. He remained in a stupefied state for some little time, but recovered. The lightning had made a bold patch on the crown of his head and torn the iron hoops off his boots. It was several years after the accident when I made the acquaintance of the boy, and the bald patch still remained on the crown of his head. He was considered rather a stupid boy, but whether this was natural or the effect of the lightning seemed doubtful.

The other freak happened in Natal. Mr. W—d, a settler on Moor River, was riding across a high range (Mount Weely) when he was overtaken by a thunder storm; he recollected nothing more. He was found wandering around in rather a stupid state, and could not well account for his being on foot, or what had become of his horse. A search being made in the direction he was likely to have followed from the farm, his horse was found on a spur of the range, dead, and his saddle scattered to pieces. The Kaffirs believe that where lightning has struck is will strike again, and if a hut or kraal has been hit they vacate the spot and build elsewhere. They are exceedingly fond of fresh meat, and will eat beasts that have died a natural death, even when in so high a condition as to be fit only for vultures. I have seen them carry themselves with the flesh of a sheep that had died within twenty minutes after being bitten by a snake, and even relish the inbarnel parts near where the death-bite had been given. But they will not eat a beast that has been killed by lightning.—Land and Water.

THE Comte d'Hauterive, a member of the Paris New Club, had three duels within six days. The first he fought against M. Fresny, the son of the financier who was for many years Governor of the Credit Foncier. The weapon was the sword, and Fresny was slightly wounded. His opponent in the second duel was Count Lardarel, the brother-in-law of Victor Emanuel's natural son, Count Mirafiori. It was fought with sabers, and Count Hauterive again received his adversary. The third duel he fought with a pistol, and once more the Count got the best of M. Du Moulin.

SPICED PLUMS.—Four pounds brown sugar, seven pound plums, one pint cider vinegar, one nutmeg grated, one tablespoonful each of cinnamon, cloves, allspice. Boil all slowly two hours.

APPLE BLOAT.—Prepare twelve apples as for sauce; when cold add the whites of two eggs well beaten, then beat the whole till stiff. Make a rich custard with the yolks of the two eggs and put the apple mixture on the custard.

TO CLEAN STEEL ORNAMENTS.—To clean steel ornaments, dip a small brush into some paraffin oil and then into some emery powder—such as is used in the knife-machines—and well brush the ornaments; and all the rust will soon come off; polish with a dry leather and dust.

YEAST.—One pint mashed potatoes, water and all, one cup of flour, one cup of sugar, one cup of salt, one cup strong hop tea, four quarts boiling water. When cool add a pint of good lively yeast. Let it stand for twenty-four hours, occasionally stirring it; strain it and put in a jug and set in a cool place.

EFFERVESCING LEMONADE.—The juice of one lemon, the pulp and rind of the same, one dessert spoonful of powdered sugar, one-half small teaspoonful of carbonate of soda. Squeeze the juice from the lemon, strain and add it to the water, and sweeten the whole with the sugar. When well mixed put in the soda, stir well and drink while the mixture is in an effervescing state.

CREAM TARTLET.—Make a short paste with one white and three yelks of eggs, one ounce of sugar, one ounce of butter, a pinch of salt and flour, work it lightly, roll it out to the thickness of a quarter of an inch. Line some patty pans with it, fill them with uncooked rice, take them out, and bake them in a moderate oven till done. Remove the rice, and fill the tartlets with jam, or with stewed fruit, and on the top put a heaped spoonful of whipped cream.

THE administration of medicines through the nose of a horse or other animal, is a crude and dangerous practice, as odor is originally given off and ignorant persons, as the fluid, by being given thus in a continuous stream, will run down into the windpipe and enter the lungs instead of the stomach by pouring medicines forced into the larger quantities, the horse cannot perform the act of breathing without at the same time allowing the fluid to enter the lungs. If, besides, the fluid contained undissolved or irritating substances, the danger would be increased.—National Live Stock Journal.

Changing Seed.

THERE seems to be no idea so thoroughly believed in by experienced farmers than that it is a great benefit to change seed occasionally; yet it is by no means an undisputed fact, and we know of some intelligent men, indeed, some who stand among the most thoroughly educated and experienced in the farming business, who contend that this supposed necessity for a change of seed is entirely imaginary.

We confess to a sympathy with those who think an occasional change necessary; and yet we have so often found, in the light of a new and careful experience, that even practices very thoroughly established, came to be abandoned, that we are always willing to reconsider any opinion, no matter how strongly held. The change is thought to be particularly useful in potatoes, and a change of seed in this article is generally made as regularly as crops are rotated from year to year. But one of our friends is very emphatic in regard to the potato, for the change of seed is precisely. He has had one potato—that is one variety of potato—year after year for ten years, and they are as good as ever. In his opinion it is not that a variety is sick of the ground that it sometimes gives out, but that it is diseased from ordinary unhealthy causes. It is simply a change of an unhealthy stock for a healthy one, and not a change out of a variety.

The matter has a practical importance, as people often put themselves to a great deal of trouble and expense in order to make a change in the seed. If the suggestion made in the line of a true reason for the supposed benefit of change, proper care in saving healthy seed will be as good as a change. But we must be satisfied that the suggestion is correct and that the truth has in the few experiments made. There are two sides, and sometimes several sides, to all questions of this nature. We have personally knowledge of trials made by farmers forty and fifty years ago, when the varieties of potatoes generally cultivated by our best farmers were comparatively few to what they are now, and whose crops, in using the same seed year after year, became poorer and poorer, though there was no apparent disease, and the only remedy they had was a change of seed. Sometimes it was the same variety obtained several hundreds of miles away—from the State of Maine, for instance—and the yield was double, the potato larger and the quality better.—Germantown Telegraph.

PRINCIPLES NOT MEN—THE RECORD OF THE GREAT DEMOCRATIC PARTY.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:

The attitude of the great Democratic party is the same that it has always occupied it. Like the old Bourbons of France and Italy, they never learn anything or forget. This attitude reveals one class of so-called reformers and reconstructionists. They stand about like the ante-chamber bankrupts. Instead of being a party of progress, they are conservative. They may prate about Democracy being an everlasting, eternal idea, kept alive as were the altar-fires at the ancient shrine, by the great considerations of the well being of the masses of the people, but a greater fraud, a trapper's lie has never been foisted into being.

The very existence of the party proves it: it cannot be eternal; it lives in the past; its record is a blot on the escutcheon of American history; it has pandered to the lowest passions of human nature; it has ever affiliated with everything that has been low and base-lived; it has set up a doctrine that would cause the dismemberment of the States and the destruction of the Union. In their pride they thus themselves learned the possibilities of subduing. The party originated in the south, and for years held the north under subjection with an iron hand, known to-day it can only hold its own by sufferance, and that by possession of a few electoral votes north.

Through every period of American history its glaring inconsistencies crop out into our midst—the slavery question from its inception to the Missouri compromise, all show the fearful strength against the rights of a common humanity and the ability of the north for self government.

The Democracy hold the reins of power, and the south whose governed these United States. Forming the State-craft, they cast force their laws into the statute books of the north, but they found record-oil in the old institution of the ancient domain of Virginia: "Slavery cannot exist in the States that once formed part of the domain of Virginia." Their sires were frustrated, and because these southern statesmen could not force their creeds and dogmas on the States north of Mason-and-Dixon, the bloody debates and the threats of an appeal to arms, again proving themselves domineering and tyrannical.

A celebrated general once said, "The Democratic party was born under planets that were in opposition. It lives in the objective case. Like a mule, it has no pride of ancestory, no hope of posterity." It never originates anything. It shines by a borrowed light. It has never been joined in wedlock to any principle, but lived for years in open adultery with a harlot called slavery—lived with her until she died of corruption, and was buried amidst the sobs and groans of her paramour.

The strength of the present Democracy is full of noxious vapors that breed moral pestilence and death. The sun never shines through it, vegetation grows lazily under its sickly half-rays. Springs of purity are never found in Democracy, its waters are turned, lifeless, covered with the filth and scum with which corrupt passions and reckless wakes always defile the course of men. The evil which Democracy has committed has failed to yield harvests of any value to the nation, but has given a crop of worthless weeds and briars.

Democracy has no love of country; believes in no sovereignty of the nation; draws its color from its flows and self-esteem treason to its habitations; holds the souls of our soldiers and sailors as naught; strives to blacken the names of our heroes; weeps over the lost cause, hates the flag, and loves the gray; sulks beauty in the back, winks up the wounds of treason and applies vases of comfort and hope to its devotees; applauds when hopeless blackness settles down in the south, and caresses the hands red with their innocent blood; decries the results of a war to an extent as to make for themselves homes in the south, justifies the ends as does Hood and other rebels.

Democracy is a curse to the land, the enemy of our interests when the days when arts flash forth, and cruise in prosperity and splendor.

Democracy is the original sin let loose to curse and destroy. If the spirit of evil were in search of the nation, the most fitting type of nebulosus, the shield of the devil, and its home should be in that outer darkness, where there is weeping and gnashing of teeth.

The governing class the Democracy, with all the force and power of uniting state in the south, pay taxes into the national treasury, yet want to handle the money and have to the south as Democracy the channel to fill its pockets with the revenues in the nation, and to leverage in the proceeds of the $17,000,000,000 they expect the nation to pay for their confederate war debt.

While the north contributes to the general government $221,000,000 per annum, the entire Confederate States contribute $17,650,000, and from this the State of Virginia pays $8,500,000 for internal tax.

Yet this pending, energetic, enterprising south is incapable of governing itself, and must submit to them administration while they put on the harness. The northern Democrat is placed in the hands of these unruly southern overseers, and votes as he is told to do, the top hold out to him being a share in the plunder when they get possession of the treasury.

We have alluded to the debasing secret that has ever ruled the principles of the great Democratic party, and as "history has not men" are to be watchwords of the campaign, let us look at the principle governing the great new allied Democracy, the grand States rights question.

The defense of an Democratic noble "that the union had been created a compact of States; that the States, as States, not the people of the whole country, are our limits to the Constitution; that the supreme court was not the final judge between any one of the States and the general government, that instrument of the federal union, plainly declared it to be so, that consequently any State at any time may pronounce itself aggrieved by any act of the general government it may choose to consider unconstitutional, and then may employ any means of redress it can bring to bands on in its own defense against the nations."

In a word, this doctrine gives to a State the right to "secede" whenever it may be regarded as promotive of its own highest interests.

Thus this union is only one of those bastard marriages, where corrupt or fatal passions agree to live together, not for life, but during their sovereign pleasure.

To further illustrate this spirit, we go back to April, 1830. The State rights conspirators held a grand feast in Washington in honor of the birthday of Jefferson, but really to organize a southern conspiracy against the general government.

Andrew Jackson had been persuaded (outwitted) to be present, an elaborate paper had been prepared eulogizing the Republican form of government, in which were some quiet declarations of the right of a State to self-protection.

Mr. Jefferson's relations to the State rights party were abundantly recognized, and in the following toast went to the bottom of the whole business. It declared in guarded but intelligible language the doctrine of "nullification, secession and rebellion."

Old Hickory's wrath kindled, his eyes flashed fire, he sprang to his feet and in a voice of thunder gave their toast:

"OUR FEDERAL UNION—IT MUST AND SHALL BE PRESERVED."

Jackson, tho' at one time a States-rights believer, saw the awfulness of these conspiracies, at once shivered them. He rose, emptied the very principles on which Jefferson had built up the party. He spoke of our country, not as a confederation, but as a nation.

THE SECESSION DOCTRINE AGAIN.

Was proposed as a solution to effect the growing power of the north, and put the Slaveocracy at the helm of the union, and build up the slave power at the expense of the nation.

Democracy wrote its own history in characters of blood, and since 1854 the character have been daring ones. Bleeding Kansas brings a curse that will go down to history to the everlasting disgrace and if honor of the Northern Democrat because he intrigued to it and perpetuated it. And when in after times, the history of our republic shall be written, the baffled historian, shall speak of these times as days of glaring injustice, when the wrong triumphed, and the mighty wrong their prevailed.

The Democracy invented and maintained the Rebellion, and the leaders, those South ern Democrats deny of the very privilege they sought at their council.

That the majority shall rule—for the minority are counted out and disfranchised by fraud, force or violence. Heaven and Returning Boards.

"DOCTRINES AND TRADITIONS."

From the Grand Rapids Eagle.

The Cincinnati platform opens with this: "We pledge ourselves anew to the constitutional doctrines and traditions of the Democratic party as illustrated by the teaching and example of a long line of Democratic statesmen and patriots, and embodied in the platform of the last National Convention of the party." Do the Democrats admit that ever any of their "doctrines and traditions" were unconstitutional? Not at all. Their pledge means, then, a new declaration of all their "doctrines and traditions." What are they?

The old State Sovereignty doctrine and tradition is one of them. They pledge themselves anew to that.

The doctrine of the South that Slavery should be allowed to extend itself over the whole country is another. The decision of the Dred Scott decision is another.

It was a Democratic "doctrine and tradition that the Government had no right to coerce a State to remain in the Union and sustain its existence as one of the United States. Their last President, Buchanan, reaffirmed that State Right and to it they "pledge themselves anew."

In 1861 they substantially repeated this: that heresy, and supplemented it by declaring the war a failure and demanding a cessation of hostilities. This not was not a tradition, it was a flatly declared Democratic doctrine.

All through the war period it was a Democratic doctrine to oppose the authority of the Government to procure soldiers to fight its battles.

Opposition to the emancipation of the slaves was a Democratic doctrine.

Opposition to the legal tender law was at one time a Democratic doctrine.

Almost without exception, opposition to the leading measures adopted to carry on the war and save the Union was Democratic doctrine. To these doctrines of opposition they "pledge themselves anew."

It was a Democratic doctrine to oppose the Constitutional amendment which made all citizens of the United States citizens of the States in which they reside. The Democrats opposed it in both branches of Congress. The Democrats this year pledge themselves anew to that opposition.

Opposition to all the amendments was a Democratic doctrine and tradition. They confirm that when they "pledge themselves anew."

In 1868 the Democratic party declared the reconstruction acts "unconstitutional, revolutionary and void." In 1869 they "pledge themselves anew" to the "doctrines and traditions."

The Democratic party has opposed all the laws to enforce the Constitutional Amendments.

The Democratic party has advocated the taxation of Government bonds and other public securities.

The Democratic party has advocated substantially the payment of Government obligations in other Government obligations, and that these latter should be redeemable.

The Democrats in Congress ten years ago opposed a resolution affirming the validity of the Constitutional amendments.

The Democratic party opposed the public bill in 1869, which pledged the faith of the Nation to pay its debts honestly in coin.

The Democratic party opposed the laws to put down the Ku Klux conspiracies, and opposed all similar laws for the protection of the lives and privileges of citizens.

The Democratic party opposed the resumption act and after its passage the mandate its repeal.

The Democratic party is on record as generally in opposition to the financial policy and measures which have brought about resumption, have brought all paper currency to par with coin, have refunded the public debt and reduced the interest, have reduced taxation and relieved the people of many heavy burdens.

The Democratic party is on record as striving desperately to repeal the laws for the protection of honest voting, and even threatening to stop the supplies unless the President would help do that.

In short, the "doctrines and traditions" of the Democratic party [illegible] can approve to all the chief measures by which the country has been saved its credit restored and the present prosperity brought about.

And the Democratic party now pledges itself anew "to its doctrines and traditions."

MORTGAGE SALE.—Whereas default has been made in the payment of the money secured by a mortgage dated the 30th day of August, 1876, executed by Israel Kinney, of Hampton, Manistee county, Michigan, to James A. Hawley, of Beaver Island, Charlevoix county, Michigan, which said mortgage was recorded in the office of the register of deeds of the county of Charlevoix, in Liber 11 of mortgages on pages 69 and 70 on the 19th day of September A. D. 1876, at 10 o'clock A. M. And whereas the amount claimed to be due on said mortgage at the date of this notice is the sum of one hundred and two and [illegible] dollars, principal, interest and attorney fees. And whereas the sum of twenty-five dollars was by the terms of said mortgage, and which is by law, to be allowed to the mortgagee as a solicitor fee in case of proceeding having been instituted to foreclose the same by advertisement, which sum or any part thereof, whereby the power of sale in said mortgage has become operative. Now therefore notice is hereby given that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, the said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of the premises therein described, at public auction, to the highest bidder, on the front door of the court house in Charlevoix in said county of Charlevoix, on the 25th day of October A. D. 1880, at ten o'clock in the forenoon of that day, which said premises are described in said mortgage as follows, to wit: The southwest one half interest in undivided No. of Section Eight (8), in Township Thirty-three (33) North of Range Seven (7) West, containing eighty acres more or less according to United States survey thereof.

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

Domestic.

THE Health Officers at Memphis are said to be enforcing the most stringent quarantine regulations against all points on the Lower Mississippi. Up to the 20th there was not the slightest indication of any form of yellow fever in that city.

THE Comptroller of the Currency states that the total losses charged off by the National Banks for the six months ending March 1, 1880, amounted to $2,767,000. The losses for the corresponding period in 1879 were $10,379,324. Of these losses during the last six months $268,221 was on account of depreciation in the premiums upon United States bonds held by the banks, chiefly bonds which were about to mature.

A LARGE quantity of whisky and a well-equipped illicit distillery were discovered in the premises officers raid, Nelson, N. Y., a few days ago, on the farm of a wealthy resident of New York City. The owner of the farm pretended that he was running a vinegar factory.

THE Captain of the schooner Rumbee F. Newcomb reiterates the statement made by him on his arrival in the last trip, concerning the firing upon him by a Spanish war vessel, and is positive that when the affair happened he was ten miles from the Cuban shore.

SECRETARY EVARTS on the 30th ult. received the Arbitrator, Mr. Parsons, of the schooner George Washington, who arrived at the port of Baltimore July 27, regarding the searching of his vessel by Spaniards off the coast of Cuba. The Secretary considered the affidavit a very clear statement, but says: "Of course there can be no action taken by the United States Government until all the facts in the case are in its possession. If, upon thorough investigation, it shall appear to the satisfaction of the Administration that the Spanish Government has really insulted the dignity of the United States flag, a demand for reparation will be made."

A HAILSTORM at Cape Cod on the 29th ult was so heavy that large quantities of hailstones remained on the ground the next morning.

AFTER considerable parleying and with considerable reluctance forty-eight of the chief men of the Utes on the 30th ult. signed the treaty prepared by the Commissioners at Ign Plume. The ceded lands will not be open to settlement until all the arrangements in regard to removal are perfected and a proclamation to that effect issued by the President.

THE jury in the Sewanhanka case submitted their verdict on the 30th ult., substantially exonerating the United States Steamboat Inspectors from all blame, but severely censuring the crew for their lack of discipline.

A LARGE crowd of excited negroes surrounded the jail in Jonesboro, Ga., on the 30th ult., and demanded the bodies of four white prisoners who were under arrest upon the charge of killing a family of blacks the night before. The sheriff placed a squad of fifty men under arms, and up to the evening of that day there appeared to be no one had taken place.

AN old man and a woman were in jail at Fremont, Nebraska, on the 30th ult. when the authorities believed to be members of the notorious Bender family. The statement was made that they would be held until the arrival of persons from Kansas who would be able to identify them.

IT is said the hop crop in New York State this year will be twenty-five per cent. greater than the crop of 1879.

ARIZONA has a population of 41,589, exclusive of reservation Indians.

Messrs. Hancock's and English's Letters of Acceptance.

GENERAL HANCOCK.

NEW YORK, July 30.

The following is General Hancock's letter of acceptance:

GENTLEMEN:—I have the honor to acknowledge the receipt of your letter of July 13, 1880, notifying me formally of my nomination to the office of President of the United States by the National (Democratic) Convention lately assembled in Cincinnati. I accept the nomination with grateful appreciation of the confidence reposed in me.

The principles enunciated by the Convention are those I have cherished in the past and shall endeavor to maintain in the future.

THE DISTRICTION AND SUPREMACY

The Thirteenth, Fourteenth and Fifteenth Amendments to the Constitution of the United States, embodying the results of the war for the Union, are irrevocable. If called to the Presidency I should deem it my duty to resist with all my power any attempt to impair or evade the full force and effect of the Constitution, which in every article, section and amendment is the supreme law of the land. The Constitution limits the basis of the representation of the United States. The powers granted by it to the Legislative, Executive and Judicial Departments respectively limit the authority of the General Government. Powers not delegated to the United States by the Constitution, nor prohibited by it to the States belong to the States respectively, or to the people. The General and State Governments, each acting in its own sphere, form a complete system. The lawful jurisdiction of the other, constitute the limit of authority, whether in the case of a general government with general powers, and State Governments with powers less in degree but greater in detail, or in the case of a government of enumerated powers, and State Governments with all powers not delegated to the States, is a guilty the boundless wisdom. This is the Union our fathers made it, and which has been so regarded and cherished by the veteran statesmen who have preceded us in the administration of the government. Under it we have grown from a few millions to fifty millions of people. Under it we have become the most populous and powerful nation of the world. May we not say, nearly in the words of Washington, that the experiment entrusted to us by the American people has been successful, that the Federal Government established by the Constitution has in fact, between the people endeavoring to gain the political power which rightfully belongs to them and to retain the pure, simple, economical Constitutional Government of our fathers as the model for the future security of the people of these United States.

THE PLATFORM—GENERAL HANCOCK—ETC.

I accept the nomination upon the platform of principles adopted by the Convention, which I cordially approve, and I accept it under an unfaltering trust in the virtue, the wisdom and patriotism of the great statesmen and soldiers who have been put in nomination before me for the office of President of the United States. The eminent services to the country which they rendered to the Constitution, the Union and the laws, his claim upon the gratitude of the people of our real independence, the support of our peace, safety and prosperity, and of the liberty we so highly prize, and intensely revered by the people.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF GOVERNMENT AND CIVIL SERVICE.

But no form of Government, however carefully devised—on principles, however sound—will protect the rights of the people unless its administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle that public office is a public trust nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. Offices fraud, violence or incompetency controls, the noblest Constitutions and wisest laws are useless. Of all systems it is the worst for the public, besides the votes for freemen. It is only by a full vote, free ballot and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our institutions. Such rules Jacksonian sway, and the whole structure falls.

Public office a trust, and a public trust bestowed upon the holder. No incompetent and dishonest person should ever be intrusted with it, or, if appointed, they should promptly be ejected.

Our material interests, varied and progressive, demand our constant and united efforts. A solution and separation of the two is to our credit, together with a wise and economical management of the public expenditures, should be maintained, in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their right to the fruits of their own industry.

The time has come to enjoy the substantial benefits of our magnificent domain. As one people, we have common interests. Let us encourage harmony and generous rivalry among our own industrial classes. Let us encourage the gallant merchant marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, assist our merchants, manufacturers and producers to develop new markets, to employ to the utmost the prosperity and happiness of our people.

CIVIL SERVICE.

If elected, I shall, with divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my conviction of right, and shall labor to foster and defend the Union, and to see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country after I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to all number rightly the functions and exercise of all to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To the Hon. John W. Stevenson, President of the Convention Hon. John H. Stokes, Chairman, and others of the Committee of the National Democratic Convention.

WILLIAM H. ENGLISH.

INDIANAPOLIS, IND., July 30.

Hon. William H. English transmitted the following letter of acceptance of the nomination for vice-president of the United States to the Committee of Notification today:

To the Hon. John W. Stevenson, President of the Convention; the Hon. John H. St okes, Chairman, and others of the Committee of Notification:

GENTLEMEN: I have now the honor to reply to your letter of the 13th inst., informing me that I was unanimously nominated for the office of Vice President of the United States by the late Democratic National Convention which assembled at Cincinnati. As first shadowed in the verbal formative made to me by some of the members of your order I have now to say that I accept the high trust with a realizing sense of its responsibility, and am profoundly grateful for the honor conferred.

A Striking Resemblance.

WE once told a story of two Shakers down East who recently re-united one another in certain characteristics. Here is another somewhat like unto it—a story of two brothers, who were lawyers, and practicing in the same town—which is certainly worth telling:

A certain pecuniary requiring legal assistance had been recommended to one of the two brothers, but had forgotten the Christian name of him he sought, so he called at the office of the one first found and asked for Mr. Podger.

"That is my name, sir."

"But there are two of you of that name here in town?"

"Yes."

"Well, I wish to consult the Mr. Podger whose name me for the allusion—who wears a wig."

"We both wear wigs, sir."

"Well, the man I seek was divorced from his wife not long ago."

"There you hit us both again, sir."

"The man to whom I was recommended has recently been accused of forgery, though, I trust, unjustly."

"There we are again, sir."

"We have had that same business, and that good business."

"Well, upon my word, you two brothers bear a striking resemblance. But I guess I have it now. The one I am after is in the habit of occasionally drinking to excess—sometimes to intoxication."

"My dear man, that little vice is, unfortunately, a characteristic of us both, and I doubt if our best friends could tell you which was the worst."

"Ah, there you finish me, my friend. Poor Bob, I can't stretch the truth, even to serve a brother. If you were the one I want, please to say so, and I suppose I must acknowledge the corn. I'm the man."—Terry (Miss.) Enterprise.

A Prating Parrot.

A FAMILY living in Nashville, Tenn., had a parrot noted for its wonderful powers of imitating the human voice. The family also has a daughter, whose special duty is the care of the parrot. The young lady has recently had an addition to her household in the shape of a new husband. The parrot, sitting in an upstairs window, heard the jingle of the bell and shouted, "Go to the window!" The young man was startled. He looked at all the windows in the house, but saw nothing. He rang the bell again. "Next door!" shouted the parrot, in a voice that unlike a woman's. The young man looked up and down the street in a puzzled sort of way as if it had been a conundrum, and then closed. He pulled the bell-knob again. "Next door!" shouted the parrot, in a voice not unlike the young lady's. The young man looked up and down the street in a puzzled sort of way as if it had suddenly dawned upon his mind that he had made a mistake in the house. Just as he was doing that he had set, he again rang the bell. "Go to the—next door!" cried Poll from his perch in the upper window. "What house?" exclaimed the young man, angrily. "The Work House!" shrieked the parrot.

—From the speed of light, which has been measured, it is proved that at least four hundred and fifty-one millions of millions of these minute waves flow into the eye and dash against the retina in each second.

AT a recent farmers' meeting, a speaker gave a recipe for making farming pay, as follows: "Have but one business, and get up in the morning and see to it yourself."

A SOMNOLENT VAGARY.

An idle dreamer on an idle stream,
A tempting sun and a breeze at a-gleam;
A fragrant shadow, a drowsy stream,
A lazy, loiterer, summer-day.

A half-eaten sandwich or ruinier rags,
A kind of weeds with a sail or six,
A pumpkin-rind with its resting-bags,
To catch what spends the sun-cast spars.

A spider whistling his silver keep
To hold a hostage a fly or two;
A fishy seeking himself to sleep,
Eagerly reckless that some are due.

A butterfly-boat on a wave of air,
With all its vanity sails unfurled,
For past in a shimmer here and there,
The tranquil things in this idle world.

A gentle somnolent, soaking mind,
Fantastic trees in a languid way,
A lawny aspect, with unkempt beard,
Gone fast asleep with the sultry day.

The sky to terminate with restless shouts
From Mount Washington and the top of Ohi
The fist and vanish, and be the voice
Of Jove, announcing the birth of gold.

As waves a fallen avenue can find
Its field in the "motion floors," they say—
Or, you can reckon it more refined—
I'll let the fable some other day.

THE MILLER'S MAID.

THERE is a lonely mill, close beside the little hamlet of Herzel, on the banks of the Rhine shore, between the villages of Hersel and Drsel, on the left-bank below Bonn. The mill which is said to have been the scene of the following story:

It was on a Sunday morning, "three years ago," that the miller's daughter left her mill and his whole family formerly for to bear the holy mass at the nearest church in the village of Hersel. Now, this mill, which was also his residence, was left in charge of a servant-girl named Hannchen, or Jenny, a stout-hearted lass, who had long lived with him in that capacity. An infant child, of an age unfit for church, was left in her charge likewise.

The girl was busily employed in preparing dinner for the return of her master and his family, when she should enter all of a sudden but an old sweetheart of hers, named Heinrich Rotterlar. He was a soldier in the regiment to whom the miller had forbidden his house, but whom Jenny liked, with sensible perversity perhaps for that reason only, perhaps, all the better because others gave him no countenance. She was glad to see him, and she told him so, too; and although in the midst of her work, she not only got him something to eat and drink, but told him time to sit down with him and have a gossip, while his discarded she found for her. The young lad was not long in making recent addition to Nashville society.

The young man called at the house of the lady living on the opposite side of the door-bell. The parrot, sitting in an upstairs window, heard the jingle of the bell and shouted, "Go to the window!" The young man was startled. He looked at all the windows in the house, but saw nothing. He rang the bell again. "Next door!" shouted the parrot, in a voice that unlike a woman's. The young man looked up and down the street in a puzzled sort of way as if it had been a conundrum, and then closed. He pulled the bell-knob again. "Next door!" shouted the parrot, in a voice not unlike the young lady's. The young man looked up and down the street in a puzzled sort of way as if it had suddenly dawned upon his mind that he had made a mistake in the house. Just as he was doing that he had set, he again rang the bell. "Go to the—next door!" cried Poll from his perch in the upper window. "What house?" exclaimed the young man, angrily. "The Work House!" shrieked the parrot.

—From the speed of light, which has been measured, it is proved that at least four hundred and fifty-one millions of millions of these minute waves flow into the eye and dash against the retina in each second.

AT a recent farmers' meeting, a speaker gave a recipe for making farming pay, as follows: "Have but one business, and get up in the morning and see to it yourself."

MR. M. A. VERDIER finds that water is not freed from organic impurities in freezing, and that the germs of animalcule are present in very much of the ice taken from stagnant water. This being the case, considerable caution must attend the use of such ice in drinking water.

THE Rev. Mr. Stevenson, President of the Convention, and Hon. John H. Stokes, Chairman, and others of the Committee of Notification:

GENTLEMEN: I have now the honor to reply to your letter of the 13th inst., informing me that I was unanimously nominated for the office of Vice President of the United States by the late Democratic National Convention which assembled at Cincinnati. As first shadowed to the verbal formative made to me by some of the members of your order I have now to say that I accept the high trust with a realizing sense of its responsibility, and am profoundly grateful for the honor conferred.

THE PLATFORM—GENERAL HANCOCK—ETC.

I accept the nomination upon the platform of principles adopted by the Convention, which I cordially approve, and I accept it under an unfaltering trust in the virtue, the wisdom and patriotism of the great statesmen and soldiers who have been put in nomination before me for the office of President of the United States. The eminent services to the country which they rendered to the Constitution, the Union and the laws, his claim upon the gratitude of the people of our real independence, the support of our peace, safety and prosperity, and of the liberty we so highly prize, and intensely revered by the people.

THE ADMINISTRATION OF GOVERNMENT AND CIVIL SERVICE.

But no form of Government, however carefully devised—on principles, however sound—will protect the rights of the people unless its administration is faithful and efficient. It is a vital principle that public office is a public trust nor force must be allowed to subvert the rights of the people. Offices fraud, violence or incompetency controls, the noblest Constitutions and wisest laws are useless. Of all systems it is the worst for the public, besides the votes for freemen. It is only by a full vote, free ballot and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our institutions. Such rules Jacksonian sway, and the whole structure falls.

Public office a trust, and a public trust bestowed upon the holder. No incompetent and dishonest person should ever be intrusted with it, or, if appointed, they should promptly be ejected.

Our material interests, varied and progressive, demand our constant and united efforts. A solution and separation of the two is to our credit, together with a wise and economical management of the public expenditures, should be maintained, in order that labor may be lightly burdened, and that all persons may be protected in their right to the fruits of their own industry.

The time has come to enjoy the substantial benefits of our magnificent domain. As one people, we have common interests. Let us encourage harmony and generous rivalry among our own industrial classes. Let us encourage the gallant merchant marine, extend our commerce with foreign nations, assist our merchants, manufacturers and producers to develop new markets, to employ to the utmost the prosperity and happiness of our people.

CIVIL SERVICE.

If elected, I shall, with divine favor, labor with what ability I possess to discharge my duties with fidelity, according to my conviction of right, and shall labor to foster and defend the Union, and to see that the laws be faithfully and equally executed in all parts of the country after I will assume the responsibility, fully sensible of the fact that to all number rightly the functions and exercise of all to discharge the most sacred duty that can devolve upon an American citizen.

I am, very respectfully, yours,

WINFIELD S. HANCOCK.

To the Hon. John W. Stevenson, President of the Convention Hon. John H. St okes, Chairman, and others of the Committee of the National Democratic Convention.

BY GUESS.

—Miss Sarah Bird is the possessor of a new organ.

—Mrs. Leeds of Indianapolis, Ind., is the guest of her mother Mrs. Ann Gibson.

—Several of our citizens were in attendance at Bay View camp meeting Sunday the first inst.

John Dodds has a horse last Sunday night, which makes the second horse that has died for him this summer.

—Clarence Hewitt who lives on the County line road has threshed his fall wheat. We did not learn the amount per acre.

Robert Light who lives on the state road in the adjoining town east of us had several rods of his front fence burned on Sunday while at Camp Meeting.

—Some men do not know the difference between a buggy and a log wagon; if they borrow a buggy they use it for a log wagon and if they borrow a log wagon they use it for a stone boat.

—One of our Hyperites wants a good drawing plaster of the complaint-commissioners to apply to his wheat bill; to draw the wheat out of the ground far enough for him to clip the heads off.

—We admire those happy-go-lucky style of people; it matters not to them whether it is a feast to-day and a fast to-morrow, whether the sun shines in all his glory, or the unfeeling storm is in the distance to howl, they adapt themselves to all genius of circumstances and enjoy life as it passes.

—School districts should see that they have the proper No. of months of school taught in order to secure the primary school fund and share of one mill tax. Districts containing over thirty scholars must have five months. Dist. No. 3, or Maple Grove dist., of our town rejected last year 30 scholars and three months school; the consequence is they stood out in the cold without any primary fund apportioned to them this year.

—We do not see why the farmers want to blockade the roads in the town with their fences. A man runs the risk of his life in trying to get through some of the passes and over the gates, and barn and yoke fences with which some of our roads are adorned. The proper town officers should see that when a road is homed it is kept open, no pipes with. A man can not put an obstruction in the highway without being liable to a fine. Fine items are being collected for the laying out of new roads, and quick as they are located, new petitions have to be circulated to have a new route to get around the blockaded highways.

Our Banks Letter.

To the Editor of the Sentinel

The farmers of this section are still busy gathering in their crops. The bugs, or Hessian fly more likely, put the spring wheat crop short, much of it was down so that some farmers mowed their wheat and gathered it loose. It is all shrunken more or less. The very late sown wheat will possibly be full. Oats will be heavy. Banks can show oats six feet high. The loss of the spring wheat crop is not serious enough to produce many winters, because other crops of all kinds are so good. Fruit trees everywhere are being propped up to save loss. Even the little trees of last years setting of the Wagner variety not over an inch in diameter are well loaded with apples.

Your "Atwood" correspondent will lose cast if he persists in being so personal and undignified. There is considerable man about that man Beach—now with stumping his peculiarities. All great men have peculiarities and hobbies, and "that man Beach" has proven his claims to greatness by riding his hobby and by unanimous consent he shall have an unobstructed path for the time being—on the principle, I suppose that it is wrong and cowardly to strike a man when he is down.

It is reported that Antrim City is to have a dock, and that Mr. Ballard, well known throughout this region is to have a hand in. Banks needs a dock very much. We also need a portable saw mill A great deal of lumber will be required here every year, and more and more as the years go by, and the farms more improved.

Banks had a wild law suit yesterday, held in the Atwood school house before Justice L. M. Kanagy. William McPherson, they called the complainant, and Mr. Featherly was called the Defendant. Wm. complained that Mr. Featherly had slandered him by calling him an adulterer with Mrs. Featherly, etc. Mr. Clark, of Charlevoix, expounded the law and justice of the facts out of the witness for the defendant and Mr. R. C. Leavitt of this county acted in the same way for William. It was proven that William and the plaintiff Mrs. Featherly did live together, and bunk together together at all times of day and all times of night, and at nearly all kinds of places; all the way from Eastport to Charlevoix. The court sat till 2 o'clock a. m. of the next day, when the six Jurymen, who sat so patiently in the corner firing streams of tobacco juice into something, decided that William was not slandered so much as he had imagined. There were some other men who gave their opinions gratuitously. One man's opinion was that William was innocent because he never blushed a bit when the "house came down," in describing sundance of some facts and things that the witnesses set out. Another man opinion was, that the tongue that would slander William, would blister in a minute and "bust" before night.

One thing was certain. William was desperately in love, and as was Mrs. Featherly, and we all know by dear experience that "love is blind, always blind, So" with endless love to none, and charity for all," we commit them to the tender mercies of their friends and neighbors of Eastport, hoping that William will find a "character" somewhere else and that injured incense(?) will soon scab over and leave no scar.

Fatal Accident Near Gaylord.

We clip the following account of a terrible accident near Gaylord, from the Otsego County Herald, of the 23d: "Last Friday afternoon a man named Joseph White, who lives fifteen miles east of this place, was buried alive in a well at his place. The facts as near as we can learn are as follows: Mr. White has been digging under a well near his house and had gone down to a depth of one hundred and seven feet, and not finding water the well was abandoned, and White intended to fill it up. Before doing so, however, he thought he would try and save a part of the curbing, and in doing so met with the accident above referred to. Before attempting to remove the curbing, White had filled up the well about forty feet, thinking thereby to lessen the danger of removing the curbing. On Friday last he commenced to remove it and had gone down about forty feet, being attached to a rope fastened to a windlass at the top. He had succeeded in removing about five feet of the curbing when the bank commenced to cave. He at once called to those at the top to pull him out quick, but before they could make three turns of the windlass the top gave way letting the whole bank and all into the well, and the well was filled to the top. The settlers were at once notified of the affair and were prompt upon the spot and work was at once commenced to dig them out. A man was sent to this place to send the particulars to Whites friends. A party of eight started for Gaylord that night and reached the scene of the disaster Saturday morning. Work was pushed rapidly forward without any cessation until 9:30 Sunday morning, when the poor fellow was brought to the surface. As near as we can learn it was forty-seven hours from the disaster until he was dug out. To all appearances his death must have been instantaneous. Mr. White was about 41 years of age and much respected in the community. He leaves a wife and three children and a large circle of friends to mourn his untimely death. On Monday the body was taken to Ewen, Mich., Mr. White's former home, accompanied by the family."

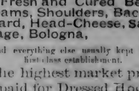
SENATORIAL CONVENTION.



D. Ells and L. L. Ells are numerous hereabouts.

A. J. Monroe is erecting a residence on Mason street.

The steam pile-driver is at work in the lower river i. e. Uncle Sam.

Regular communication of Charlevoix Lodge F. & A. M. tonight (Tuesday).

Lew. Hyde has traded the Boyne City property for the Stackus farm in Wilson township.

H. W. Brace, of Banks, is on the Greenback State ticket for elector in the Ninth district.

The next term of the Circuit Court for Charlevoix county will occur on the 2d day of September.

Hon. J. S. Lemmon went up Horton's Creek Tuesday and brought back about five pounds of trout.

The forest fires last week destroyed 3,500 ties for T. B. Dutcher and fifteen cords of wood for Capt. T. D. Smith.

The Boyne City Standard, which has always been really one of the livest Republican papers in the county, has been sold by him to Geo. Budd and Geo. Gaylord.

Hon. R. Strasburgh, of St. Johns, who has been nominated by the Greenbackers for Secretary of State, has recently spent two weeks in Charlevoix.

Rev. Dr. Gouvea, of Oshtemo, occupied the M. E. pulpit Sunday morning, and President Brooks, of Kalamazoo college, the same pulpit in the evening.

Dr. Dauby and family, who have been spending a month here, returned to their home in Toledo Friday. The doctor is enthusiastic over Charlevoix, and regards it as one of the most promising towns in the north, as well as possessing the greatest variety of attractions for pleasure and health seekers. He will return in the spring and bring a crowd with him.

McAlles, the celebrated and silver-tongued chimney-sweep is among us, and will remain until the afternoon's boat (Tuesday). If people would spend a dollar occasionally in cleaning chimneys they would escape the danger and fright attending their burning out. Mr. McAlles intends making this a regular point on his route, and hopes to work up a business among us. His musical talent is an extra attraction, without cost.

At the Village Council Saturday evening the committee on streets reported in favor of taking up the road through the Resort grounds, and laying out one on the south and west side of the grounds. The Council adopted the report, which means, of course, that the change will be made.

Capt. Clifford informs us that the U. S. War Department has not used one-tenth of his patent fold stoves for coal in the army. He is confident of their universal adoption in the service, after which their adoption in foreign governments will naturally follow. The stoves are certainly a marvel of compactness and utility combined, and must meet with the recognition which they deserve.

What does the constant and steady increase in the price of Charlevoix real estate signify? Why is it that those having spare money will intrust it to village lots? Why is it that seemingly large offers for property here are refused by our property owners? It means that the increase in prices fully corresponds with the public confidence in the future of Charlevoix. It means that our own people largely share that confidence. It may be said that the confidence of certain property owners on both sides unwarranted, but their owners only regarding the growth of the town as many desirable lots on both sides unwithheld from market by their owners. While we regret this fact, we recognize it as an element of encouragement. Negotiations are in progress in several directions now, which involve important sales, and which will cause a big stride in the growth of Charlevoix, if consummated.

Boyne City.—We spent a day at Boyne City last week, and noted many improvement being made in the village. We met many friends, and received many courtesies. Mr. Cameron has our thanks for generously providing his double rig for the most outward and lonely. Boyne City is doing well.

Pages.—Last week trip to Banks we spent an hour on the farm of Richard Knight. Mr. Knight has over one hundred acres under cultivation, and an orchard which is of itself a fortune. He will this year have about 800 bushels of apples, besides huge quantities of plums and pears. The orchard contains standard varieties of fruit, and the trees have to be propped up to sustain their burden.

Another Resort.—Wealthy Chicagoans are negotiating with J. R. Hixon for the purchase of forty acres of land on the opposite side of the cut from the Bay-side grounds, to be used as grounds for a resort. The movement is being made by leading members of the First Congregational church of Chicago, which numbers over twelve hundred members, and represents in its membership much wealth and influence. Rev. Dr. Goodwin, who is ranked as hero is its pastor. The gentlemen have visited all of the prominent resorts of northern Michigan, and pronounce Charlevoix far superior to any of them in the number and variety of its attractions. There is little doubt that another association will be established here.

Railroad Talk.—A gentleman prominently connected with the Pine Lake Iron Company recently had a conference with the president of the G. R. & I. R. R. Co., concerning the matter of a branch road to Charlevoix. Mr. Bugbird seemed quite enthusiastic on the subject, and considered the project a feasible one. He stated that the company stand ready at any time to do their full share at any time that a right of way is guaranteed, and the people along the line of the proposed route do their share. When it is considered that the Iron company alone will furnish 30,000 tons of freight per annum, and that the earnings travel to Charlevoix is but fairly begun, it must seem that a railroad down the valley of the Jordan to the mouth of the Arm and here, is only a matter of less years than we have fingers on our hand. The Pine Lake region is making giant strides in development, and Charlevoix, being the only marine outlet, and the principal commercial center, must have a railroad.

Marine.

—C. D. Mason is making a new spar for the new Contest.

—The schooner Sea Gem came to grief Saturday with a Garfield and Arthur flag. That is the kind of a man Capt. Lemmon is. That sees us for his quick trips and good luck.

—The following are the clearances from this port for the past two weeks:

Aug 3—Sloop Pine Bear, 120 cords bark, owner to Two Rivers.
Aug 3—Sloop Supply, 80 cords bark, Bartholomew to Milwaukee.
Aug 5—Sloop Comet, 107 cords bark, owner to Kewaunee.
Aug 11—Sch. Skylark, 300,000 feet lumber, Marsh to Chicago.
Aug 12—Sch. Metropolis, light.
Aug 14—Sch. Gladiator, 120 cords bark, French to Kenosha.
Aug 14—Sch. Lizzie Google, 80 cords bark, Bacot to Sheboygan.
Aug 16—Sch. Bodine, 150 cords bark, 25 wood, Inman to Chicago.

The Senatorship

Charlevoix county has once raised her voice for Senatorial honors, never put forward the name of any citizen for that office, but has five times added her magnitude to that of other counties of the district in favor of their "favorite sons," and those majorities have not been exaggerated of a magnitude disproportionately in excess of what would be naturally expected from the smallest county in Michigan.

Now Charlevoix county makes her bow, and presents the name of one who has marched in the vanguard of the Republican forces upon every one of the battle fields by which the party in this county has fought so well. The same political record has shone out in the Grand Traverse region for a decade before Charlevoix county came into existence, and whose influence has been felt in all matters where the interests of the party have been at stake.

Charlevoix county will send to the Senatorial convention, which meets at Petoskey on September 7, a delegation led by Archibald Buttars, of this county, and will ask the sister counties of the district to unite with them in putting in nomination for the office of State Senator a man who will in every way be credit to the office.

Mr. Buttars has as a youth in the region of which he is now an honored citizen, by sweat the humblest vocations—now he head daily labor earned a livelihood, and as the region has developed from a forest to a garden, so has he striven to be one of the foremost business men of this fair north country. In every particular is he blameless and with the esteem of the entire region.

He is characteristically a man of progress, understanding fully what is required of a legislator, and possessing a clear foresight in matters of public interest and public weal.

He is a man of the strictest business integrity, in the full vigor of mental and physical manhood, a scholar in the elements of business, and a reader of intelligence and wide discrimination.

Archibald Buttars will attach to the position of senator the true qualities of success, and reflect credit upon a constituency among whom he has arisen from a wood-chopper to the practical head of one of the most extensive business houses of Grand Traverse.

Real Estate Matters.

At no time since Charlevoix had an existence has transfers of Charlevoix real estate been looking like the past two weeks. And what seems more than encouraging, prices have been good, and no grumbling.

On Wednesday Alexander Seward bought the lot on the corner of Clinton and Mason streets of J. S. Dixon for $100. Mr. Stewart will erect a residence.

On the same day C. R. Glass bought a lot on Clinton street of same party for $100. Mr. Stewart will erect a residence.

On Thursday Byron See bought a lot on same street of same party, consideration $100.

Capt. T. D. Smith has purchased two lots on Clinton street, adjoining A. R. Upright on the east, for $160 each. He has already commenced the erection of a large residence thereon.

Last week Nelson Ainslie was offered $400 for 22 feet front on Bridge street, adjoining G. W. Crouter's, by a gentleman who designed erecting a brick store thereon. Mr. Ainslie refused the offer.

Wm. Cooper went to Grand Rapids last week to purchase of the railroad company the forty acres of land adjoining the farm he recently purchased of Capt. T. D. Smith.

An outside party is negotiating with Nelson Ainslie for four rods front on Bridge street, next the Sentinel building, and has been granted the refusal of it until some time this week. If purchased, a wholesale and retail mercantile establishment will be erected thereon.

Personal.

—Superintendent Sprout, of the Iron Company, is here.

—Miss Rosa Buttars of this village is visiting friends at Traverse City.

—J. Milo Eaton returned Saturday from the Democratic State Convention.

—Messrs Dolph and Jackson of the Iron Company have gone to Chicago.

—Mr. Hildreth, the new book-keeper of the Pine Lake Iron company, is in town.

—President Cherrier of the Pine Lake Iron Company, was here from Chicago last week.

—J. J. Kiser, of Whitewater, Wis., who when a boy resided here, is in town visiting relatives.

—Mrs. Richard Shapton, of Norwood township, left last week to visit her daughters in Canada.

—W. Watson, of Evangeline township, left here Friday to visit friends and relatives in Wisconsin.

—Miss Rosalie Dougherty, formerly of Charlevoix, but now of Elk Rapids, left here last week for New Brunswick to visit relatives.

Charles R. Bellinger, of this village, is enjoying a two months' vacation among friends and relatives in St. Lawrence county, N. Y.

—J. T. R. McKay, assistant general freight agent of the Lake Shore railroad, has been spending a week at Charlevoix with his family. Mr. McKay has a lot on the Resort grounds, and will erect a cottage next summer.

Some Proceedings of the Lime-Kiln Club.

UNFINISHED BUSINESS.

Under this head the Committee on Inland Navigation made their report on the case of Brother Exhauser Simmons, who was charged by several white persons with having taken a jug of vinegar from a grocery store. The committee's report was full and exhaustive, and concluded as follows:

"Brudder Simmons had no difficulty in 'stonishin' de fack dat he had a cabbage under his arm when he entered dat grocery. He placed dat cabbage on de counter beside de jug. When he went out he war talkin' politickes, an' his mind war busy wid de Presidential goosbus. In a moment of absent-mindedness he picks up de jug instead of de cabbage an' walks out, an' dat's de long an' short of de story. It am de opinion of de committee dat he didn't mean to do it."

"I doan' believe dat brudder Simmons would steal a jug o' vinegar in de day-time," remarked the President, as he received the report. "Dis I feel it my duty to constrain him to be more keerful in de fewtur. De likeness between jugs an' cabbages am not one dat he need ever make de same mistake again."

RESIGNATIONS.

The Rev. Pencil Jones arose to a question of privilege. He said he had been instrumental in inducing the Club to mention an almanac printed for the exclusive use of the colored people. He was one of the committee to report on the number of outrages which the said almanac should contain, and he had furnished a poem of his own composition to embellish at least one of its pages. He now desired to say that he repudiated the almanac from page one to the mad-dog cut on the last cover. None of the eclipses had occurred on time, or, in fact, at all. Moonlight night had been run in for all sorts of weather, and his poem had been cut to pieces and made to do duty for a liver-pad advertisement. In several places the name of the club had been printed "Lime-Kill," and in a brief history of the organization Wimbleton Hooker was down as a deacon, Samuel Shin was said to be a missionary, and Saloratus Spencer was marked as deceased. He would offer a resolution repudiating the almanac and its maker.

The resolution was voted on without discussion, and was unanimously adopted.

CLOSING REMARKS.

When the sound of the triangle striking the closing hour had died away to a mere whisper, Brother Gardner extended his arms and said: "De road runs 'longside o' eanebrakes, where de wolves howl an' malice de chill'en afeard; ober ribbers wher' de ole men an' de women may git lost, free dark woods in which strong men trembles as de midnight breeze whispers in de tree-tops. We are all on a journey. We are all gwine to one place. Fast as we git dar we am put on de right hand or de left, an' it am a count o' judgment dat nober skips a day or stoppuns for an hour. De man who does de most 'pravity is now gwine to de right, till de res', but he riggered it up an' I believe de straight way am de bes' way. Git de compass plum an' den move on, lookin' a dollar hesh—speakin' a kind word dar—brushin up de weak—shoorin' de lowly—puttin' out fond han's all de time for chill'en to lean on. We will now bulge outward toward our homes."

How a Chicago "Masher" was Victimized by His Friends.

M. D. Lee, or, according to the regular custom of his associates, "Murt Lee," is a clerk in the Chicago office of the United States Express Company. He boards at the Garden City Hotel, where also live a number of other clerks and young men engaged in divers mercantile pursuits, who look on "Murt" as a clever sort of a lad, but just a little gone on the other sex. There isn't a doubt that Lee is at heart a good boy, but for a mind belief that he is a clean-cut "masher," like "Tam per Fit." In his way of thinking, all there needs to do to eye a girl over and she is gone. This peculiarity got to be so well known among his fellow-boarders that, with a view of giving him a wholesome dose of correction, five got up a job, which has worked without a hitch from first to last, and is, by all odds, one of the richest practical jokes ever played.

As language at May one of them wrote him a letter purporting to come from a young lady named Ludington, who had seen him in church and had been smitten by his appearance. She wrote that her uncle was General Ludington, of Richmond. He was a veteran in the rebel army, and of course reverenced the name of Lee. He replied and proposed a meeting. She agreed to it, appointed a place, and asked him to carry a paper and a cane in his hand so that she might know him. He was at the appointed place, promptly on time, but of course she was not. Another letter was sent to him, explaining that her absence was unavoidable, and asking him to excuse her. Affairs continued in this way for several months. She pretended to be traveling from one watering-place to another, the conspirators against the peace of the young man having the fictitious young lady's letters mailed at Saratoga, Long Branch, New York and other places. The letters were of the most gushing kind, the moon, stars and love being mixed up in the usual way.

A couple of weeks ago the plotters determined to bring the thing to a focus. General Ludington, who had been away, returned home and discovered his niece's correspondence. His hot Southern blood was fired, and he addressed a fierce letter to the young man, ordering him to return the letters his niece had sent to him, and to give him that satisfaction which was due from one gentleman to another under such aggravating circumstances. Lee was terrified almost out of his wits, and wrote in reply that he was an honorable young man, and had never entertained any but the most honorable intentions toward the young lady. The old General, or rather the party personating him, was indignant, however, and insisted upon having gore upon the field of honor, and threatened, in case he refused to accommodate him, to shoot him on sight. This increased poor Lee's trepidation, but he was somewhat relieved on receiving another letter from Miss Ludington, in which she advised him to stand true and insure her uncle like a man. She prevailed him that she should see to it that he came to no harm. This lowered him, and he signified his intention of fighting. All the preparations for a sham duel were then made. William Ryan was selected to represent General Ludington, and J. P. Harrison his assistant. Lee, who had taken the conspirators themselves into his confidence, selected E. C. Donwein to act as his second. The seconds had a meeting and entered into the following agreement, written in blood-red ink:

CHICAGO, Ill., July 21.

Memoranda of articles as agreed upon between Mr. J. Lee, of Chicago, Ill., and Private A. Ludington, of the City of Richmond, Va., that's to say: Weapons, pistols; Distance paces by the seconds; Ill luck, barks burned; word and fire at—"three." Fire at call of third; to either party a second, firing to cease; to be fought before dawn at ——, old second agree as to places; Government penalty of disfranchisement waived, and to be cause of death of either party no punishment for same; daughter to be held valid; both parties to have choice of surgeons; seconds to decide all disputes arising according to the Jackson and Hoyle code; no conversation between principals allowed.

Witnessth my hand in faith, the day first above written.

[SIGNED] PATRICK A. LUDINGTON,
Principal.
DONWEIN—Hobson A. Casseres, Harvey T. Henry.

Arrangements were made for surgeons' conveyances to the battle ground, etc., and they started, as agreed on, about seven o'clock last night. Miss Ludington, as she had promised, was there, or rather Ed Daly, dressed in female garments, was there to represent her. Arrived at the grounds, the distance was marked, and after Miss Ludington had tearfully embraced him, and told him a last farewell, the word was given, and two blank cartridges were fired simultaneously in the midst of an explosion of almost uncontrollable laughter on the part of the successful schemers. To Lee's credit, it must be said that he showed a great deal of nerve, and fired directly at his opponent when the word was given. It was some time before he could realize that a huge practical joke had been played upon him, and when he did he could do no less than invite the crowd up to the Garden City Hotel bar, whither the whole party had been driven directly after the duel. He wisely determined not to meet Miss Ludington at Saratoga Springs, next September, as he had agreed to, to fly away with her on the wings of love. It is to be presumed, likewise, that he has sworn off love-letter writing to mysterious females, particularly nieces of hot-headed Southern Generals who worship the name of Lee. He was somewhat annoyed on Monday by his friends, who were unusually particular in inquiring about his health. He takes it all good-naturedly, however, and puts a smiling face upon the matter.—Chicago Cor. St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Extensive the mutiny of 1857 the people of British India have been disarmed, though generally in villages bordering upon a forest one or two inhabitants are licensed to carry a matchlock, which, although useful in driving off hogs, is of small value in tiger slaying. This, therefore, becomes especially the business of the magistrate of the district. Consequently, when a tiger appears in the neighborhood, one or two officials patch their cause in his neighborhood, but are often thwarted for weeks by his cunning, and sometimes do not get him at all. A man-eating tiger is abnormally suspicious, and is off at the slightest alarm. When once a tiger has become a man-eater he seems to care only for man, and, perhaps, on this account, usually comes off rather short for food, and, when killed, seldom presents a prosperous appearance. Not one tiger in a hundred, however, is a man eater; but once let one of this sort get into a village, and it has often happened that the whole of the inhabitants will, after repeated losses, in despair, move en masse to a neighboring town for safety. This has frequently happened in Central India, but is now rare.

Boston Brown Bread.—Two large cups of Indian meal, one large cup of rye-meal, (you rye-flour,) one-half cup of molasses, one teaspoon soda, scald the Indian meal, but keep it thick; when cool add the rye, molasses and soda, with a little salt and one pint of sponge, which must be very light. This must all be as thick as can be stirred; set in a warm place to rise in the baking-pan. It should be ready to cook in an hour. To make it more like the genuine article, which is baked in a brick oven, steam it four hours, and then bake in a slow oven an hour or more. It can be made with the same measures without scalding the Indian meal, by mixing soft with warm water to allow the meal to swell. Rye-meal does not swell much.

"Light literature" is to be one of the topics at the approaching Church Congress in England.

Meats of any kind should not be washed, but wiped with a towel to preserve the juices and quality.

Fall Planting of Trees.

Mr. Alfred Smith, writing from Monmouth to the Maine Farmer in favor of fall planting of trees, reports the following experience, prefacing it with a hint of "how not to do it":

"Some men with little experience dig holes, artificial ditto, then fill with water, and set the trees in them and cover with the same soil with no mound of earth to turn the water, or much unpacked from drought or freezing and thawing, considering it a good job and wondering why their trees don't grow. Wishing to plant out from our nursery seventy-five dwarf pear trees one rod apart, I prepared as many rods of land by underdraining in order to remove all surface waters as quickly as possible, that they might not stand and wash out from a recently sub-soil. The soil is a mixture of clay and gravelle on a hard pan. The surface of the land as well as the sub-soil was irregular, uneven and not sufficiently inclined to run off the water; hence, the necessity of artificially draining all such knolls, as no fruit trees or plants, save alders, polypods and spruces, will grow with their roots in puddles of water. The turf on the seventy-five rods was well decomposed and made a rich soil, as farmers usually make their land for corn (which was about half as rich as land should be to grow good crops of corn), growth of fruit trees or fruit. The holes were dug twelve inches or more deep, and filled mound-full with top-soil, then set the trees, covering with best soil till a mound was made about six inches high above the surrounding surface; then plowed three furrows toward the trees on each side, and finished off the mounds, leaving a run off instead of setting in the holes. We then put around each tree a heap of good manure, and covered it to protect them from deep freezing and heaving, which was spread broadcast over the ground in spring, showing one cord to sixteen trees, or about ten cords to the acre. We began so late, or cold weather came on so early, that we were able to set only forty-five trees, all of which made a large growth the following season, which was very dry. The remaining thirty were planted the next spring with the same care, but could not make so satisfactory growth in two seasons as those set in fall did the first season."

Scratches in Horses.

This disease is generally caused by careless grooming. When horses are brought in covered with mud and wet from their feet and legs, and carelessly wiped from them with a wisp of hay or straw. As soon as they are dry, clean thoroughly with a brush. Filthy stables, where the horses stand with their feet constantly wet, is another cause of scratches, more properly called grease. If in spite of these precautions horses become affected, or for those who already have the disease, try the following remedy: Two drachms of sulphate of zinc and one drachm of corrosive chloride of mercury dissolved in one pint of water. Shake up well before using and apply to the diseased parts and morning. The disease is a very obstinate one and an early cure is always uncertain. Where other remedies fail the following will sometimes prove efficacious: Dissolve a box of potash in two quarts of water and treated live in two quarts of water and put a handful of the sub-soil was added a wine-glassful of the lye.—N. Y. Herald.

A Steam Spring in Kentucky.

While some workmen were engaged in quarrying at Grayson Springs, Ky., they struck a vein of hot water which commenced flowing—it is estimated—at the rate of ninety barrels per day. It flows at intervals of about forty minutes, and the steam escapes with terrific force; the noise can be heard for at least a half mile distant. It is thought that the waters possess medicinal properties, and a sample has been sent to our city for analysis. It is proposed to utilize the steam as a motor to run the machinery of a large flouring mill situated at this point. This is, indeed, a singular as well as an important discovery.—Cor. Cin. Gazette.

Made No Difference.

A boy with a business look in his eye recently entered a dry-goods store on Monroe avenue and said his mother had sent him for sixty spools of No. 1 thread.

"Don't you mean one spool of No. 60 thread?" inquired the clerk, after puzzling over the matter.

"May be that's it," dubiously responded the boy.

"I guess you'd better go back home and find out."

The boy departed, but returned in a moment with a satisfied look around his mouth and explained:

"Mother says it don't make a bit of difference which way we have it, for mother said you've to charge it, anyhow!"—Detroit Free Press.

A correspondent of the Ohio Farmer says that he has found by experience that six Cotswold sheep will eat and consume more food than a cow, and are more profitable. For a lamb of this breed, weighing 125 pounds, $5.50 is obtained. He estimates that six ewes will produce eight lambs per annum and fifty pounds of wool.

A census enumerator in Washington County, Penn., reports a family in which there are four children who have not been assigned given names. The oldest of the four is aged eleven years.

Home, Farm and Garden.

Cleanliness and free ventilation are important for the health of fowls in warm weather.

For soft corns, dip a piece of linen cloth in turpentine and wrap it round the toe on which the corn is situated night and morning. The relief will be immediate, and, after a few days, the corn will disappear.

Sugar Cookies.—Two cupfuls of sugar, one cupful of butter, warmed, one cupful of thick sour cream, one egg, one teaspoonful of saleratus and one teaspoonful of caraway seeds. This makes sixty to eighty cookies.

Ranch Butter, boiled in water with a portion of charcoal (say a tenth part), will be entirely divested of its rancidity, and may be used for cooking purposes, although its fine flavor will not be restored to make it fit for table use.

A chemist under the auspices of the Agricultural Department is authority for the statement that the Chinese sorghum, when in full maturity, contains a larger per centage of sugar than the best varieties of the tropical cane.

Beef calluses and lasses, which fade so easily, may have their colors set by washing the first time in salt and water. A weak solution of sugar of lead will set the color in most washable goods, and will keep the thing in history.

There are several ways to get rid of ants. Boiling water, sprayed or used by pourfull in their holes will destroy them. Leaves of tansy or catnip will drive them away. Powdered borax scattered in their haunts will also cause them to leave.

Cheap Pie.—To be eaten warm or cold: One cup of cream, three eggs beaten separately, sugar to taste, pinch of salt, flavor as you like. Bake in one pie dish or pounded cake tin, sprinkle with bread crumbs that have been sifted, about as thick as pie paste, pour in the custard and sprinkle over it some bread crumbs and cream-nut mixed.

It is of the very utmost importance that stock should have good, pure water, and plenty of it. The thirst of animals during the hot weather can readily be imagined from judging it by the human thirst; and to deprive the animal of a sufficient drink is about the worst species of cruelty that can be inflicted upon the brute creation. The agony of excessive thirst is simply terrible.

Chicken and Corn, (Maryland Fashion).—You want fresh corn; cut off the grains from the cob and put it in a pot with only enough water to cover it; stew thoroughly; cut the chicken up and add to the corn; season with pepper and salt, and when the chicken is tender add a teaspoonful of cream, thicken with a very little flour or cracker dust and butter. At the very last chop parsley fine and mix thoroughly.

For jelly cook the fruit in a porcelain kettle, with or without water, according to its nature, until it is well softened. Strain through a flannel bag previously rinsed in hot water. To every pint of juice allow one full rounded pint of sugar. Boil the juice for twenty minutes, noting from the time it begins to boil. Heat the sugar meantime by placing in an oven on platters. After the juice has boiled twenty minutes skim and add the sugar. When this is dissolved and the juice is still boiling pour into your glasses. Some jelly-makers add the beaten white of an egg to the juice for the purpose of clarifying it.

Corned Boiled Corn.—The chief drawback with fodder corn is the difficulty of properly curing; such a heavy growth of succulent green herbage. When it is remembered that thirty tons per acre has been reached, the problem of curing is seen to be an important one. The French system of ensilage may in time come to the reason and provide a method of preservation that retains the fodder in its green state; but the introduction of such a system must be slow, and until then the old method of dry preservation must be practiced. The putting together of large quantities of unmatured and moist fodder, as it has been the greatest source of loss to those who have grown fodder corn, has now should be thoroughly ventilated by shafts passing up through its center, and when the fodder is put in stacks they should be of small size, holding but a few tons, and better still, provided with a shaft, made of a few boards, in the middle.

PAIN-KILLER!
As a FAMILY MEDICINE, for relieving and curing PAIN, whether in the SIDE, BACK or BOWELS, ALL HAVE BEEN RELIEVED!

America started with the civilization of a highly civilized age. She did not rear her own civilization on her own soil. She started with prosperity, and the first use she makes of her prosperity is not to cultivate the fine arts in her own people, but to laugh at them in others. Up to now only one class of transatlantic writers have challenged the attention of Europe, and that was humorous and profane, Emerson, Bryant, Cooper, Poe, Lowell, Holmes and Irving are merely Europeans born in America. But Harte, Twain and Brougham are original and American. America is undoubtedly the literary promise-land of the future. It has done nothing up to this. Its condition has forbidden it to achieve anything, but great triumphs may be anticipated from it.—Stanley's Magazine.

The burnt body of a woman, in a deep and narrow grave of prehistoric times, was recently exhumed in Berkshire, England. The bones were perfectly free from any admixture of earth or charcoal, and beautifully white in color. No implement, ornament or pottery had been buried with the body.

Brooklyn takes a dog census every year. Last year it had 7,615 dogs. This year there are 10,232 canines in the city. A tax of $2 on each dog is levied. Brooklyn seems to be the "happy land of Canine."

Dr. Foote's Health Monthly for August says Russian physicians use powdered cockroaches successfully in cases of dropsy. The patient is not told the merits of being inexpensive and plentiful.

[Wausau (Wis.) Central Wisconsin:]
We love everything that's old. Old friends, old times, old manners, old books, old wine. And the Reverend Father adds: love old medicines, because of their known worth. In a late communication, Mr. Eustace Baker, Medina, Mo., thus speaks of the Great German Household Remedy: I prize Hamburg Drops very highly. I had suffered for seven years with a severe pain in my left side. I finally expended a great deal of money upon physicians and for medicines. I concluded to use Hamburg Drops. After using one bottle I was pleased with the highest success, as I am to-day healthier than I have been for years.

A Councilman's Recommendation.
In Cleveland, the councilman from the Fifth Ward, J. Jackson South, Esq., recently recommended St. Jacobs Oil to a prominent politician. He was suffering from rheumatic pains, and who by his use was entirely cured.

Twenty Years a Sufferer.
Dr. R. V. Pierce's
Dear Sir:—Twenty years ago I was shipwrecked on the Atlantic Ocean, and lay cold and exposed all night. Ever since then I have suffered from a severe pain in my left side, which kept continually discharging a profuse mucous matter, for which I have been to no avail. I was persuaded to try your Golden Medical Discovery, and now, in less than three months after taking the first bottle, I am thankful to say I am completely cured, and for the first time in ten years can put my left hand to the ground.
I am, sir, yours gratefully,

ASTHMA!
Jonas Whitcomb's Remedy.
The late Jonas Whitcomb, of Boston, visited Europe a few years ago for the purpose of introducing his world-famous remedy for Asthma. While in London, he was induced to visit a poor sufferer, who was dying with Asthma. Mr. Whitcomb was so much interested in his case that he administered a dose of his Remedy, which relieved the sufferer in a few minutes. The next day he visited the poor man's home, and found him able to sit up in bed. Mr. Whitcomb's Remedy is now for sale by druggists throughout the civilized world. Sold by all druggists.

DEMOCRATIC journals should get their buckets at mud ready to behold Gov. Hiram now that he has returned to the old party.

IT is be true, as the Democrats assert, that a political change in the country is necessary, will they please inform an anxious public why?

AT an out-of-door Hancock ratification meeting, recently held in Oregon, the Stars Bars waved over the crowd, with no United States flag in sight

GEN. PHIL SHERIDAN says "there is no officer in the American army who can beat Hancock mixing a whisky cocktail." And yet we are told he is not a statesman!

THE main "principle" in the Democratic part of the campaign is: "Beat the Republican party at all hazards;" and some there are among that party's organs who have the frankness to say so.

IRONICAL that the military must be made subordinate to the civil authority, and then presenting as a candidate for the head of the civil government a professional soldier, may be consistency, but it is not of the "jewel" kind.

VICE PRESIDENT WHEELER is looking in better health than in the spring, and is still busy over his own affairs in Malone. He will take his summer vacation in the White Mountains and along Lake Champlain next month, preparatory to the Autumn campaign work.

HON. WM. WILLIAMS—better known as "Billy Williams"—of Indiana, has written a strong letter in which he says: "I consider Gen. Hancock's nomination by the rebel Democracy as simply a decoy to entrap Democratic soldiers to support the ticket, and thus enable the southern brigadiers, with the aid of their northern allies to get peaceable control of the government they failed to wheel to death in the war, and attempted to starve to death by legislation in Congress unless the laws to protect the ballot box from fraud were repealed."

GREAT Democratic victories in Alabama and Kentucky! Both states solid for the November contest! Hollingers triumph and No Republicans allowed—in either state! This means what it has meant for the past fifteen years. No accommodation must be exhibited at the north, but the south must be allowed nothing else. The elections in these two states are splendid arguments for the Republican cause, and show conclusively that no republican sentiment will be allowed a foothold there, but will be crushed out with an iron heel. When the south throws aside her sectionalism, then gentleman of the north, will be time enough for you to do the same. It is a solid south that makes a solid north. It is the bitter and cruel persecution of people for opinions' sake in the south that causes the northern people to vote solidly in opposition to the Democratic party. The time for a change has not yet come, that's certain.

ROMAN CATHOLICS IN POLITICS.

We have no hesitation whatever in declaring that, in our judgment, it would be unfortunate were Catholics, as such to be allied to one political party. We are aware, indeed, that many Catholics are to be found in the Democratic ranks, and we are aware also what their reward has been. An occasional bone, with very slender pickings, is thrown as a necessary sop to some boastful "representative" [!]—who can control votes, you know. But for the most part they have had more kicks than coppers for their political portion; and, considering services rendered, the Democrats are by no means as generous or just to the Catholics in their gift as their Republican rivals. We have not forgotten that when Francis Kernan—a gentleman of pure and lofty character—was candidate for the Governorship at New York, and he was secretly stabbed by 60,000 Democrats because he was a Catholic. And we know also the same element would have slaughtered him again, when put in nomination for the United States Senate, were it not for Mr. Purcell, of the Rochester Union, who insisted on an open vote. Nor would it be difficult to multiply cases of a like nature at gross Democratic ingratitude to Catholics, and hence the Union, while, as an unpartisan journal, it abhors not champion any political party, would not regret to find a large portion of Catholic voters in the Republican ranks. —Buffalo Catholic Union.

How do the people of the North like such sentiments as those contained in the following letter printed in the Memphis Avalanche. The letter is published with out one word of disapproval, but with the apparent approbation of the editor:

The fact is, before we can expect the prosperity of the good old days before the war in the South, we must have the same homogeneity of public sentiment. As regards questions relating to the negro, we must have but one party, and that the Democratic party. White men who dare to avow themselves here as Republicans should be promptly hustled to the latter and malignant enemies of the south. The course of every Northern man who, like Eaton and Bingham, presumes in this community to aspire to office through Republican votes, should be saturated with stench. We can spare all such, and would caution such as these who think of coming South to be careful to keep away.

Yes, Mr. Editor, must hang out again your small-pox flag and rid our community of such vermin.

You may think me a little bold in using such language upon the anniversary of our flight from the yellow fever in 1879. The north, to be sure, sent us some money but we scorn the imputation of beggary. The North but reimbursed a little on the money it stole from us during the war.

No, sir, we must put an end forever to this shameless effrontery of Northern men or Republicans aspiring to office in the South. They must keep back seats, and very quiet ones, or get out.

I was glad to see you let your correspondents know upon that bastard Radical, William R. Moore. The whole lot must be rendered infamous and odious.

As for the negroes, let them annoy themselves, if they will, by voting the Radical ticket. We have the count.

They "have the count," and, in the face of their open avowal to use it shamelessly, their candidate has the effrontery to say, "It is only by a full vote, free ballot, and fair count that the people can rule in fact, as required by the theory of our government."

GEN. WEAVER told the editor of the Wheeling (W. Va.) Intelligencer that there had not been an election worthy of the name in Alabama for years. "In the black belt, where the Republicans have three voters to the Democrats' one, the Democratic judges of election simply destroy the tickets and supply their own. Their arrangements for doing this are bold and ingenious. The law requires that the party having a majority shall have a representative among the judges. When one can be found a blind negro is chosen. When none is at hand, either a Republican is bribed to serve their ends, or a mercenary Democrat is induced to identify himself with the Republican party solely for that purpose. Then the ballot box is elevated above the heads of the voters in such a way that after the ticket is intrusted to the judges a person outside cannot see what disposition is made of it. It is, therefore, easy to destroy a ticket and substitute another, and I am soberly and credibly informed that this is deliberately done to a shameful extent, apparent to the most doubting." Gen. Weaver says the Democrats openly boast of this infamous business, and joke over the fact that sometimes, after all the "stuffing," they have to "fix up the returns" after the count. He add: "I use to think Tilden was fairly elected, but he was not."

A STOCK company has recently been formed in New York, with P. T. Barnum as manager, for the purpose of building and conducting the largest museum in the world. The building is to cover thirty-four lots, on what is known as Madison Square Garden, and is to be 200 by 425 feet square.

"Gen. Hancock will get a heavy soldiers vote," says an exchange. Yes, but they will nearly all come from rebel soldiers.

WHAT THE REPUBLICANS HAVE DONE.

From the Detroit Post and Tribune

When the Republicans came into control of the government they were confronted by an armed rebellion; the authority of the union was defied in nearly one half the nation; they were opposed by a hostile and rebel government; the army and navy of the union were dispersed; the arsenals were depleted; the treasury was beggared; the credit of the government was destroyed, and all this was the work of the Democratic party. The Republican party proved equal to the perilous situation.

They denounced southern nullification. They declared secession impossible.

They affirmed the supremacy of the nation.

They called out the militia to sustain the laws.

They raised enormous armies and navies to suppress rebellion.

They encouraged enlistments.

They raised money to sustain the war.

They emancipated the slaves.

They armed the negroes.

They sustained and upheld President Lincoln.

They conquered the rebellion.

They preserved the Union.

They were merciful to the captured rebels.

They disbanded and restored the vast army to a peace footing.

They adopted the constitutional amendments giving freedom, the franchise, and civil rights to the slaves.

They cared for the soldiers and sailors of the Union.

They cared for their widows and orphans.

They found war and restored peace.

They found slavery and they gave freedom.

They abolished the "wild cat" currency of the states.

They gave the people the best secured currency in the world.

They have saved the people from the loss of millions of dollars each year in broken bank bills.

They have saved the people millions of dollars each year by making the currency of equal value in every part of the country.

They have restored the credit of the government.

They have reduced the interest bearing debt of the nation $677,57,194.

They have reduced the annual interest charges from $155,977,697 to $79,633,261 a saving of $71,343,716 a year.

They have maintained the national faith and honor.

They passed the Resumption act.

They defeated inflation and opposed "fiat money."

They made the greenback worth 100 cents on the dollar.

They have fostered American industries.

They have protected American mechanics.

They have collected the public revenue at a less percentage of cost than ever before.

They have handled the moneys of the government at a less percentage of loss than ever before.

They have secured peace to the country at home and abroad.

They have made the name American respected in all quarters of the world.

They have secured for the Union a foremost place among the nations of the earth.

And all this the Republicans have done in the face of Democratic obstruction and hostility.

Why should a party with this record be set aside to give place to a party, that opposed and resisted these measures at every step, and would, if possible, have defeated every one of these Republican acts of wisdom, to which the country to-day owes its unity and prosperity?

NEWS OF THE WEEK.

BY TELEGRAPH AND MAIL.

Domestic.

OVER 25,000 European immigrants landed at New York during the month of July, being, it is said, the largest number ever landed in one month.

AT Anoka, N. Y., a few days ago a tramp called on of James Mull undertook to kindle a fire with kerosene oil, when the can exploded, burning the boy so badly that he lived but two hours.

TWO out-throws by a Bull Run (Mass.,) milkmaid to teach their little brother, 4 years of age, to swear by taking him to the middle of a neighbouring river and dropping him in. He got out all right once or twice, but they succeeded in drowning him at last.

JUSTUS BUTLEY, of New York, on the 4th held Jerome, Patchell and McGibbin to the grand jury in bonds of $2,000 each for larceny of railroad securities found in their possession and which had been lost by a messenger of Blatchford, Tree & Co.

URIAH PHELPS, a merchant in Tyron, Davidson County, N. C., induced a youth named D. W. Click to sleep with him in his store, in anticipation of a raid by burglars. The next morning Phelps was found dead in his bed. As all the windows and doors were locked, and as Click is a noted accommodator, it is believe that the young man got up in his sleep and killed Phelps with an ax. Click admits the possibility of this, but declares that he has no recollection of anything, except that he dreamed of fighting burglars.

A LETTER was received at the Dead-Letter Office in Washington, from Pittsburgh, Pa., on the 5th, which contained the heads of several parlor-matches and an ounce of powder.

A DISPATCH from Los Pinos on the 5th states that one-hundred and thirty-five chiefs and head men of the Utes had signed the treaty treaty.

IT is said that friends of the victims of the Mackie disaster at Detroit will sue the steamer Cleveland, which ran down the yacht, for damages.

REESE OWENS, a prominent porkpacker of Hillsboro, failed on the 5th. His liabilities were placed at $150,000. The available assets were said to be quite small.

MR. ELLIOTT HAMM, a contractor and manufacturer of New York, has been convicted of the forgery of bank acceptances on the Governor Bank of New York, and was sentenced to four years' hard labor in the State Prison.

PIETRO BALDO, the Italian wife-murderer, was hanged at New York on the 6th. He expressed the utmost sorrow for his crime, and appeared to be resigned to his fate.

THE population of California is 863,680, a gain of 333,000 since 1870. The census gives Nebraska a population of 452,402.

CAPT. REVERMAN'S four-year-old child attended a ball at Owenton, Ky., the other day, and, seeing the grave opened, she asked what it was for, and, being told, took a look at the coffin, and then dropped dead.

ON the 6th an excursion train crossing a bridge over the canal at Waverly, Ohio, broke through, and several cars were precipitated into the water below. One person was killed and fourteen others severely injured, some fatally.

Personal and Political.

AT the recent election in Kentucky Chief-Justice Bryan was re-elected Judge of the court of Appeals by a very large majority.

MR. STEWART, a railroad contractor, on the 4th identified the old man in jail at Fremont, Neb., as John Bender. Stewart was once well acquainted with the family.

THE following Congressional nominations were reported on the 4th: Third Michigan District, Edward S. Lacey, Republican; Thirteenth Ohio, A. B. Clark, Republican; Eleventh Missouri, Congressman John R. Clark, Jr., Democrat; Tenth Missouri, Charles H. Mansur, Democrat; Fourth California, Wallace Leach, Democrat; First Kansas, John Davies, Greenback; Second Kansas, Congressman D. C. Haskell, Republican; Fifteenth Illinois, Congressman A. P. Forsythe, Seventh Indiana, S. S. Peele, Republican.

THE Democrats and Greenbackers of the Fourth Maine District have united in renominating George W. Ladd for Congress.

JUDGE THOMAS HELLMAN has declined the nomination for Congress lately tendered him by the Democrats of the Eighteenth Illinois District.

CONGRESSIONAL nominations were made on fourth ballots as follows: First Ohio District, Congressman ——— A. Butter north, Republican, Second Ohio, Congressman Thomas J. Young, Republican; Third Ohio, General R. D. Ward, Democrat; Tenth Ohio, Morgan Shaffer, Democrat; Third West Virginia, John L. Kenna, Democrat; Second West Virginia, Judge J. T. Hoke, Republican; Sixth Michigan, General ——— Spaulding, Republican; Seventh Michigan, John Paul, Republican; Eighth Michigan, Colonel Miller, Democrat; Fifth Illinois, Congressman B. M. A. Hack, Republican; Second Vermont, Dr. Daniel Campbell, Democrat.

THE Michigan State Republican Convention met at Jackson on the 5th, and, after five informal and four formal ballots, nominated David B. Jerome for Governor. A fifth ticket, including Presidential Elector, was nominated.

ST. AUBREY ANGELO, a correspondent of the Liverpool (Eng.) Courier, was run over by the cars on the Union Pacific Railroad, near Cheyenne, on the night of ——4th, one arm and one leg being crushed. He was found dead next morning with a bullet-hole in his head and a revolver lying by his side. It is supposed that after the accident, despairing of recovery, he shot himself.

PRESIDENT HAYES has appointed H. J. Crouch, of Pennsylvania, Consul at St. Helena, and G. W. Roswell, of the same State, Consul at Matanzas, Cuba.

GENERAL WILLIAM O. BUTLER, of Carrollton, Ky., an officer of the war of 1812, a member of Congress for several years and the candidate for Vice-President on the ticket with General Cass in 1848, died at his residence on the 6th, at the advanced age of ninety-three years.

ON the 6th a son of the Colonel Cash who killed Colonel Shannon in a duel some weeks ago fought a duel with Mr. Blair, editor of the Camden (S. C.) Journal, and was killed at the first fire. Blair had published some severe strictures on the elder Cash. The duel with Blair was fought with Manchester rifles at twenty paces.

IT was reported on the 6th that old man Bender, in jail at Fremont, Neb., had made a full confession of the many crimes. A case named Shedd and a reporter of the Omaha Republican had a long interview with him under the pretence of assisting him to escape. He corroborated every important particular of the confession of his wife. He made no secret of his identity as Bender, and gave a complete history of Kate, John and Maggie. This was the first time he had talked freely, and the first time he had admitted that he was John Bender, of Kansas notoriety.

Foreign.

EIGHT men were killed in a colliery explosion near Wrexham, Wales, on the 4th.

DR. MARK FISHER, a wealthy gentleman of Sheffield, England, presented the Wesleyan Conference, recently in session at that city, with a $50,000 check. The trustees have decided to devote the money to educational purposes.

DISPATCHES on the 5th say that recent heavy rains had caused renewed havoc in Silesia. Teplitz, its fishponds had been entirely submerged, and there had been great destruction of property and the loss of several lives.

SIR HERCULES ROBINSON, present Governor of New Zealand, has been appointed Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, vice Sir Bartle Frere, recalled.

FLIMSOLL, the late Liberal member of Parliament, was defeated by Lord Claude Hamilton, Conservative, at a special election held in Liverpool on the 6th.

IN the British House of Commons on the evening of the 6th Arthur Arnold, a Liberal member, moved the adoption of a resolution modifying or removing the restrictions at present placed upon the importation of American cattle. The resolution was rejected by a vote of 23 ayes to 196 noes. The Government opposed the motion.

A SCIENTIFIC Guy's Hospital, London, was convicted of manslaughter on the 4th. A consumptive patient who was giving her some trouble was dragged to a bath tub and placed in cold water, greatly aggravating the disease and causing her speedy death.

LATER NEWS.

DR. TANNER successfully finished his forty days' fast at noon on the 7th, and at once partook sparingly of watermelon and milk. Later in the day he ate liberally of roast beef, and on the 8th his appetite continued good and his stomach readily disposed of large quantities of nutritious food, such as beefsteak, milk toast, stewed potatoes, bread, etc. At the termination of his fast he weighed 121½ pounds, and thirty hours after the weight had increased to 125.

A LONDON dispatch of the 8th announces the attack by a mob of disguised men upon the Crown Solicitor of Tipperary County, Ireland, and his two sons. One of the sons was killed.

A TRANSPORT with 1,000 soldiers left England for Afghanistan on the 8th.

A CONSTANTINOPLE dispatch of the 8th says military preparations were being pushed in the Balkan Peninsula by Turkey, Montenegro and Bulgarians. The Armenians, who had always been loyal to the Porte, were developing strong Russian tendencies.

THE alleged John and Nancy Bender were on the 8th given into the custody of Sheriff Beuler (not a relative) of Lafayette County, Kan., who at once started for home with the prisoners. They were met at Kansas City, Mo., on the 9th by a large crowd, and the sheriff allowed them to be taken to a theatre and exhibited during the afternoon at twenty-five cents admission.

THE first stone in the work of completing the shaft of the Washington National Monument was laid on the 7th. President Hayes and others deposited coins underneath the stone. It will take about four years to finish the monument.

THE census officials at St. Louis state that the recent enumeration to that city was a fair one, that while there were of necessity some mistakes, the work taken as a whole was accurately performed, and that the population of the place is about 320,000.

WILLIAM HAMZELL received the Democratic nomination for Congress in the Eleventh Illinois District on the 7th, and Judge Sullivan, who declined on account of ill-health, Bartnell formerly represented the District.

REV. REV. JOHN A. WATTERSON was on the 8th consecrated Roman Catholic Bishop of Columbus, Ohio.

MR. BRASSIE, of Halifax Court House, N. C., noticed that his watermelons were rapidly disappearing and, as there was a meeting of colored people in the wood adjoining, he thought he had discovered the reason. To test the accuracy of his suspicions he poisoned some of the melons and then set up placards bearing the notice, "Look out; these melons are poisoned." The thieves thought the notice was intended only to scare them and ate more generously than ever. One man died soon after, and five others were likely to die.

MICHIGAN STATE NEWS.

A FEW days ago the steam flour mill of J. Jenks & Co. at Sand Beach, in Huron County, was totally destroyed by fire, involving a loss of about $18,000.

THE barn of M. B. Nichols, about one mile east of Galesburg, containing one hundred bushels of old and several hundred bushels of unthreshed wheat, and several tons of hay, was struck by lightning on the 1st and burned. Loss, $1,200.

THE United States land Office in the Upper Peninsula is driven constantly with applications for homesteads, and one week recently seven thousand acres were taken up.

THE output of copper stamp-rock on Lake Superior is not far from three thousand tons a day.

BURGLARS broke into the safe of Young Brothers' hardware store at Vicksburg, Kalamazoo County, early on the morning of the 31 and abstracted $350 in cash and $3,000 in notes. The present whereabouts of the burglars is now the all-absorbing question.

SOAB BIARS, a farmer living in the town of Havenna, was in Muskegon one day recently and met an acquaintance. He treated about during the night making various threats to commit suicide. He badly was found in the lake next morning, and the probability is that he committed suicide while drunk.

THE ice-house and warerooms of Kirby Carpenter & Co., at Menominee, were recently burned, being ignited by a spark from a passing train.

A CONTRACTOR employs one hundred men picking up cobble stones on the Lake Michigan and Lake Superior beaches, and will ship one thousand cords of them to Chicago.

THE latest thing out is a lumber-sorting machine, the invention of a Mr. Mattice, and it is said to have been put in successful use, and saves the labor of five or six men.

THE steamer Sir Henry Bessemer, Capt. Casula, is said to have shaped with a Detroit woman, taking $3,000 belonging to the Government.

A MEMBER of the Detroit Bicycle Club will ride his machine from that city to Syracuse, New York, three hundred and eighty-three miles.

THE production of Michigan salt wells during July was 396,500 barrels. The low-price war began in September, and the total production for eight months is 1,498,461 barrels, an excess of 267,461 barrels over the same period of last year. Upon this basis the production of Michigan salt for 1881 is certain to exceed 2,300,000 barrels.

JOHN BURR has leased the Grace furnace, at Marquette, and it will soon be relighted. Under the terms of the lease the Lake Superior Iron Company will make repairs to an amount not exceeding $25,000.

THE thirtieth anniversary of General Scott's entry into the City of Mexico will be observed in Detroit, September 14, by the Michigan veterans.

SEVERAL prominent wagon-making firms in the state are making a specialty of wagons for lumbermen, and the demand is so great that they can't keep up to set supper, and while seated at the table John Bender, the man into the cellar where Kate or John killed him, and the next day they burned him in the garden.

"Was there any other witness?"

"They cried terribly that night, and the next day I heard a noise among and saw one of 'em and they were killed that night."

"How were they killed?"

"They were buried alive. Oh John took one and Kate took the other. They hollered awful, but finally stopped, and Kate came in and said the cursed brats were all right now."

"Do you remember their names?"

"It was something like Brackmore or Blackmore." The name was Longhouse, and but one of the children was found.)

"Who was buried next?"

"It was Dr. York." Someone or him so well He was such a pleasant man, with side whiskers and Kate took him to the cellar. They talked Shall Our Highways Be Closed?

By what peculiar right does the region known locally as the Boyne Resort, ask for the closing of one of our most important and most public highways? I refer to the road running past their grounds from Charlevoix to Pine Lake.

Perhaps the gentlemen now doing the Boyne Resort have not stopped to think that if their request is granted they will be doing a deadly injury to the community that has so generously given them exactly the ground they now occupy and which they, the people, had better have purchased for themselves and laid out as a park, to which all, both villager and stranger, would have more than welcome.

Why do they wish to deny us the pleasure of coasting at the bottom of their Resort, or that in cut from our little inland sea the cheers of all the country? Or such is the Resolution of Hawaii "Inasmuch" as the interests of the people of Charlevoix to mount on themselves." Gentlemen of the Board, be more sensible and. We have a taste for the beautiful as well as yourselves. Many or us have to-day many a weary mile for many years over through narrow roads, hemmed in on the sombre woods by the labor of our own hands. Surely you did not come here to injure the people who have treated you so unselfishly. This is not a disorderly community to over run your grounds without permission and the book of admonition from the sawdust can not inspire the grounds for its inhabitants. It might be proper to ask if the owners of the Resort intend to pay Mr. Stockman for the ground for the new road in exchange for what they will give by the closure of the present road, or ask the town to pay for it, or have it all on their own shoulders? Mr. Stockman owns to the road in front of his premises, and has a right to it.

If the gentlemen controlling the Resort are of them, we do business here one winter I am fully persuaded that they would hesitate long before asking us to surrender a highway that is of such importance to the people of Pine Lake region leaving us out of the question altogether.

There can be but little doubt, if the road is left open, that a board walk will be laid from the village to Pine lake in less than three years, and still less doubt that if it is closed it will be an injury to every property owner in Charlevoix.

Finally, gentlemen of the council, and Mr. Highway Commissioner, if you close this road to the public, will you be doing your duty to yourselves and your constituents?

As those of the council who own stock in the Resort can surely act disinterestedly, they should ask to be excused from voting on the question; and if they do not ask to be excused, and do vote, then they should be impeached.

Rev. A. M. Pirsonette will preach at Round School house on Wednesday evening, Aug. 18, as it has been announced.

Mr. Longzal Flint has returned to his home but anticipates visiting this region again this fall with a view of purchasing land.

Miss Fannie Rose came up from Chicago on the Charlevoix City last Thursday to spend a few weeks at her father's, A. Rose, Esq.

We understand that some persons take what we write seriously to heart. We do not want to trample on anybody's corns, keep your feet out of the way.

Some new roads in our town have been located two rods in width when many some of our citizens are on their ear. They are of the opinion such things hadn't ought to be did.

The chairman of the Republican township committee has called a primary meeting to be held at Rose' school house on Saturday Aug 21, at nine o'clock a. m. to the purpose of choosing delegates to the County convention and the organization of a Garfield and Arthur Club, and the transaction of any other business that may come before the meeting.

We advise some of the young men of Boyne and of all other countries not to think it is smart or a skilful piece of financiering to beat their employers out of a few cents or dollars by leaving a job of work unfinished because their employ as been kind enough to advance them pay beyond their earnings. It is dishonesty of the lowest type and no one but a rascal would be guilty of it.

N. L. Ons and Secret Societies.

To the Editor of the Sentinel

The country has lately been flooded with circulars signed by N. L. Ons in which he attributes all his trouble to the fact of his being an anti-secret society man. He has also written several letters to parties in this region, demanding assistance as the rest of all evil. He has a right to do this, but we have a right to question his consistency and honesty.

The "Rev. N. L. Ons came to me last winter and asked if it was customary in the Orange Institution, as in other kindred secret societies, to exhort clergymen without the payment of the usual fees. I told him it was. He then expressed a desire to join the lodge, and asked me if I would propose the matter at the next meeting. I told him I would, and would have done so had I not heard two days after that he had, at Wm. Clarke's, indulged in a tirade against secret societies. He joined his name at Maintee particularly, favoring certain Masons had exposed his hypocrisy, but Orange men despise him as a hypocrite, because of the above.

Yours,

BENJAMIN BOOTH.

BANKS, June 16, 1880.

Through the Lakes to Elk Rapids.

A short time since a party of pleasure men made an excursion from Charlevoix to Elk Rapids by way of the Portage from the Jordan to Intermediate lake, returning by Lake Michigan. The obstacles are sufficient to account for this excursion having been seldom attempted before, but the party pinions themselves amply repaid by the scenery, which they report as very bold along the Portage and pleasurable locally at Susan's and Season lakes, possessing the charm of unwinding scenes of interest along the entire chain of lakes—ten or twelve in number. They, however, caution parties against camping at Round lake, on account of the mosquitoes.

The entire excursion occupied six days. They reached this port precisely at midnight on Saturday, having made the whole distance from Round lake since morning, not less than forty-five miles through the open lake, with oars only. They speak highly of the kindness of a gentleman named King, who resides on the edge of King lake, at the western end of the Portage. They boat had been injured on the overland journey and he added them in the most friendly way to repair the boat, as well as to recruit the inner man.

Hon. David H. Jerome, Michigan's next Governor, is a native of Detroit, having been born in this city November 17th, 1829. His father dying while he was still an infant, his mother to central New York, where Mr. Jerome's early years were spent. In 1851 she returned to Michigan and settled in St. Clair county. In 1853 Jerome went to California, and located and opened a very successful mine. In the following year he settled in Saginaw and engaged in the mercantile business which he has since stuck to, being now the senior partner in the extensive lumber firm of D. H. Jerome & Co. In 1862 he raised and organized the 23d regiment, and soon served for several years on the staff of Governor Blair. In 1867 he was elected to the State Senate, where he served three terms, and where he distinguished himself by his opposition to the famous railroad and law. In 1873 he served as one of the commissioners to revise the State constitution. Possessing wealth and public spirit, Mr. Jerome has invested himself largely in the construction of the Saginaw Valley and St. Louis railroad, and has from the first been president of the company. He is an Episcopalian in religion, and enjoys at home a reputation of the highest character. He is a tall, handsome man of dignified, carriage, and yet most agreeable manners. In every respect Mr. Jerome is just the man one would select for the chief executive of the State, and the Republican party of Michigan is to be congratulated upon its certain success in naming one any honorable men for the highest offices.—Evening News.

SUPERVISOR Kent got off a good thing during the session of the Board of Supervisors last week. It was announced that the name of the new Township would be "Resort." Mr. Kent suggested that it be called "last Resort." The pleasure of several outsiders saved Mr. Kent from bodily injury.

GIVE more appropriation besides the one now available will put Charlevoix harbor in a condition that the largest propellers that stop here may make an entrance. This will make Charlevoix the marine center of the region, and cause the establishment of many enterprises which always follow marine interests. A town, like a human being, gains strength by what it feeds upon; and our navigation being a leading avenue of trade, its improvement will show the most marked results.

INVITATIONS are in circulation for a grand ball to be held at the Council Station hotel, Boyne City, on Friday evening, August 27. Dance tickets, fifty cents; supper, seventy-five cents.

THE Petoskey Democrat says Charlevoix has a Hancock club of about fifty members. We will bet him the cigars that its membership don't number over sixty-nine twenty. What is the use of lying?

THE Charlevoix Sentinel names the nomination of Archibald Buttars, of that town for State Senator by the Republicans. Mr. Buttars is an old settler in this region a good square business man, and we read a candidate as could be put forward by the party.—Traverse Bay Eagle (How's that?)

THE Board of Supervisors were in session four days last week. Most of the time was occupied in back business. The object of the meeting was to create a township somewhere in the northern part of the county. The township only contains three full sections, and seven fractional—in all not over one full section, but "Resort" is little as long as you'll agree." It only cost the heavy payers of the county $2.50 a day, and the people will be relieved by the formal installation as soon as the organization of a township is complete. All the county board will not support a Township government.

IN the matter of who shall be county officers, it seems to be quite generally conceded that for the office of Judge of Probate, James A. Keat, of South Arm, is the foremost candidate. Mr. Keat is an old settler in the county, has been supervisor of the Township nearly every year since its organization in this county, has been constantly admitted to the bar as a lawyer, and is a man of honor, good judgment, and the highest intelligence. He stands first in the Township of South Arm and Township 34 north of range 7 west, and is entitled to recognition in the distribution of nominations. We doubt if there is a man in the county who possesses broader or more general qualifications for the office than James A. Keat.

AT will be seen by the official proceedings, Supervisor Heather introduced a resolution on the Board Friday, to submit to the people at the next spring election the matter of removing the county seat to Advance. The matter is under indefinite. It was carried by a vote of seven to six, the eastern Supervisors voting in the affirmative, the rest entirely with Heather. This action will indicate clearly to the readers what the outcome will be. Success to any, Advance has come to the front as a candidate for the county seat, and Supervisor Heather, of Pine Township, holds the key to the situation, and can dictate terms to the Board even after the new Supervisors are seated. It seems remarkably as if lightning might strike in the vicinity of Advance. In only a week, don't bet anything on it. The future location of the Charlevoix county seat.

LARCENY.—Ida Eaton, who was arrested at the instance of W. C. Newman, charged with stealing a lady's article and gold ring, was arraigned for examination one day last week, but discharged owing to an error in the papers. The girl subsequently acknowledged her guilt and gave up the articles to Mr. Newman.

FIRE DEPARTMENT.—The meeting called Saturday evening to organize a village Fire Department was fairly attended, and a good start made toward organization. Twenty-five names are signed, and more ready to do so. Another meeting will be held Thursday evening to perfect the organization. Let every citizen attend.

THE HARBOR CONTRACT.—A private letter from R. J. Dean to the editor states that the contract for dredging Charlevoix harbor was let to New York parties, at fifteen cents per cubic yard, undoubtedly Carkin, Stickney & Crain by one half cent per yard. Fourteen cents is the same price at which the work went last year. The contractors have no dredges, we understand, and the work may not be done this fall.

ACCIDENT TO THE REDOAK.—The schooner S. Bates in towing out loaded behind the tug Bob Stevenson, Saturday night, struck her bow on the back boat Pat's wash-board, and swung her bow across the channel, the stream striking the bridge and swinging some twenty feet of the railing. The bows of the vessel struck the protection piers, discommoding, that somewhat, but causing more damage to the craft, carrying away her port cat-head, starboard guy, fishing jib rope, and damaging her cut and fixtures considerable. The vessel is by far the greater sufferer in the transaction.

TEACHERS' INSTITUTE.—A Teachers' Institute for Charlevoix and Emmet counties will be held at Charlevoix, commencing at 2 o'clock p. m. Monday, September 6, and closing the Friday following. It is hoped that the teachers of the county will push themselves on the opportunity thus offered to improve themselves in the art of teaching. The morning and afternoon sessions will be devoted to the discussion of topics of particular interest to teachers, while in the evening lectures will be of a popular character. Particulars regarding board accommodations, etc., may be had by applying to J. S. Dean, local committee.

Upper River Improvement.

We are before our readers to-day with statements of all matters connected with this improvement, and beg them to look carefully over the various items, and if any will at once send in the amount of their subscriptions, but add thereto, so that this important work may be accomplished before the winter sets in and destroys what has cost us much time and money to accomplish.

The Pine Lake Iron Co. has fulfilled the task imposed upon it by the other lakes to the head, and the latter must now see the advisability of paying to their several subscriptions without a moment's delay.

Mr. Stocking deserves praise for the way he has fulfilled his engagement, and it is only one instance among many to be properly paid in full.

Expended to September 15, 1879 (old contract)	$1,000 00
Expended on Pine Lake Iron Co. contract	1,000 00
Expended by Pine Lake Iron Co. for dredging between Pine and Round lakes	500 00
R. Strickland for 40 days superintending dredging and clearing channel	100 00
Dredging 4,000 yards at 15 cents per yard	600 00
Dredging 1,000 yards at 14 cents per yard	140 00
Total	$3,340 00
Amount received from Pine Lake Iron Co.	$1,000 00
Amount received from Emmet county	1,000 00
Amount received from Charlevoix county	1,000 00
Total	$3,000 00
Amount expended by Emmet county, $1,000 00
Amount expended by Charlevoix county	1,000 00
Total	$2,000 00

Of the $1,000 appropriated, the $1,000 expended by Emmet county, and $500 of the $1,000 expended by Charlevoix county, was for the benefit of Pine Lake alone, leaving the amount expended for the benefit of the entire chain of lakes as follows:

Amount expended by Charlevoix county	$ 500 00
Amount expended by Pine Lake Iron Co.	1,000 00
Total	$1,500 00

Personal.

Mrs. M. J. Stockman has gone to Cleveland on a visit.

H. D. Rose, of Petoskey, made us a pleasant call on Tuesday.

James Washburn has leased the Wood house on Main street, and will soon occupy it.

Capt. Clifford and family left town Friday evening for Fort Snelling, the Captain's post of duty.

The Liberal Club.

To the Editor of the Charlevoix Sentinel:

One word more in relation to the public hall association. To such we are saying to the people that the hall movement is a move misgotten to favor of Liberalism and immorality, we would say they are laboring under a wrong impression. The hall association, though the result of a move made by the Liberal club, is an association outside and independent of the Liberal club or any other club or society. The Liberals will be required to pay for the use of the hall the same as all others. The hall holders will leave the control of the matter, deciding their effects and making their own bylaws. Each share holder will be a member of the association, and entitled to a vote. The Liberals now last winter, as every other citizen of the place saw, the need of such a hall. It was needed last winter to accommodate their meetings and the meetings of the Horticultural society. Because of such need, for an accommodation to the public, and a benefit to the churches also, the enterprise has been undertaken, and a timely liberality on the part of the people in the way of taking shares will insure its success.

Respectfully,

LEWIS MILLER.

THE FURNACE.—Work on the furnace is progressing rapidly. Foundation of the thirty-six tuiles are completed, the cross building which constitutes the stack being and cooling room is done, the stack complete, and the hoisters for the transportation in place. The engine will be set up soon. The Company's mine, HARD, is being finished up.

THE BENDERS.

True Story of Their Fate by a Participant in Their Taking-off.

A correspondent of the Chicago Times, writing from Oswego, Labette County, Kan., in reference to the arrest of the McGregor tramps and their claim to be members of the murderous Bender family, says:

"The Benders are dead. I speak this decisively because I know whereof I speak. It is not customary for me to boast of my lawlessness, and it is not in that spirit that I enter upon the recital of the last chapter of the bloody career of the loathful Benders.

"It is not necessary to go into details on account of the murders. In point of fact, very little is actually known on that point. No one in the land of the living will have the heart to say that he saw the dear Benders murder anybody. Indeed, the Benders themselves never made a confession that I know of. The Montgomery Times wrote a little of in their description of the murders. They always had Kate, or Maggie, her cousin, or John, cutting the heads of the victims in pieces with hatchets, whereas they were invariably brained with a hammer and then thrown out.

"The Benders, John and his wife, and their two children, Kate and John, kept a wayside tavern about a mile and a half southeast of Cherryvale. They were a reticent family, independent to the United States. They were a reticent family, independent to the United States. They were a reticent family, independent to the United States

The Western Stage-Driver.

IT IS worth a day's journey to get acquainted with the average Western stage-driver, to listen to his stories and observe his ways. "He is only a passenger," is a slang expression which I sometimes hear used in the East to describe a person who thinks he manages some important enterprise which is really controlled by other and more important men; but I never appreciated how forcible it was until I took my seat on the box by the side of a Western stage-driver. The conductor of a railway train is the man who comes along through the car at intervals and punches a peculiarly shaped hole in your ticket, or tears off a coupon as you approach the end of a division. He waves his hand or swings his lantern for the train to start, but the fact that he is the man into whose hands we commit our lives, the autocrat of the train, never occurs to me unless some accident happens through his negligence.

The stage-driver is the conductor, engineer, fireman and brakeman, he is the captain of the ship, its complement of officers and the crew, and when he gathers up his lines, mounts his whip-lash from its sock and "pulls out," he is the "boss" until he reaches the end of his route. His coach is not run by telegraph; he does not wait at stations for orders to "go ahead;" he goes fast or slow as he chooses. And the stage-driver generally knows his own importance and makes his passengers feel it. If you get on the right side of him he will crowd the journey full of interest and pleasure, but if he conceives a dislike or contempt for you, the scenery you get a seat inside the coach the better it will be for you.

A majority of the Western stage-drivers are middle-aged men (less than fifty), but they have lived a hundred years if time was only measured by the experience they have had. It is rare to meet one nowadays who did not drive on the old overland route, and many of them carried their apprenticeships in the States east of the Missouri River before that route was established. To hear a man whose hair has not begun to turn gray tell of his adventures on the plains and in the mountains before there was a Pacific Railroad is to me almost like listening to a soldier of the Revolution describing the battle of Bunker Hill. One period seems little more remote than the other to one who never saw the country until he could come here by rail, and to our children they will be equally remote periods of the romantic past.

I think I would know a Western stage-driver wherever I might see him on the box. Though not uniformed, there are certain peculiarities in the way they wear their clothes that, though difficult to describe, are unmistakable, but there is more in the manner than in the dress. They sit upon the box as though they were part of it, they hold the lines in a certain way, and the butt end of the long whip, when not in use, lies loosely between the thumb and forefinger of the right hand, while the top rests across the knee. If I saw a man who was driving in this way take all the reins and the whip in his left hand when he came to a level piece of road or a slight ascent, draw the end of the whip-lash tenderly through his right hand, and then, by a continuation of the same motion, raise his hand very slowly as he let the thongs run through it, and taking his hat by the rim behind pass it forward over his eyes, I should be disappointed if, when I asked him if he didn't drive for Wells, Fargo & Co. or Ben Holliday in olden times, he did not reply: "You bet," or "I should reckon."

These fellows are generally rough and profane, but they are men of undoubted nerve, brave as a lion and full of resources when in danger or difficulty. Toward ladies they are, almost without exception, I believe, polite and gallant. To their friends they are as true as steel, and there is a sense of honor prevalent among them that makes them remarkably trustworthy. "I treat every man white who treats me white, and don't you forget it," said "Frank" the driver with whom I rode to Silver Cliff the other day, in speaking of his relations with his employers. "They always done what's right by me and I can't kick," he added. And this was said in a way that showed that he meant it. —The N. Y. Tribune.

Lovely Woman—Her Rights and Her Wrongs.

GOOD WOMAN, we know you have your wrongs, and we know you need your rights, and we intend that you shall have them—your rights, that is, you shall have your rights if we have to give them to you "ourself." Not only your rights, but your lefts. Take the whole pair; there is nothing mean about us.

Seriously, we believe in your emancipation.

We know you do more work for less money than your self-sacrificing ears like to do. We know that you are underpaid, as a rule, for most that you do. We know how you have been elbowed and crowded out of the professional world so long as men could keep you out, and we know that your rights have been disregarded alike by the hostility of your enemies and the careless thoughtlessness of your friends. We know how your courage, fidelity and ability have been underrated. And if we could we would overturn all this in a minute. Personally, we would like to put the ballot in your hands this fall, knowing as we do that your hands would honor it. But, with all this, we fear that man is not your worst enemy. Your most imperious and pitiless tyrant is woman. Now, don't flare up and interrupt before we are through. Nobody, we repeat, is so hard on you as women. No man with whom you deal is so pitiless as women. Your worst tyrants are those of your own sex.

Only a few days ago we heard Mrs. Livermore lecture on "Superfluous Women." She told us all about the beautiful things she saw at the Centennial, all made by women. We embraced her lecture, applauded and imbibed it, but we felt sad when she told about the beautiful things she saw at the Centennial that women made. Here, to our way of thinking is the most imperfect picture of woman's condition. We don't know what she can make, but we do know what she can't make. She can't make her own clothes.

Now, how can women expect to go out into the great world and compete with her brother until she can make her own clothes as well as her brother makes his? Don't tell us you can, because we know better. You can't.

See here. Three years ago—it may have been four, but it was certainly three—we went into a merchant-tailoring establishment in Burlington to order a suit of clothes. We selected the cloth, the cutter measured us, the proprietor said, "We will send the suit to the house when it is finished." That was all. We never bothered about it, didn't go to see how the suit was coming along, it came home, was put on. It fitted as a matter of course, just as we expected it would, and there was nothing lacking about it. Since that time we have never troubled the cutter for a new measure. He does not want it. When we want a new suit we merely select the cloth and go out, and by the time the suit follows us home. If we are a thousand miles from home we have just to write and the suit is made and sent by express or' fire just as well as though we ran in to fuss over it six times a minute.

Now, on the other hand, our wife wants a dress. After two or three or half a dozen stores have been ransacked for the goods, the dressmaker is sought out.

The matter of measurement is tedious, and then the matter of fitting is one of numerous and repeated trials. Finally the dress is finished and sent home. Then it is sent back to be taken in here and let out there, and at last, after the customer has been fitted more times for that one dress than her husband has been measured in three or four years, the dress comes home for the last time, and is pronounced by the wearer, her friends and the dressmaker as beautiful and a perfect fit, and it is finished.

Beautiful it certainly is, far more beautiful than anything her husband ever wears. Colors and material, style, blending shades and contrasting bits of color, are all in the perfection of good taste. No man can improve upon that. But it isn't finished. When it is completed so far as the skill of the dressmaker can finish it, and it is to be put on, it has to be pinned somewhere. Sometimes a two or three, often in half a dozen places. It always requires a pin. Loose out the pin and the dress is all awry somewhere. On all this broad American continent there is not one woman who can dress so as to make any kind of an appearance in good society without pins.

Now, suppose our tailor should send our suit home, and when we had put on the coat we had to pin it at the neck? Or suppose there were no suspender buttons aft, and we had to tie pins there? Suppose he made our shirts so that we would have to pin on the collar, how long would such a shirt or such clothes stay in the house? Who would be responsible for the language used by the man who had to pin on his coat? No tailor would dare to tempt the wrath of independent man. But woman—alas! she patiently pins on the dress that she paid some one thirty or forty dollars to make, and doesn't think anything about it. We will not pursue this painful subject. Let the women of America take it up and think about it, and learn, in the public indignation of womanhood, to make their clothes before they put them on.—Bob Burdette, in Burlington Hawkeye.

Old and New Ways of Locking the Federal Strong Boxes.

In the office of the Treasurer of the United States is a glass case which contains the keys which were used in the olden times to lock the Treasury vaults. Now that time-locks and combinations have taken the place of those keys, they are kept framed as relics of the "degenerate" days. Mr. Gilfillan says that in the old times the Treasurer when the vaults were locked up carried the key home with him and several times the house of the Treasurer, who had the keys in custody, has been broken into by thieves to get these open sesames. Under the present system the vaults are locked by time and combination-locks. There are inner and outer doors to the vaults. The officer who knows the combination to open the outer door does not know the combination which opens the inner, and vice versa. Hence no one person can get into the vaults. When the combination is changed the charges are noted by different clerks and handed to Treasurer Gilfillan in a sealed envelope. —Washington Star.

NOW, AND THEN.

"WELL, well, well!" said grandmamma,
"Only to see the boys!
The manners of a child of beauty!
That are made for tender girls and boys—
Velocipedes are their toys.

And a dozen times a day, my dear,
And the neighbors all around,
With running with an engine from Paris,
And "chivying" it with a bound.
With pennies worth a small fortune,
And not several thousand—lal, lal!

"My goodness! If Polly and Bell had,
Who played so odd times with me,
In the corner down by the apple-house,
These wonderful dolls could see,
Bucket's doll had a round pink head
From a bit of soft pine wood;
And Polly's was only a cornstalk,
With a calico slip and hood.
My doll was a lovely ragbaby,
With bodkin-eyes and nose;
Her cheeks were painted with cherry-juice,
And I made every stitch of her clothes.

"The surface is was a plain whalebone,
And his nerve a white sewing-silk;
Such a life as his cockery prairie
Led he could not have wished!

THE SHIP OF THE DESERT.

UNLIKE other ships, this one begins by being a very feeble and helpless little craft, indeed. For the first week after he is launched on the great sea, he requires much careful watching on the part of the owners.

Strange it may appear, in very truth a baby camel is every whit as helpless as a human baby. It cannot stand alone, neither will it cannot so much as take its own food even; while its long neck is at first so flexible and fragile, that upon most any score were ability at hand to watch, the poor little creature would run every risk of dislocating it.

Those who have closely observed camel nature tell us it is never known to play, or frolic like lambs or colts, or most young creatures of the earth, in fact; but that, in its babyhood, it is as grave and quiet as in its old age. Late apparently with a deep sense of its own ugliness, and a mournful resignation to a long and joyless career.

When it has reached its third year, the lumpy-backed baby is counted old enough to begin its life of labor. The trainers then take it in hand. They teach it to kneel down to be laden, which, gradually they make heavier and heavier, until their charge is supposed to have come to the full strength of camel maturity. This is not until it is about eight years old.

If the camel can feel a proud pride in anything, this is it. This period of good positive that he can carry it throughout the journey, although it sometimes happens that the journey be only a very short one, the patient beast is looked so heavily that it must be helped onto its feet by means of ropes and levers. In some places camels cry out against this excessive loading in a most piteous and distressful manner—every possessing line of their body, young child in pain, and being a most dismal sound to hear—but in other parts of the world they will bear their burden, however heavy, without complaining.

An ordinary camel's load is from seven to eight hundred pounds. With this weight on their backs, a train of camels will carry thirty miles of desert during a day. Those used to carry dispatches, having only the light weight of the dispatch-bearer, of course are expedient to travel much faster, however, and will easily accomplish two hundred and forty miles in the same length of time.

Ungainly, awkward, repulsive-looking as these creatures are, with their great projecting hamps and their fairly humps, they have the compensation of being most priceless treasures to all those who "dwell in tents" in the vast sandy plains of Egypt, Arabia and Tartary.

Their shoulders are so formed by Nature that they are capable of being converted into a set of water-tanks, a number of small cells filled with the purest water being fastened to the sides of each, and when all food fails, it makes little difference to a camel or dromedary—at least for a time.

Their humps are composed of a fatty substance. Day by day the hump diminishes, and the fat is absorbed into the animal's system, furnishing nourishment until food is forthcoming.

Thus, with these stores of water and fuel on board, the "ship" can go on for a fortnight, or even a month, absolutely without eating or drinking, while things that other creatures—unless perhaps, it be some bird of the ostrich tribe—would never dream of touching, will furnish forth a sumptuous meal for a camel. Of a handful of dates and briers he can make an excellent breakfast, and I believe he will not disdain anything apparently so unappetizing as a bit of dry wood.

Provided that at certain periods of the year a short holiday is allowed the camel for pasturing, quite at its leisure, to recruit its strength and fill that store-house on its back with food, it will serve its master, on such meager fare as I have mentioned, for full fifty years. Still, all work and no play is as bad for camels as it is for boys.

Even with plenty of fuel on board, the desert-ship owners are wise enough not to impose too long journeys upon their heavily-laden fleets.

A camel's foot is of a peculiar formation. It is wide-spreading, and is provided with fleshy pads or cushions, and, if after a certain march rest were not given, the skin would wear off these pads, the flesh become bare, bringing consequences direful, indeed. Probably the suffering creature would kneel down, fold its long legs under its body, and, crushing out its long neck on the ground, calmly announce in camel language that it would go no further. It is no use whatever to try to make a camel go against his will.

It it once refuses, you have but two ways open to you: you may quietly lie down beside it until it is ready to move, or you may abandon it forever. Other course there is none.

It is a curious fact that, notwithstanding the saltness of the camel's food, it can walk over the largest stones, or thorns, or roots of trees, without the least danger of wounding itself, and that this strange being most dreads a wet and marshy ground.

We read that "the instant it places its feet upon anything like mud, it slips and slides, and generally, after staggering about like a drunken man, falls heavily on its side."

The use of the camel to the various peoples of the East is almost inestimable. Not only is his flesh and his chief sustenance in the cheese, butter and milk of the mother camel. The flesh of young camels is often eaten.

The Roman Emperor Heliogabalus is said to have reckoned camel's foot one of the daintiest morsels at his sumptuous banquets, and he considered a portion of tender camel roast a thing to be by no means despised. To this day, indeed, camel's hump cut into slices and dissolved in tea is counted a relish by the Tartar tribes.

Camel's skin is made into straps and sandals, while brushes and ropes, cloth and tents, sacks and carpets, are made entirely from camel's hair.

Every year toward the beginning of summer the camel sheds its hair, a very helpless at this period of which vanishes before the new hair begins to grow. For three weeks this hard condition lasts. His camelship looks as if he had been shaved without mercy from the tip of his tail to the top of his head, and during this season no is extremely sensitive to the cold or wet, shaking in every limb if a drop of rain falls, shivering painfully in the chilliness of the night air.

By-and-by the new hair begins to grow—fine, soft, curly wool that gradually becomes long, thick, soft fur; and after this, the rain may rain as much as it likes, the night air may be as chilly as it will, the camel will not care a grain. In that armor of Nature's providing he will not shiver or shake any more.

The hair of a camel, on an average, will weigh about ten pounds, but camels with much heavier than silk and longer than the wool of a sheep. In the course of my reading, a story of Cyrus, the great conqueror of Persia, is told in which he is said to have had a camel's hair mantle, and the conversation proceeds altogether in signs."—Harper's Young People.

HOME, FARM AND GARDEN.

MOSQUITOES are said to be expelled or disabled by pinching a little bunch of burnt powder on some burning paper in the bedroom.

MILK in any form is good for pointry. Mixing it with ground feed is not only nutritious and healthy for chicks, but is one of the best articles of food for fattening fowls and for producing eggs.

MILK LEMONADE.—Loaf sugar, one and a half pounds, dissolved in a quart of boiling water, with half a pint of lemon juice, and one and a half pints of milk. This makes a capital summer beverage.

REMOVE the corn from the ground and plow the stubble under if land is to be sown to wheat. A frequent method is to cut off the stalks just above the ground, and then cover it by plowing a light furrow. The surface is then harrowed or left rough.

MOLASSES COOKIES.—One cupful of molasses, one cupful of sugar, two-thirds cupful of lard or butter, one cupful of lard or butter, one egg, one teaspoonful of alum, one teaspoonful of saleratus, and two teaspoonfuls of ginger. These ingredients will make ninety to 100 cookies.

BEEF HASH.—Two tumblers of hot water, a large onion, one pint of boiled potatoes, one pint of cold meat chopped fine, a tablespoonful of grated cheese and the same of the bread crumbs; then season highly with cayenne pepper, and add three tumblers of cold beef, minced. It should all be stirred well together and served as soon as hot.

EXCELLENT WHITE CAKE.—Two cups of granulated sugar beaten to a cream with a scant cup of butter; then add a third of a cup of sweet milk, the whites of eight eggs beaten to a stiff froth, and three and a half teaspoonfuls of sifted flour, with two teaspoonfuls of yeast powder mixed with it. Flavor and bake in a moderate oven.

WHEN quilts or bed-gals appear on the ankles of young colts, they may be considered as the result of constitutional debility arising from improper feeding or similarly defective. In this case the blemish will be incurable. The only treatment is to prick the puffs and get a bandage with a pad over the part so as to keep a constant pressure on it.

FRENCH RAREBIT.—Take three ounces of cheese, cut it in small square pieces and set it to fry with a little piece of butter. When your cheese begins to melt, have three eggs beaten up with salt and pepper. Pour them upon your cheese. Stir and roll it all into a sort of muff and take it off. The whole operation should not take more than one or two minutes. Try it.

EGGS can be preserved in lime, slacked as if for whitewash. The eggs are packed in barrels or brick vats, and kept covered with the lime. They may be preserved equally well for domestic use by smearing them, when perfectly fresh, with lard, and packing in oats, or bran, and kept in a cool, dry place.

BUTTERMILK CHEESE.—You can make delicious little cheeses by warming up buttermilk until it quite curdles, then straining it through a bag, mixing the curd with a little cream, pepper and salt, then pressing it into a small basin or cup for a few hours. It is very nice for breakfast or lunch. The Scotch scones, teacakes and plain cake are made with buttermilk instead of sweet milk or water, using a small quantity of carbonate of soda.

ONION SOUP.—Cut a number of onions into dice or very thin slices. Toss them in plenty of butter till light brown; moisten them well with broth, and let them simmer gently for an hour, adding sufficient water from time to time. In the meantime fry some slipsets of bread to a bright golden color in plenty of butter. Throw them into the soup when done, with sufficient salt and pepper, and serve immediately. The yolk of an egg well beaten, thoroughly mixed with twice its bulk of the liquor, may also be added to the soup.

THE best method of applying liquid manure is to spread it from a large tank or tank mounted upon wheels. It can only be conveniently spread upon grass or young crops, and it is hardly possible that it can be done economically. The better way would be to absorb the liquids of the manure by the addition of litter of some porous kind, and if nothing better can be procured, earth or sand may be used. This can be spread with less trouble than liquid manure, and unless it is required for garden or market crops, young corn or grass, or similar purposes, the dry manure will be most convenient. At prices, it will not pay to use such laborious methods with common farm crops, because the ordinary methods can be applied as effectively and more cheaply.

THE common adulterant for vinegar is sulphuric acid, which is used on account of its intense sourness. Its presence may be detected as follows: boil the suspected vinegar in a glass or porcelain vessel with a little solution of calcium chloride. This is made by diluting hydrochloric acid with four times its quantity of water and adding powdered chalk or marble-dust until no further effervescence is caused by adding chalk or marble. The solution is filtered for use. If sulphuric acid exists in the vinegar, a precipitate of gypsum (sulphate of lime) is thrown down on mixing the solution with the vinegar. Vinegar is also adulterated by adding infusion of acrid substances, as pepper, mustard-seed, etc. These may be detected by evaporating a small quantity of the vinegar to concentration, and the taste will reveal the foreign substance.

ALL SORTS.

A HEN may be calculated to consume sixty pounds of grain in a year and lay fifteen pounds of eggs.

DR. PAUL, of Philadelphia, advertised himself as "the world-renowned wizard of human destiny," and offered to conduct the love and marriage affairs of others; but he seems to have mismanaged his own, for he is now in jail for bigamy.

MRS. J. W. MACKAY, who has the distinction of being the richest American lady in Europe, has been subjected to a great deal of annoyance by the actions of a woman who personated her in Paris, and contracted large bills in her name.

VESUVIUS electrically illuminates! appears now nightly as the "mountain of light" of the Eastern fable. The indescribable grandeur of the spectacle attracts to Naples thousands of tourists from the most distant countries of Europe and America.

PROF. HUYSER worked hard in a Boston photographer's shop, and her health was not equal to the exertion; but she was the admired wife of Herbert A. Burton, and she looked forward hopefully to having a home of her own. He has a mine in Colombia, South America, and was soon to return for their marriage. But his dead body came instead. Nothing but a ring, left on it by her, she wrote, and killed herself on his grave.

ANTOINE WEBER'S wife went away from his Pittsburgh home and he could not learn where or why she had gone. The pair had lived happily and contentedly together, and the husband would not believe that she had willfully deserted him. Eight years passed without a word of the missing woman. Then his accidentally found her in an almshouse. She had been crazy most of the time, and on recovering her reason could not clearly remember who she was; but the sight of her husband restored her completely.

THE finances of Italy are in a deplorable condition. The treasury owes $300,000,000 to a bank syndicate, besides a number of other debts, and has to pay annually $174,000,000 for interest. Gold and silver are entirely lacking, and paper money is the only currency, at a discount of fifteen per cent. with not even a film picture of it having replaced by coin. Rothschild, of Paris, is the largest owner of the Peninsular kingdom, and, unless the Italians manage better, his firm may ultimately be its exclusive proprietor.

Bodinesville (ind.) Daily Sentinel:
A Fortunate Sufferer.

It is our misfortune that not every one who "backs his neighbor's paper," always escapes with his purse untouched. Sometimes when a man can give his indorsement and convey a benefit all around, he is "done up" as the saying is. Others suffered for years with Dyspepsia, and used all kinds of medicine to vain, until he tried the Hampden Bitters, which quickly cured him. We now warmly indorse this wonderful remedy.

TANNEN illustrates the value of the will power. A man who can look at the good things in a restaurant window and make himself believe that he has had a little too much, need never spend a cent to keep on good terms with his stomach.

[Chicago Tribune.]
A Greater Discovery than Electricity.
I have spent over two thousand dollars, said J. D. L. Harvey, Esq., of Chicago, to cure my wife of rheumatism. Two bottles of St. Jacobs Oil accomplished what all the medical treatment and other remedies failed to effect. I regard it as a greater discovery than electricity and a boon to the human race.

Good Advice.
The Daily Advertiser, St. Albans, Vermont, has the following: "We feel sure that if such of our friends as are sufferers from diseases of Kidneys and Liver would but use Warner's Safe Kidney and Liver Cure, they would be cured."

The aged and infirm are strengthened and faculties brightened by Malt Bitters.

The Greatest in the World
Without a question Buffalo, N. Y., can boast of the largest and most complete private sanitarium in the world. The Invalids' Hotel was founded by Dr. R. V. Pierce, who has represented his district as State Senator and in Congress, and is known throughout the United States as the originator of Dr. Pierce's Family Medicines, and who has also become widely celebrated in the treatment of chronic diseases. The creation of the magnificent home for invalids was made necessary by the large number of afflicted who flocked to Buffalo from all parts of the United States to consult Dr. Pierce and the eminent medical gentlemen associated with him as the faculty of this celebrated institution. The establishment is said to have cost nearly a half million of dollars, and is furnished with every appliance and facility for the cure of chronic ailments. A correspondingly large branch establishment is located in London, England. The whole concern is owned and organized by the World's Dispensary Medical Association, of which the original Dr. Pierce is President—his brother, an able and eminent medical gentleman taking part in the treatment of cases. In treating cases they are not at all confined to the narrow limits of prescribing the justly-celebrated remedies, Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, Pleasant Purgative Pellets, or any other set remedy known to the profession, but bend to the wide range of the Materia Medica, as well as to Turkish and other baths, to such instruments and other approved remedies and methods as may be required.

Local News.

THE Mackinac Sentinel has been removed to Point St. Ignace.

WE call attention to the advertisement of Mrs. Budd, in another column.

DR. LEWIS has just fitted up in good style a consultation room in the rear of the drug store of Lewis & Ackett.

MIKE MURPHY of South Arm, is in trouble about shooting an ox belonging to Horace Hipp, and selling the beef.

MISS EDWARDS of Manitowoc, Wis., has been engaged to teach the primary department of the Charlevoix school.

THE Mohawk Club, of Grand Rapids have located their summer quarters on South Arm, and will erect a Club House.

PROF. F. OSBUN, of the Michigan University, is to conduct the forthcoming Teachers' Institute in this village, assisted by Prof. C. F. R. Bellows, of Ypsilanti.

WE understand another paper is to be started at Boyne City, by Messrs. Budd & Garrison, and that the material is at Boyne Falls. We admire the boys' pluck.

THE Charlevoix Summer Resort have just purchased of Austin C. Newman the commencement of an acre of land adjoining their near the lagoon. Consideration $275.

A VERY pleasant party occurred at Lewis & Ackett's hall on Wednesday evening, in honor of the departure of Miss Carrie Hilton for Pontiac, where she goes to take a three years' course in the high school of that place.

SHARNEY DARBY, of Buffalo, formerly interested here, was a passenger Friday on the Idaho, bound for Manitou Island, where he has about a thousand acres of land. He ran across Hon. Geo. E. Nicholls, and secured his services to accompany him.

AT Advance, during a thunder storm on Friday last, William Hagan was severely shocked by lightning. After receiving the shock, he walked a short distance to the hotel, but soon afterward became unconscious, with partial paralysis and symptoms of approaching convulsions. Remedies were thoroughly applied, under the direction of Dr. Leach, of Charlevoix, who fortunately happened to be present. At last accounts, Mr. Hagan was sitting up in bed counting himself with a cigar, and apparently in a fair way for recovery.

TERRY.—Carlos H. Smith, of Elgin, Ill., and A. D. Brewington, of Louisville, Ky., took eighty tons fine trout from Burton's Creek, on Wednesday.

The Grand Traverse City Republicans will put in nomination a candidate for the Legislature at Petoskey September 16th—so says Banner Tidy.

There is a lot of political information for you.

NEW HOUSES.—N. A. Balch is building a new residence on the corner of Clinton and Grant streets.

James Stewart has commenced building a house on Mason street.

Geo. W. Bell is doing the same thing on the same street.

COMMON COUNCIL.—At the village council Saturday evening, the following bills were allowed:

John Nichols sidewalk inspector $17.62
Carpenter & Bartholomew repairs 8.62

Kasrey & Co., were granted permission to erect hay scales in front of their store building.

SAD OFF.—Melvin Thompson has sold his home and lot just above the upper cut to a Chicago gentleman, who will erect a summer residence thereon. Consideration $500.

Thos. Smith, of Marion, has sold his farm to A. C. Ryan for $2000. Mr. Smith only moves across the road however, to the old Smith homestead, where he is now engaged in building a residence.

THEIR NAMES.—We understand the French gentlemen who pulled the tongue out of the horse's mouth in Banks some time ago, are badly incensed at our correspondent at the exposure of their cruelty although no names were mentioned. We will give the names and take the responsibility. Their names are Yettan, and they deserve to be served with the same treatment meted to the poor dumb brute.

NEARING.—We spent a part of the day Friday at Norwood, enjoying the hospitality of our friend Beech, and prowling around his orchard and those of his neighbors. We inspected the model orchard of F. McIntyre, which is groaning under its weight of fruit, and also that of Wm. Harris. Plums, pears and apples of surpassing beauty and lusciousness abound, causing us to think many times of "old York State." Norwood and the region immediately around it is really one of the best and most advanced sections of our county.

We are requested to make the following announcement. Let them have plenty of respect, that their death may be as painless as possible:

To the voters of Charlevoix and vicinity:

Mr. H. D. Gerrell, of Northport, will address the citizens of Charlevoix and vicinity, at the school house in the village of Charlevoix, on Wednesday, the 1st day of September, A. D. 1880, at 8 o'clock p. m. on the political issues of the day. All who are in favor of a change of administration are invited to attend.

J. MILO EATON.

Personal.

H. S. Ballard was in town Friday.

W. S. Johnson made us a call Wednesday.

Hon. Geo. E. Steele of Elk Rapids was in town Friday.

Mrs. Henry T. Steele, Mrs. Henry T. Steele, Jr., and Miss Minnie Steele, all of Chicago, are guests of A. Buttars.

A. C. Brewington, of Louisville, Ky., is sojourning with us to escape hay fever. He will remain during September.

Marine.

The schooner Little Georgie lost her deck load of bark last trip out.

Capt. Eli Tulsue has leased the tug Pane of Northport, and has her doing harbor towing here.

The Captain of the schooner Arrow was knocked overboard and drowned in Lake Michigan on Thursday.

The following are the clearances from this port for the past week:

Aug. 23—Scow Boyne Belle, 100 cords bark, owner to Milwaukee.
Schr Ambassador, 44 cords wood, 30,000 feet lumber, transfer and John Nicholls to Milwaukee.
Aug. 24—Scow Forest, 118 cords wood, master to Chicago.
Schr Peerless Wave, 150 cords wood, Decker to Milwaukee.
Schr Little Georgie, 50 cords bark, Bauer to Chicago.
Schr Dead Shot, lights, Escanaba.
Aug. 26—Scow Dickinson, 120 cords bark, French to Escanaba.
Schr Wisconsin, 7,000 ties, Minock to Chicago.
Aug. 28—Schr Three Bells, 100 cords wood, Decker to Milwaukee.

Hancock Club.

To the Editor of the Sentinel:

Will you allow me through the columns of your paper to assure you that the statement made by the Emmet County Democrat last week, and characterized by you in the last issue of the SENTINEL as a lie, is correct in every particular. The Hancock club of the village of Charlevoix has not only about fifty members, but it has over fifty bona fide members, who are voters in this township at the coming election, November. I am prepared to wager either the cigars, or a house and lot on that question. Yours Truly,

J. MILO EATON
Pres. of Hancock Club.

We believe since we made the statement alluded to, the Hancock "Whipper-in" has waddled around and gathered in a few more Indians, and vagrants of the Dooney sort. But the quota is full, and the boom is on the other grade.

SUNDAY SCHOOL CONVENTION.

Proceedings of the Meeting Held Here Wednesday and Thursday Last.

The Convention met pursuant to call Wednesday evening, 8 p. m. Vice President A. R. Upright in the chair.

Opening Song—"All Hail the Power of Jesus' Name."

Prayer—By Rev. A. M. Pasmore.

Report of the Minutes held by President—Minutes of last year's meeting read by the secretary.

Address—By Rev. A. M. Pasmore—Work of the Sunday School—Its Importance, etc.

Song—"The Last Hymn," Miss Barnard and Miss Lizzie Allardt.

REORGANIZATION.

The following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Rev. A. M. Pasmore.
Vice President—Wm. Barnard.
Secretary—Geo. S. McLennan.
Treasurer—Mrs. H. L. Leach.

Adjourned by singing, and the benediction pronounced by Rev. Mr. Bennett, of Jonesville.

THURSDAY, AUG. 26.

Convention met pursuant to adjournment, President A. M. Pasmore presiding. Devotional meeting conducted by Rev. James Inwood.

Singing—"The Time I've Lived in Egypt."
Prayer—By Leach.
Reports—All read and approved.

On motion, a committee was appointed consisting of Rev. A. M. Pasmore, Mrs. E. H. Green and Mrs. R. Bird to determine and fix the time and place for the next meeting.

The following programme was then presented, and the essays, etc., offered were of rare excellence:

Essay—"Sunday School Work and Workers," by H. L. Leach.
Address—"Forty Years in the Sunday School," Rev. James Inwood.
Essay—"Hebrew Piety," Miss Rena Wilson, Kalkaska.
Address—"The Relation of the Church to the Sunday School," Rev. A. M. Pasmore.
Essay—"The Best Way to Reach Parents with the Truths of Christianity," Mrs. E. Brooks, Kalkaska.

The committee on time and place of next meeting reported that the next meeting of the convention be held at Charlevoix on the second Wednesday and Thursday of June 1881. On motion the report was adopted.

Mr. Barnard and Miss Ainslie favored the convention with a duet entitled, "Hope Beyond."

All the exercises were deeply interesting and instructive, and those who failed to be present, missed a choice entertainment.

Doxology sung and Benediction pronounced. Adjourned.

WM. E. MCLENNAN, Sec'y.

Hastings From Hayes.

ST. GOO'S.

Lou Scott, John Fish, and Wm. McNally are the jurors from Hayes.

Mr. Gear of Marion Township was the guest of Mose Cooper last Sabbath.

A son of Peter Skibbenrolt was buried in the Greenskye cemetery last Thursday.

Several of our Indian population have gone to enjoy the camp meeting at Northport.

Turn out to the Garfield and Arthur club, meeting at Lakeview Saturday Sept. 4th, at 7 o'clock p. m. sharp.

Charlie Arnold was accidentally thrown from his horse last Wednesday near Moses Cooper's residence, and had his right arm broken. Dr. Lewis promptly set the fractured limb.

G. O. Scott has a fine flock of sheep. As quick as the farmers can make arrangements to do so they will find the raising of sheep one amongst the most profitable of industries.

Our Garfield and Arthur club is booming with A. R. Struthers, Pres., E. H. Burgess Sec'y., G. O. Scott, Treas., Moses Cooper, Chas. Whitford, Josiah Gibson, Lew M. Burgess and A. W. Chew Ex. Com. Now then let every lover of his country step boldly to the front, join our hosts, and go on to victory.

Some candidate for the penitentiary, the other day stoned the front window out of W. B. Sayre's roadhouse who is away from home clerking in the Cushman House, Petoskey. If some boys cannot find anything else to do, besides destroying property, they ought to be chained to a tree in the woods to grin chipmunks to death.

We think it a mistaken notion with a great many persons that they have to work too hard through the week to attend the Sabbath School or the preaching of God's word that may occur in their vicinity on the Sabbath. Their attendance would certainly benefit themselves; it would give a great impetus to the minister of the Gospel who often has to work hard through the week besides preparing his sermons; and it would be of great aid to the Sabbath School. Try it, friends, a change will come over the tenor of your dreams.

Trials of a Tramp—The Effect of Dr. Tanner's Experiment.

DETECTIVE Ice appeared at the back door—it was on Engoman street—and mournfully told his pitiful tale, and, with a deep-drawn sigh, seated himself at the kitchen table to attack a breakfast set before him by the sympathetic cook. Silently, but dexterously, he stowed away ten cold ham and fried potatoes, while his employer regarded him with wondering compassion and kept an eye upon the spoons.

Yet he was devoted he strictly to business, and then, as he pawed out his fourth cup of coffee, under the influence of the genial days, the regenerated tramp seemed disposed to be sociable, and in reply to an intimation that he was evidently an disciple of Dr. Tanner, broke into voluble speech.

"No, marm," he said, "I take no stock in that old humbug. Dr. Tanner has done unutterable injury to the cause of humanity, and poor fellows like me that it mighty hard scratching to make a living since he has undertook to prove that people can live on air and water."

"How is that?" asked the cook, as she cleared away his table.

"Well, marm," said the tramp, giving his chair a hitch back and stretching his legs out comfortably, "I'll tell you how it is. Before this fasting experiment was commenced folks were inclined to take pity on a feller who he said he was hungry, and mighty few would turn him away without givin' him something. Now it's a-most, marm. Why, you gets the door slammed in your face at most places, and even those who are liberal disposed have become perverted."

"Perverted! How?"

"Fur instance, marm, there is one lorestone susceptible young lady who answers my plaintive appeals by drawing hividjals contemptuous; she tells me to 'look at that poor Dr. Tanner,' and advises me to live on my fat awhile for the benefit of science."

"Well, I declare," remarked cook.

"Yes, marm. Another lady, when I informs her in my feeblest tones that I hain't eaten a morsel for two days and a half, encourages me to 'persevere in the good cause,' and to call 'round when I have completed the other thirty-seven and a half days—then she purposes presenting me with a watermelon."

"Land sakes!"

"Yes, marm. One old man, to whom I presented myself in the character of a played-out school teacher from the country, asked his advice and aid in procuring employment suited to my abilities, told me to blow a leak and go into the starvation business."

"Gracious goodness!" uttered the cook, giving a broom to sweep out the kitchen.

"Yes, marm," said the stunned tramp, as he rose hastily, glancing at the broom, "for everybody ain't as soft as you—as soft-hearted as you are, marm."

And he vanished.—St. Louis Chronicle.

Shops In a Chinese Provincial City.

LANCHOW-FOO is the residence of the Viceroy of Kansuh and Shensee. Our residence was situated in a lane leading off the main street. Taking three soldiers as an escort we strolled into the busy thoroughfare. The shops of course will not bear comparison with those of a Southern city. Foreign goods were rarely to be seen. Here were carpets made from camel's wool; Kansuh tobacco, Russian cloth of bright colors. Woolens of English make were not sought after, but those Russian cloths are popular among the Mongol traders, who come to Lanchow with their sheep and wool for sale. They are no match for the wily Chinese, who bags a dozen a bargain till the poor Mongols gets tired, and receives probably a third of the value of his goods. Cotton goods were principally confined to native manufactures, but we saw in some of the shops American and English drills and highly elaborate flowered chintz. The silk shown was of the produce of the looms of Soochow and Nanking, just with the exception of the mandarin, who are purchasers of the fabrics, the trade is small, owing to the poverty of the people. The display of animal goods consisted of mutton and beef in large quantities, as the people do not eat pork. The tobacco from Kansuh is renowned all over China for its peculiar pleasant flavor. Its preparation is carried on in small shops. The universal sign in every Chinese store, "No two prices," stands the ever on every hand, but it is only a myth. You ask the price of the best watermelon. The simpleton blandly says: "Your foreign excellency, this pipe is to be sold for five hoang of silver" ($2.50.) You reply, "It is too dear; will give you two and a half hoang." "Could not sell it for that price; look at it, the white copper alone cost that amount." We insisted to leave the shop, whereupon our man cries out, "Four hoang," to which we take no notice. Finally, after shouting "Three and a half," "Three," he gets us back again to the counter, when we offer him "two hoang." He gazes in blank astonishment and says, "You must be indulging in idle talk," but after much fuss, finding which he attempts to substitute another pipe for the one selected, we pay him the silver and depart. As we are leaving he remarks to his companions, "Those foreigners are gaining knowledge of trade; they will soon know how to drive a bargain."—Cor. San Francisco Chronicle.

The Fun of Shark Fishing.

I WISH you had been here a few days ago and gone out "sharking" with us, says a correspondent of the Springfield (Mass.) Republican. Right went in a whale's tail, and caught nine in about two hours. We have great iron hooks covered with small fish, eight feet of chain are attached to the hook, and then sixty feet of rope strong enough to hold a horse. We tie the fish and fix the bottom and wait in tranquility for a bite. By and by there is a gentle tug at the hook, or a "sensation" as some of our party called it—easy—slow—you are not quite certain whether he is there—you hold your breath—whisper to your companions, "Hush—I've got one." The shark starts off with the bait, you let him run about a yard, then with one mighty jerk fasten the hook in his mouth, and haul in. That is where the fun begins. If you ever travel on a farm, tried to lead a cow in the road that was bound she wouldn't go that is nothing, and then bound to go both sides of the road at once, then to go backward, and then to climb trees—you can imagine what it is to haul in a shark. You yell all the time, you must yell; you can't help it. You feel that if you don't yell you won't get the shark. Your companions begin to yell. Hand over hand you haul in the line. Your stop yelling for a minute, and inch by inch the shark takes the line out, he brings your hands and draws it to the gunwale. He is mad, brace your feet—give another yell! The crew help you pull—they yell—they speak encouraging words to you. You pull and yell, and pant and howl, and strain hand over hand while the crew howl, "Haul away to him!" While grinding knuckles against the gunwales, but you still haul and yell. Just when you feel as if you couldn't pull another pound, his great ugly head comes in sight. Then you give a big yell, and right in the midst of it the shark gives a bounce and pours a bucket of salt water into your face and breast. You grab the chain with both hands, lift his head clean out of the water, and then the brute plays he is an auger and turns himself over and over. You think, at the rate of forty times a minute. Then you yell, in right down earnest, "Pull him! hi him! hi him!" Meantime the crew are not idle. Armed with clubs three feet long they pound first his nose (his brains lie in his nose), then the gunwale, then the chain within four inches of your hand, then his nose again. The shark stops dodging for a moment—a few more welts on his nose and he is a "dealer." We get him aboard with hooks and levers. Then you sit down and try to draw a long breath—perhaps you will, but I didn't. I considered one was enough for me, and in the future I would help yell. In the evening I went to teacher's meeting, where the question came up of the divine care of animals. I asked if it was right to take the life of an animal just for the pleasure of it, and it was voted "No."

"Hollering" is a Big Help.

THEY were holding an out-door ward meeting the other night, and a speaker had just commenced to warm up to his work, when a stranger with all his worldly "duds" in an old sheep-skin on his back, boots gone, hat going and a dyed-in-the-wool tramp air about him, halted on the outskirts of the crowd. The speech soon caught him, and he began to applaud. At the end of every sentence he stopped his hands, and roared like a fog-horn. No matter whether the speaker "hit 'em" or not, the stranger never failed to come down with the applause, and he carried a good share of the crowd with him. After the speaker had finished, and while he was wiping his heated brow, the tramp approached him and said:

"That are speech was one of the best I ever heard in all my life."

"Ah? I'm glad it pleased you."

"Pleased me? Why, it lifted me right off'n my feet. I tell you, you're a born orator, and I just wish I could stay in this town and hear you make a speech every night."

"Yes, I wish you could."

"But I can't. I am on my way West. I shall, however, think of your speech a hundred times a day. I can feel the electricity of it yet, and—say, can't you lend me half a dollar to help me on?"

"Why, I don't know you. Why should I lend you half a dollar?"

"Oh, come now—don't try to ride any high horse over me. You know how loud I hollered, and you know as well as I do that if I hadn't put in my best licks you'd have fallen as flat as a shingle. You are a great orator, sir, and that was a great speech, but if you don't know that hollering is what does the business, you'd better hang right up."

The orator pondered over the matter for a few seconds, and then probably concluded that the reasoning was sound, as he passed over the money.—Detroit Free Press.

HAVE you managed your dog? We have not. Nor do we look for it. That dog is happier as he is. With his jaws loose he can catch fifty flies a day and gnaw his bones in comfort. Besides, he's better able to take care of mild-night callers without a strap over his nose. Don't you sense feeling around our place at unreasonable hours? Under the impression that our dog is muzzled.—N. Y. Graphic.

Our Young Readers.

OUR YEAR.

JANUARY so cloud and sleet,
With icy breath and snow and sting
Our cottage snugness! then leaves his throne
For airs and odors than his own—
Who sings so to a tender child.

Then February lathes with her
No matter airs, or frequent showers;
But blinks to sniff, that thro' the trees,
Their ruddy kiss, and sweet caress,
The summer wooes from unused closures.

But March winds now are whistling loud,
And roaring by their noisy their trees
Of chills air and frost work fine,
Of our pastures, robin Father Time,
With magic wand, will soon efface.

Next come the gentle April showers,
Which clothe the fields in garbs of green,
While to the sun low, flowers bright
Spring up from darkness into light,
And are raised in their brightest bloom.

But April soon gives way to May,
Wild comes with many graceful trend,
And various cloth buds and blossoms rare,
With balmy odor both bright and true,
And sunny sates always her bend.

And May to June, with roses crowned,
Its fragrance and its beauty brings,
The leafy trees, its summer birds,
Whose melodies are ever heard,
From every deep, sequestered nook.

July brings down upon us all,
With kindly smiles and cheerful look,
Her blazing sun, and sultry days,
And skies of hue with heavy haze,
We lowering endure or brave.

But August now bids July haste,
And leave for her the sultry sun,
That sinks in declining power's end
Their petals bright, of red and gold—
And tints the forest with its hue.

The month of harvest then is come!
September, with her golden glow
Of sunshine, mellowing words to ripe,
To grateful warmths to cool round her head,
And fosils garlands for her brow.

October's sun now floods the sky,
With streaks of red, both rich and light;
Its warmth is fading away,
Like man's fleet winged and sinless day,
To golden tints changed in its night.

November's sun has ceased to shine
And frosts the sky with extreme bright,
No smiles, dreary queen, has come,
To gather her laved harvest home,
And wield her sceptre, now, with might.

December, saddest queen of all,
Your time of reign has come!
But soon in death your sons will close,
And you will gather over's repose,
While signal forms will bear you home.

—Lillie Hunt, in Wide Awake.

THE "DARNING-NEEDLE."

THE darning-needle has the wise family name of Libella, and in plain English of which is dragon-fly. It doesn't object to either of these names, or even to the common name of darning-needle, if you only don't associate it with anything stiff or blind. It is really no clumsy affair. There is a stiff joint in its body, and as for sewing things, why, bless your eyes! It is a perfect marvel. Yet some people anything more wonderful. It would take your bright-eyed, smart little dummy six hours—that is, if a fairies' purse as ever spent in his life—just to count the eyes of the dragon-fly. Twenty-four thousand eyes! Just think of a little chap with twelve thousand eyes to your one. He can look to the right and to the left, down and up, backward and forward, toward all points of the compass at the same instant of time. Who can't see all that he sees? Wouldn't you like to borrow his eyes for about ten minutes?

The dragon-fly is not only marvelous on account of its vast number of eyes, but it is curious in many ways. There are about two hundred known species, some of which are very beautiful. The largest and most brilliant kinds are found on the Amazon River. "Some of them," says a traveler, "with green or crimson bodies seven inches long, and their elegant, lace-like wings tipped with white or yellow."

The dragon-fly is the most ferocious of all insects, and he has for this reason been called the "devil's darning-needle," but it is better to drop the big objective and not call hard names. Yet he is truly the greatest cannibal of the insect world. He dines with keenest relish upon his many cousins, has a special appetite for tender young mosquitoes, and does not hesitate to devour the prettiest, loveliest butterfly or any of the family relatives that he is able to catch.

All the little fellows are afraid of him, but it is useless to try to escape him. Even the swift mosquito, with its three thousand vibrations of the wing a minute, cannot outfly this terrible, swift dragon.

He takes his meals while on the wing a whole insect at one swallow—and you can hardly guess how many victims he serves in for a good "square meal." Quite a little swarm is needed for his dinner, and he is always ready to make way with all the neighboring gnats that he finds for lunch between meals.

The dragon-fly knows all the ways of the world. He can dart backward just as well as forward, and fly sideways just as well as any other way, and so there is no chance for any kind of his way. When he once goes for his victim, it is all over with it.

Naturalists have been greatly interested in this insect, and have studied its habits closely from its babyhood up. Mrs. Dragon is a firm believer in the use of plenty of water in bringing up her babies, so all her little ones begin life in an aquatic nursery. From the loaf of a water-plant, in which they are at first cuddled up, they come out with wriggling, grisly little bodies, having six sprawling legs. They find themselves all alone in the world. Their mother has gone and left them, and they have no one to provide them with their "bread and dinner." They must sit themselves and "grub" for a living. But they have such a stupid, bobble-head look, that no one would think they knew enough to take care of themselves. On their head is something that looks like a hood, and this is drawn over their faces as though they were ashamed.

But this hood is only their natural head-dress. These little water-nymphs don't really wear their hoods for bonnets to keep them from taking cold, but they are really masks, and very curious ones, too. This mask is made of hinges, slides and hooks, and it is their trap to get a living. When they see something which they would relish for dinner, the hinges swing open, the slides shove out, and the hooks clasp in, and in one flash of time their prey is secured. And that is the way these dumpish-looking little chaps "go a-fishing." You surely would never call them dull fellows if you should once see the lively way they serve up refreshments. Quicker than we can tell it, they pack their lunch baskets from capsized gnat and mosquito-boats, and they overtake the swift little culprits and serve them up in "smacking good" meat-pies.

Perhaps you would like to know how they make these nice pies so fast? Neither time nor pastries of any kind are used in shaping them, but by help them handle it when caught. But to get about they have a way of their own, and, a few years ago, a British war vessel was built to go by a method like theirs.

You may have read that Benjamin Franklin once had an idea that a boat could be made with a pump in the stern, by which water could be drawn in and pumped out with such force as to propel the boat along. But the inventor, Franklin, although he could coax lightning from the clouds and make it obey him, had to give up the idea of pumping boats ahead. And here is just where this little grub beats the great philosopher, in the form of a hollow tube which he has in his mouth he uses strange dog. The two compartments to enact at each other, and Watch closed his teeth sharply into the piece of shingle that he broke it in two and lost one piece and key. When we got to the little-house he came up and had only the piece in his mouth. "Watch," said I, "this won't unlock the door; where is the key?" Watch looked up, and when the words were repeated and the door shaken, to show that it could not be opened, he started off. In a short time he returned with the other piece of the shingle. He was again shown the two pieces, put together this time, and made to understand that the key was yet missing. It was getting late and we followed him. He stood a moment, as if reflecting where he was at the time he met the dog, and scenting up his tracks, found the key and brought it to us dangling from the string between his teeth. It seems by this that he certainly understood what we said to him about the lost key.

TOOTHACHE.—To cure toothache, take of chloroform, spirits of camphor, laudanum, of each one drachm. Apply on a little cotton wool.

SOUTHERN FRIED HOMINY.—Warm some boiled hominy left over from the day before; add to it a tumpful of cream or rich milk, a piece of butter, two well beaten eggs and a little flour; fry in hot butter.

THE New York Spirit of the Times says there is no cure for a second-hand wind gall. Blistering and rest would, no doubt, reduce the size of the wind gall temporarily; but a long journey or a few fast drives invariably bring them back again as large as ever.

PRESERVING SAUSES.—In Germany sauces are admirably preserved by steeping them in a solution of tannin for twenty-four hours and instantly drying them; two pounds of tan is allowed to steep in twelve quarts of boiling water for one hour, and is then filtered.

A CORRESPONDENT of the Massachusetts Ploughman gives the following remedy for disked cows: Put a pint of milk, half a pint of soft soap simmered together. Give the cow half the quantity. Hold the other in your hand and rub and pumped out with such force as to propel the boat along. But the inventor, Franklin, although he could coax lightning from the clouds and make it obey him, had to give up the idea of pumping boats ahead. A New Kink in Scotch Law.

On Sunday an extraordinary scene took place in Irvine Parish Church. During the singing of a hymn, previous to the commencement of the sermon, an elderly man of singular appearance entered the church and attracted general notice by his strange demeanor. Clutching by the middle an old umbrella, he walked with a determined aspect up the area of the church, climbing suddenly that he intended bestowing the minister's seat. This pew, which is situated well to the front in the area of the church, was completely filled, but nevertheless he crushed himself into it, compelling one of the occupants to seek another seat. Having hustled himself into this position, he waited patiently until the conclusion of the hymn, but no sooner had the minister risen to announce his text than the man arose and, taking from his pocket a paper, he addressed the minister by name and commenced to read a long statement purporting to be an interdict forbidding certain lawyers and others in Irvine from proceeding with the sale of certain property. The document occupied about fifty minutes in reading, and minutely described the situation of the property down to the square yards it measured; but as he apparently did not consider the statement sufficiently explanatory, he took an extremely long bankruptcy from his pocket and began a practical demonstration of the measurement. When the man had finished, the minister quietly asked some of the office-bearers to remove him, which was accordingly done without any disturbance taking place. He later on in the day, and while they were threatened to be dispossessed by legal action. This police interdict conveyed him home.—Edinburgh Scotsman.

IS HE BRUTAL AND PROFANE?

From the Ex Rapids Pioneer Magnet.

Many regular army officers were harsh and brutal in the men of their commands during the war, and now it seems that the "regular" Hancock is charged by some of his soldiers with being a man of that stamp. Give a man a little brief authority over his fellow men, and if he has any of the tyrant in his make-up, it will soon come to the surface. When Hancock was nominated, the people knew but little of his character. It is just that the voters of the country should be made acquainted with a candidate's peculiar characteristics before being asked to vote for him for the highest office in the gift of the people. Close on the heels of his nomination, soldiers of his command in considerable numbers came forward and testified emphatically against the good name of Hancock as an officer. People were slow to accept such testimony as true, but statements of this kind have multiplied, and are so specific that it is time to inquire as to whether their charges of profanity and brutality are true or false. A man who is a tyrant at heart is not fit to be President of a free people.

The latest charge to this effect comes from Charles Laeppler, of Lancaster, Wisconsin, whom the Herald says has lived there 27 years, and borne the highest character. He says Gen. Hancock "rarely addressed a volunteer officer without profanity, and treated them with extreme brutality. He appeared to have not as much feeling for the men as he ought to have had for a beast." Mr. Laeppler charges that Aug. 15, 1862, Gen. Hancock wantonly deprived the soldiers of his command of water. After a march of 20 miles, undergoing the most excruciating thirst, the command halted near Yorktown, and his staff, on horseback, made their appearance in front of the 5th Wisconsin infantry. The men began calling "water, water!" Hancock rode up to the officer commanding the first platoon, which happened to be Mr. Laeppler. He following is the Lieutenant's statement of what then occurred: "What is your name, sir?" Hancock demanded. I gave the name. "A fine time this to call water when the commanding General rides in review. I demand the names of the parties so that I can punish them," bawled the General. I answered: "Our canteens are empty. I do, General, in front of my men, it is impossible for me to desert to the enemy." He then went to the officer next in command, the 2d platoon, Fourth Lieutenant, and the same rule was repeated. Then, at last, the General, Pil punish the d—d regiment!" And he went to Lieut. Col. Emery, of Portage, who was in command of the regiment, and ordered him to put his men through a battalion drill on the double quick for one hour. And this punishment—going on the run for one hour—after one day of fatigue, and hot, and parched, as we were compelled to undergo. This is the sort of a man or brute Hancock is, and I think every volunteer soldier under him at that time will attest these facts."

A member of the 4th Ohio Infantry, now residing in Washington, makes a statement in corroboration of that already published in regard to the shameful language used by Gen. Hancock toward the soldiers of that regiment near Warrenton, Va., while they were standing upon the bank of a steam waiting for a pontoon train. The statement of this soldier has been published in the National Republican as follows:

WASHINGTON, August 12.—Editor of the Republican: In your paper of yesterday you spoke of Gen. Hancock as saying to a Vermont brigade: "Now, gentlemen, give the rascals the bayonet. Charge." Well, perhaps he did, but that was not just his style. The Fourth Ohio have a very different story to tell. It is this: "That while on the march, the Fourth having the advance, they came to a stream, swollen by late rains, and having a pontoon train in the rear, they did not take to the water, but waited to go over dry-shod. While so waiting, up dashed General Hancock, and demanded "You G—d—d sons of b——s, why don't you go into the water? What in h—l are you waiting for? In regard to the letter of Captain John P. McGinn, charging cruelty upon Gen. Hancock in depriving the men in the valley in the early spring of 1865 of overcoats and other articles of heavy clothing, it is fully sustained by the official orders issued from Gen. Hancock's headquarters at that time, and it is likely that full particulars of these matters will soon be available.

"This morning we started early. The day has been intensely hot, the dust almost insufferable. Gen. Hancock was in charge of the brigade. We had made a rapid march of about ten miles. The men were fatigued, hungry and thirsty. In many instances, two or the leaving to depend on one canteen, it was soon emptied; and when we stopped to rest after the ten mile march, were in sight of a large spring of beautiful water. But the General ordered that not a man should leave the ranks to fill his canteen. It was hard to bear, but the men submitted in patience till they saw the soldiers from other brigades passing from the spring with their canteens filled. This was too much, and they began crying out, Water, water. Immediately the General dashed among them, proclaiming 'Mutiny,' and demanded the offenders. Of course, no one could tell who they were. He then turned on the regimental and company officers, 'Send them to hell,' and spent some time in executing the orders in the same comfortable quarters. After he had got them all lashed for that kingdom, he told them their officers were not worth a d—d, and having exhausted his vocabulary of gentlemanly expletives, calculated to encourage subordination, he called the men in line and put them through the evolutions of a brigade drill for about half an hour, and thus they were reined to regain the march. These men—this remnant of a fine army who had been dragged through the putrid swamps of the Chickahominy till they were more like ghosts than men—were thus reated, thus drilled thus marched, thus abused."

James M. Ogilby, register of deeds, and Wm. Jacques, county surveyor, both of Big Rapids, say they were well acquainted with the late Dr. Castleman, and know him to be to be known as eminent in his profession that he was for many years president of the Wisconsin Medical society, and that his reputation for truth and veracity was equal to any man in the State. There are certain soldiers in Big Rapids who state that Hancock could outswear any man in the army, either regular or volunteer, which goes to corroborate the preceding charges of infamously treating the men in his command.

GARFIELD'S QUALIFICATIONS CONTRASTED WITH HANCOCK'S.

From the Detroit Post and Tribune.

Here are questions that people will ask:

What are the qualifications and disqualifications of the candidates for the presidency?

What are Gen. Hancock's qualifications?

He was a gallant Union soldier.

What are Gen. Hancock's disqualifications?

He was educated specially as a soldier.

He has never mingled with the people.

He has had no experience of the struggles of the people.

He has had no experience of the necessities of the people.

His time has been spent in the narrow circle of military routine.

His acquaintances and friendships are largely confined to the regular army.

He has no opinions on the tariff.

He has no opinions on finance.

He has no knowledge of the wants of commerce.

He opposed the reconstruction policy of congress.

He was a willing instrument in the hands of Andrew Johnson.

He resurrected the buried logs of rebels in New Orleans.

He favored the election of Horatio Seymour to the presidency in 1868.

He indorsed Frank Blair's revolutionary Rosebud letter.

He favored wiping out the reconstruction laws with the bayonet.

He was a Democrat, when the Democrats opposed the 14th and 15th amendments.

He was a Democrat when the Democratic party would have destroyed the national credit.

He was a Democrat, when the Democratic party favored the repeal of the resumption act.

He is supported by Hampton, Beauregard, Chalmers and Jeff. Davis.

He is supported by every unreconstructed rebel.

He is supported by every man in the south who curses the national government, derides its flag and defies its authority.

He is supported by every "ku klux" and "white liner."

He is supported by every "ku klux" and "white liner."

He is supported by every murderer and beater of negroes and stuffer of ballot boxes in the south.

He is silent about the recent frauds and crimes through which the Democrats carried Alabama by 90,000 majority.

He is a Democrat.

What are the qualifications of Gen. James A. Garfield?

He was a gallant Union soldier.

He is a man of the people.

He is linked to the people by bonds of common hardships, struggles, trials, and triumphs.

He is a trained scholar.

He is possessed of a sympathetic nature.

He is familiar with the wants of every industry, and of every class of the people.

He has had 17 years' experience in civil administration.

He is unselfish.

He is courageous.

He is incorruptibly honest.

He never faltered in his devotion to freedom.

He never faltered in his resistance to oppression.

He is sound on the tariff.

He is sound on the currency.

He believes in honest government, an honest payment of debts, and honest money.

He is a born leader of the people.

His friendships are among the purest and most Republicans in the country.

His career as chairman of the appropriations committee of the house of representatives is a guarantee that his administration will be economical.

His financial record is a guarantee that the country will reap the full benefits of the present prosperity.

His character is a pledge that his cabinet and appointments will be selected from the ablest, purest, and best Republicans in the land.

He is a brilliant orator.

He is a broad and enlightened statesman.

He will be supported by nine-tenths of the men who fought to preserve the Union.

He will be supported by ninety-nine hundredths of the survivors of southern prison pens.

He is a Republican.

What are Gen. Garfield's disqualifications?

NONE!

Gen. Hancock has one qualification and many disqualifications. Gen. Garfield has numberless qualifications and not one disqualification. This is the difference between the two candidates.

LEGAL NOTICES.

ORDER OF PUBLICATION.

Seventh Judicial Circuit. In Chancery. Emma Gray, Complainant, vs. John Gray, Defendant. Divorce.

At a session of said court, held at the court house in the village of St. James, in the county of Manitou, on the eleventh day of August, A. D. 1880. Present, Hon. Jerome Churchill, Circuit Judge.

In this cause, it satisfactorily appearing from affidavit on file that the defendant, John Gray, is a non-resident of this State, but is a resident of the state of Wisconsin, the residence of Edward H. Gates, Complainant's solicitor, it is ordered that said non-resident defendant, John Gray, do appear and cause his appearance to be entered herein within three months from the date of this order, and in case of his appearance he cause his answer to the bill of complaint to be filed and a copy thereof to be served on the complainant's solicitor within twenty days after service on him of said bill and notice of this order, and in default thereof said bill be taken as confessed by said non-resident defendant.

And it is further ordered that within twenty days the complainant cause a notice of this order to be published in the Charlevoix Sentinel, a newspaper printed and circulated in Charlevoix, said county, for six successive weeks, or that she cause a copy of this order to be personally served on said non-resident defendant at least twenty days before the time above prescribed for his appearance.

H. SWORTS, Circuit Judge.

H. H. GREEN, Complainant's Solicitor.

I hereby certify that the above is a true and correct copy of an original order of publication on file in this office. Dated August 11, 1880.

Attest: JAMES DUNCAN, Register.
